Distress From Upset Stomach

ALSO MISERY FROM INDIGESTION VANISHES FIVE MINUTES LATER.

Take your sour stomach—or maybe you call it Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your stomach misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring: the Digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness, and many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle, and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation or undigested food.

Prove to yourself, after your next meal, that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapepsin.

Mme. Modjeska Pleased

Little Incident in Life of the Celebrated Actress Illustrates Her Kindness of Heart.

Mme. Helena Modjeska, the famous actress, never for an instant lapses into Modjeska, the woman, when an opinion, however small, is asked of her. Polish tragedienne did a bit of impromptu acting which won for her an outburst of admiration that was certainly genuine, if not widespread.

It was at an afternoon tea in the spacious studio of a popular New York portrait painter, a man known far and wide for his admirable portrayals on canvas of the dames and damsels of the so called "smart set" of the metropolis. Mme. Modjeska was the guest of honor. In the center of the room on a low easel stood a full length portrait of her, just completed. That was one of the excuses for the fashionable gathering.

"A superb piece of brush work," said some one from behind a critical lorgnette. "but, bless me, it is not the least bit like madame. It is good enough but dead character drawing." The comment did not escape the hearing of the actress.

"That is indeed very true," exclaimed the modern Rachel, turning toward the critic. "See, I will stand so, beside the painting. Now you may compare us. In nothing are we alike, yet co pas? We are strangers. But do not blame the painter. It is my fault. I will prove it."

She stepped closer to the painted counterfeit and, falling into the same pose, allowed her clear cut features to assume the same tragic expression depicted on the canvas. The effect was magical. Both pictures were identical—the living and the artificial Modjeska were each a reflection of the other. It was a revelation of the actress' consummate art.—Success Magazine.

Builder of New Airship Tells How German Experts Helped Supplied Very Conditions Needed in Calculating Effects of Atmospheric Currents.

Airship constructors and experimenters all over the world have been awaiting just such an accident as occurred recently to the huge dirigible of Count Ferdinand Zeppelin when his machine became unmanageable and ran away with the navigator and twenty other men it carried. Every man engaged in the study of aeronautics was at a loss to know the effects of erratic air currents on airships in comparison with similar waves or currents upon ocean going vessels.

In view of these facts Mr. Lewis Nixon, the shipbuilder, was called upon for his resultant opinion following the wild career of Count Zeppelin's monster balloon. Mr. Nixon is at present devoting his energies to the construction of what will be the largest airship thus far built and was intensely interested in the reports of the accident in Germany. After reading the final bulletin announcing the descent of the Zeppelin airship he said:

"To those who are following airship development there has occurred no event so interesting or instructive as the results of Count Zeppelin's voyage. The general results of a voyage of hundreds of miles could be forecasted with some accuracy, but it is in connection with calculations for structural strength that the keenest interest will be inspired. I have for the last two months been calculating strains and stresses on a 700 foot structure and making assumptions with such judgment as I could bring to bear to cover behavior and strength in storm eddies.

"It is, of course, known to those conversant with mechanical matters that we make calculations of strength for vessels, basing such calculations upon assumed positions of the vessel among the waves that is, when the trough of the waves occurs at the middle length and the crests are at the ends and when the crest is midships and the hollows are at the ends. In one case supporting the vessel at the ends and causing the midship part to need to sag. In the other causing the ends to drop. We have in connection with such calculations a vast number of ships in which certain margins of strength have been found duly sufficient to insure safety at sea when against the [illegible] Lynch, [illegible] with Archer Harman [illegible] estate, at his residence, [illegible] L. Harley, at the village of Andover, N. Y., on or before the 10th day of August, 1909

Count Ferdinand Zeppelin and Count Moppelin place before us on a grand scale the very conditions needed in our calculations, and this great structure subjected to the eddyings of air in a very severe storm has shown again the triumph of man's mind over the elements. It marks a distinct advance in airship building, replacing conjecture and estimate by confidence.

"Of course with steel vessels great improvements have been made in structure, and that such will be the case with airships we feel sure, but the recent great event fixes the trussed structure of Zeppelin as a dependable one, and from now on the term 'airship' is to be no longer a figure of speech, but an actuality. That such structures can with safety defy the elements being now proved, we shall find the problem of propellers, their position, size and shape engaging much attention.

"Destroyers in England have had as many as thirty sets of propellers tried before developing the necessary speed, and, most exhaustive experiments in experimental tanks and on full size vessels have been made and many volumes have been written on the subject. The airship propellers so far used are of the crudest, so that vast improvement may be expected.

"When one realizes that already airships larger than ocean going ships of forty years ago are built and that their speeds are far in excess of speeds now attained on the water the rapidity of development may be appreciated.

"To obtain great lifting power very large ships must be used. The Zeppelin that was burned was 446 feet long by 42½ feet beam and had a net lifting power of 32,000 pounds. To carry crew men and fuel and provisions for crossing the ocean at a high speed a vessel 700 feet by 78 feet is required.

"I confidently look to vessels over half a mile in length in the near future, the performance of the latest Zeppelin ship confirming me in such belief. A very great gain in strength will be obtained by covering the structure with thin metal plates and by combining the present dirigible and helicopter and utilizing also the aeroplane.

"In the event of war between England and Germany dirigibles will be built in great numbers."—New York Herald.

Big Floating Island.

Novel Feature of Champlain Tercentenary—Real Indians to Take Part.

A feature of the celebration of the three hundredth anniversary of the discovery of Lake Champlain, to which the entire week of July 4 is to be given up, will be an island, made to order, built on barges and having real trees, rocks, grass, a stockade and Indian wigwams, to be used by a party of nearly 200 Indians from upper Canada, says an Albany dispatch.

The Indians will take part in a sham battle, planned to represent with historical accuracy one of the conflicts between the forces of Champlain and the Iroquois. The Indians, in canoes, will come down the lake and land on broad "beaches" made of wooden wings hinged to the sides of the island. The pageant of Hiawatha, which the Indians will also present, is taken from their own legend, differing in some respects from that of Longfellow.

The island will be towed alongshore for celebrations at various points.
