Lincoln's Birthday

WASHINGTON taught the world to know us. Lincoln taught us to know ourselves. The first won for us our independence. The second brought out our manhood and self respect. Let us give to each the glory due him.

February 12 is the birthday anniversary of Lincoln. And he fills the stage, growing from humblest birth to highest place, to martyred death and world wide fame. So will he go on growing, thru all of the centuries that are to come, as an inspiration and a hope for all mankind.

That is, if we keep the Lincoln as he was—if we stand faithful at the sepulcher of this crucified one and see that no false spirit issues forth in his stead. In the adulation that is being given Lincoln in these later days there is danger of his being taken from us as the human man that he was and deified into the unknowable.

Thus has the world been robbed of the real Achilles, the real Caesar, the real Washington, who have passed from human semblance to fanciful shadows. Let us not be robbed of the plain Abe Lincoln. Let us keep the man as he was—a man—one of the noblest of earth, and, as such, one of the most precious possessions of a people.

By our popular process of eliminating all human weaknesses from our great men, we destroy them as heroes. Look at Abe Lincoln's face. Nature never gave that face as any indication of a character to be sentimentally etherialized. His habits of life molded its lines in steel. One may control one's voice and discipline one's manner, but the face is beyond command. Day and night, waking and sleeping, one's character is being traced there to be read by all who care to read.

With all of his awkwardness of figure, with all his homeliness of manner, with all his simplicity of speech—that was Abe Lincoln. And let us keep him that way—Plain Abe—infinitely greater and infinitely more sacred than any mythological god, or historian's fancies or poet's dream.

A self-made man with scarcely one winter's schooling from books, he contributed some of the finest gems of the world's literature, unsurpassed in all the classics for depth and limpidity of sentiment. He reached with ease the highest human levels, and on the field of battle he left a record of eloquence never attained by human lips before.

But let us not forget that he was human. Master in mind and body and spirit—yes; but only a man.

Compulsory Insurance

SEVERAL states have laws that require auto owners to have policies that protect them in cases of accidents, both as to liability and damages, and there is a question that arises as to whether or not compulsory insurance is the best thing.

Those who are proposing that careful drivers shall be punished for the misdeeds of the reckless do not take into account that compulsion to insure will not be a preventive but rather will tend to increase accidents.

It would reduce the incentive to careful operation, which results from the present personal liability and which is now an important factor in holding insurance rates to a reasonable level.

It is the other fellow who needs protection; not the irresponsible or intoxicated driver whom compulsory insurance advocates propose to protect against loss.

Some heroic measures will have to be attempted to reduce the all too heavy loss of life that may be attributed to motor traffic.

Prevention should never be subordinated to indemnity, for then the real purpose to be accomplished is swallowed up in the means used.

Newspaper Accuracy

THERE are a good many readers of the newspapers who are constrained to refer to the news contents of these publications with fine scorn and are ever disparaging the accuracy of the information which the public prints purvey. Such is the withering contempt with which these censorious individuals affect to regard the efforts of publishers to provide news intelligence while the same is fresh, that when information is fairly and truthfully presented, the critics are careful to withhold a word of commendation. They accept it all as a matter of course.

That the newspapers alone are not responsible for inaccuracies in their own columns, has been demonstrated many times. Nearly every great catastrophe, whether locally or foreign, the narratives of no two persons will be found to be in harmony as to just what did occur.

Publishers of reputable papers make honest endeavors to obtain the news without bias. In the narrow local field, there are a dozen widely varying accounts of every event, and not infrequently the person whose version is faithfully reproduced in print and who discovers later his own error is the first to denounce the "unreliability" of the report and with every imaginable rhetorical genuflexion, excoriates the papers for their chronic quarrel with the truth.

Occasionally one of these immaculate monitors of society meekly breaks into print over his own signature, taking a firm position on a public matter as he sees it and it is rare indeed that he remains within gunshot of the facts, and he is generally remorselessly picked to pieces by other self-constituted critics.

With unreliable people giving the newspapers unreliable information which in the whirl of daily activity it is impossible to verify, it is extraordinary that the newspapers present the news as accurately as they do.

Economy of Road Paving

IT HAS been proven that paved roads, or hard surfaced roads, will amount annually to a big saving in operating costs of an automobile, and for that reason all money spent for extending paved highways is a direct boost for economy.

Tests that have been made show that with gasoline at 20 cents a gallon, it costs three-fourths of a cent more per ton mile to operate on a gravel or earth road, than it does on pavement or hard surface.

Estimating that the average automobile owner drives 6,000 miles a year, then pavement permits him to save more than $18 a year in fuel cost alone.

There is a double mileage to be obtained from tires where the motor vehicle is operated on pavement, not to speak of the saving of wear on the machine and consequent lessening of garage bills.

Since it is established beyond doubt that they contribute to the economical operation of a motor car and since every person who ever rode on a hard road knows the extra joy and comfort to be derived, as compared with riding on a gravel or stone road, why should there be any argument?

Let's build hard surfaced roads, cut maintenance costs to the minimum, get more pleasure out of motoring and ride farther on a set of tires and a gallon of gasoline.

If home expositions drew as large crowds as the automobile shows, what a great country this would be.

When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal.

Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours later after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Unlike a burning dose of soda—which is but temporary relief at best—Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid.

Next time a hearty meal, or too rich a diet has brought on the least discomfort, try—

Many residents of South Hill paid their last tribute of respect to the memory of our former resident, Richard McAndrew, by attending his funeral from Blessed Sacrament church, Andover, Tuesday morning. Mr. McAndrew was the last survivor of the early settlers in this locality, his parents settling here when he was a small boy. He was a pioneer in the true sense of the word, hewing the forest and erecting a primitive home on the first farm he acquired. He could talk most interestingly of those early strenuous times, when he and his deceased wife established a home. Always of a genial disposition and a good neighbor, we remember him and all extend their sympathy to his family in the loss of the'r father.

Clemson College sagely reminds us that a fertile mind is no less important to profitable farming than a fertile sod.

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.
