WASHINGTON TOPICS

Minister Mizner Upheld by the State Department.

HE DID NOT EXCEED HIS DUTY.

Reports Received by the Marines' Hospital Bureau from the Cholera Districts.

The Epidemic Increasing in Some Localities—The Proposed Methodist University—Iron and Steel Men Leave for New York—Mrs. Harrison to Visit Indianapolis—Voters Leaving for Their Homes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—It is understood that Mr. Mizner, our Minister to Central America, has received from Secretary Blaine assurances of the approval of the President of his conduct in the Barrundia case, and has been fully justified in the course he pursued.

This information comes from the City of Guatemala. According to the announcement Minister Mizner is held not to have exceeded his duty. On the contrary, he went further in the matter in the interest of General Barrundia and his family than he was required to do. He secured a written guarantee from the President of Guatemala and the Minister of Foreign Relations, made to the Government of the United States, that in no case would the life of General Barrundia be in danger. Minister Mizner so stated in his letter to Captain Pitts, which was read and translated to Barrundia.

CHOLERA REPORTS.

The Epidemic Continues in Spain and Is Increasing in Turkey.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Advices received at the Marine Hospital Bureau from the United States Consul at St. Helena reports the appearance of cholera at Meskene and Aleppo.

Advices from Spain state that the cholera epidemic continues, but its presence in Barcelona is not officially confirmed.

Reports from Abyssinia say the epidemic is intense in the localities occupied by Italian troops, and at Massowah about sixty deaths occur daily from the disease.

Reports from Russia state that the actual presence of cholera is not reported, but some cities in the south are suspected; but nothing definite is known.

Reports from France state that the sanitary condition is very satisfactory and no cases of cholera have been reported.

The report from Italy states that according to information received from private sources many fatal cases of cholera have occurred in Venice. The Italian Government has deferred the return of troops from the Red Sea colony.

Advices from Constantinople say that the late cholera reports are very unfavorable, and show that the epidemic is increasing in extent and intensity. The appearance of the disease at Aleppo, to which place it was imported from Meskene, is very serious.

Voters in Demand.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Considerable activity is displayed by the local political committees here in getting out voters, temporarily residing here, to vote in the November elections in the States. Many voters in far distant States left here to-day, and many others will leave during the week. In the departments there is a feeling of safety regardless of politics, and Democratic and Republican clerks alike, in large numbers, have arranged for leave of absence to go home and vote. The local committees, too, are engaged in drumming up voters in the close districts, and but few men entitled to the franchise in Ohio, West Virginia and Northern New York will be in Washington on November 4th.

The Late Justice Miller's Successor.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—It is believed that Secretary Noble will be appointed to the vacancy on the Supreme Court Bench, and that General Clarkson will be given the Interior Department portfolio. This is not the first time that General Clarkson has been spoken of as a possible member of President Harrison's cabinet, but up to the present there has been no vacancy to which he could be appointed. It is not believed that the President will name the new Associate Justice until the meeting of Congress in December.

Explosion of a Fly Wheel.

LYNN, Mass., Oct. 27.—A large fly wheel, twenty feet in diameter, exploded at the power station of the Lynn Gas and Electric Company on Pleasant street. One section of the wheel went through a corner at the front end of the building, tearing out a large hole in the brick side wall and also in the roof. The large piece of iron wheel struck the wooden building adjoining, tearing out a section of the side frame. The other piece of the wheel went out through the opposite corner, making another big hole in the brick wall and roof and wiping out the power station office. The loss is about $12,000. No one was injured.

WILL POWDERLY WITHDRAW?

The Knights of Labor May Have a New Leader.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 27.—In two weeks the General Assembly of the Knights of Labor will convene in Denver, and much interest exists as to the course that will be pursued by Mr. Powderly. Not merely are Knights of Labor interested in the subject, but trades unions and employers as well, for should Powderly decide not to be a candidate the whole history of the order might be changed. Its relations to what are called "open unions" might be materially altered, and a closer bond might be established. On the other hand, a more aggressive course toward other labor organizations and employers might also be established, which would result in general chaos in the industrial field.

It is for these reasons that more or less anxiety exists on the approach of an election. This year there is a well defined understanding among the friends of Mr. Powderly that he will refuse to be a candidate to succeed himself. There is no doubt that he is almost tired of the eleven years' toil, and has expressed himself as willing to lay down the office.

A reporter saw Mr. Powerly here and put the question whether he would again be a candidate for general master workman.

"What I am going to do," said Mr. Powderly, smiling, "no one knows but myself; not even my wife. Nor shall I say until the time arrives."

FOUND IN A FODDER SHOCK.

Insane Mrs. Brannan Passes Seventeen Days Without Food or Water.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Oct. 26.—A dispatch from Clarksburg, W. Va., say that Mrs. Brannan, the St. Louis demented woman who jumped from the cars there on October 9 and ran to the hills, leaving seven children behind, was accidentally discovered hiding in a fodder shock near town. Brent Mead, a negro hostler, who was looking for a stray colt, heard groans in the shock, and on investigation discovered her. She was completely helpless. She had fallen and hurt herself in her flight, and had been without food or water, except rain-water squeezed from her clothing, for seventeen days. She was brought to the county house and cared for.

She still insists that attempts were made to murder her and believes that she was followed. She says that on the night she ran away she crouched down between two logs, and the crowd of hundreds, equipped with lanterns and torches, walked over her, but failed to see her. For eight days she had been endeavoring to attract the attention of persons passing the foddder shock, but was unable to make any one hear, although dozens passed her—hiding place daily. She says she began to think they did not want to hear.

Her friends have been advised of her rescue.

TWO LIVES LOST.

A Heavy Coal Train Breaks in Two While Going Up a Steep Grade.

BRADFORD, Pa., Oct. 27.—At 4 a. m., near Beechtree Junction, Pa., on the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad, engine 82 was pulling a heavy coal train up a steep grade. The train broke in two, the forward end being carried over the summit of the hill and thence down to Beechtree, a distance of two miles. This section of the train was there side-tracked, and Engineer Casey steamed back after the other section. When half way up the hill, the cars he was after came down the grade and crashed into the engine.

The tender and cab was wrecked, and Casey was caught between the tender and boiler. His left leg was ground to a pulp. Fireman Fitzpatrick and Conductor Crawford escaped by jumping. Brakeman Laird, who was riding on the engine, was caught and terribly mangled about the body. Casey died of his injuries at 10 o'clock. Laird lingered until 2 o'clock before death relieved him.

INVESTED WITH THE PALLIUM.

Great Gathering of Bishops and Priests at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Ont., Oct. 27.—Archbishop Cleary was invested with the pallium yesterday. Cardinal Taschereau conducted the investure. St. Mary's Cathedral was magnificently decorated and the audience packed every part of the great edifice.

There were eight bishops and over 100 priests in attendance, including Cardinal Taschereau, Archbishop Walsh of Toronto, Bishops from Rochester, N. Y., Trenton, N. J., and a number of priests from Brooklyn, Albany, Rochester and other points in the States.

After the investure Bishop McQuaid of Rochester, N. Y., delivered a sermon on the spread of the Catholic faith in America. A banquet was spread in the palace, followed by a reception by the Cardinal. Last evening Bishop Farrell of Trenton, N. J., delivered a vigorous sermon.

Governor Hill in New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Governor Hill arrived in the city yesterday afternoon from his Western trip, accompanied by Colonel John G. McEwen. He felt no ill effects, he said, from the shaking up his party received in the railway collision at Moundsville, West Virginia. The Governor returns to Albany today. On Thursday he will be again in the city, en route for Connecticut, where he will address meetings of the Democracy. He declines to go to Rhode Island.

Boom in Pearl-Button Making.

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 27.—Pearl button makers of this city are forming a company with New Jersey capitalists, in consequence of the new tariff on pearl. There are 100 pearl operators in Newark and they are working double time. The factories in Vineland, N. J.; Springfield, Mass.; Philadelphia, New York and elsewhere employ altogether 2,000 men. For twelve years the business has languished.

Remarkable Memories.

Idiots have been known whose memory for names and words were so retentive that they could repeat a sermon verbatim and indicate where the preacher blew his nose and coughed while delivering it. Cardinal Mezzofanti, the linguist, who is said to have known a hundred languages, declared that he never forgot a word he once learned. To a friend, who had congratulated Leyden on his remarkable memory, he replied that he had often found it of great inconvenience. To the friend expressing surprise, he explained that he had often wished to recall a particular expression in something he had read, but could find it only until he had repeated the whole passage from the beginning to the expression he desired to recall. An English clergyman mentions a man who could remember the day of the burial of every person who had died in the parish during thirty-five years, and could also repeat the name and age of each deceased person, and the name of the mourners at his funeral, but so weak was he intellectually that he could not be trusted to feed himself. Dr. Moffatt, the distinguished African missionary, and father-in-law to Dr. Livingstone, once preached a long sermon to a crowd of negroes. Shortly after he had finished, he saw a number of negroes gather about a simple-minded young savage. He went to them, and discovered that the savage was preaching his sermon over again. Not only was he producing the precise words, but imitating the manner and gestures of the white preacher.

CHILI'S NATIONAL DRINK.

It is Called "Chicha"—How It is Made by the Natives.

In Chili it may be regarded as the national beverage, the great popular product of merchandise, and the source of all that is truly original in that variation of the Spanish "jota" known in Chili as "la cueca." After drinking a certain amount of "chicha," the Chilian must dance the "cueca." This drink is cooked wine. The operation of making it is as follows: the grapes, having been gathered and brought in, are passed through a sieve or net of quarter-inch cord, with three-quarter-inch openings, forming a bag some three feet long, two feet wide, and ten inches deep. This process removes the berries from the sprigs. The bag being placed over a hopper, and the hopper over a press composed of two fluted cylinders of American oak, the berries pass between the rollers, and juice, skins, pips, and all fall into a vat, whence the clear liquid is drawn off with all speed. The sediment may be put into a second press, and more liquid obtained, only this second brewing will give a darker liquid. The final sediment is used for distilling alcohol, or aguardiente. The liquid juice is immediately put into a copper or porcelain boiler, which should be shallow and open to the air. Under this boiler a fire should be lighted, and the liquid boiled gently, the foam being carefully skimmed off as it rises. When the whole is cooked, a little vine-wood ash is thrown in to clarify it, and the liquid is drawn off by a funnel, and strained through a fine cloth filter. The time of cooking is four hours for forty gallons of juice, and the loss by evaporation twelve to fifteen per cent. The liquid, boiled and strained, is poured into a vat and left to ferment; and while there still remains a little fermentation the "chicha" is again strained through a cloth, and bottled with good corks, tied down with string or wire. If stone bottles are used, the "chicha" will remain good for a year or two, after which it loses its peculiar foaming and sparkling quality, and becomes more ordinary white wine; whereas good "chicha," carefully put up in glass bottles, retains its qualities for four or five years, and compares favorably with most of the champagne in the market nowadays. In making "chicha" skill and experience tell in the boiling, and in choosing the exact moment for putting the still fermenting liquid. As regards the kind of grapes to be preferred, the Chilians use the black San Francisco or Old Mission grapes, white Chilian grapes, pink Spanish grapes, and white French Chasselas. As the great question in making "chicha" is quantity of juice, and not quality, the so-called vines are to be recommended, because the yield of grapes is more abundant and the berry ripens more quickly; while for making wine the dwarfed vines are best, because the quality of the grape is finer. I tried "chicha" at every opportunity while travelling in Chili, and I found it a harmless, wholesome and excellent drink. I venture to call attention to it.—[Harper's Magazine.

Burying Hearts.

October 5, 1318, was killed at Fagher, England, Edward, brother to King Robert Bruce. In 1613 another Lord Edward Bruce was killed in a duel and his body buried at Bergen, in Holland, where he died. A family tradition averred that his heart had been brought back to Scotland and interred in a certain churchyard. In 1806 a search for the relic was undertaken. Two flat stones curiously fastened together with iron were disinterred, and out of curiosity separated. In a cavity between them was found a heart shaped silver case with the engraved arms of Lord Edward. Opening this, a heart was found within embalmed in a brownish oil.

The last ceremonial burial of a heart in England was that of Paul Whitehead in 1774. His heart was buried with military honors on Lord Despencer's place in Buckinghamshire, built out of funds left for the purpose by that George Bubb Dodington, Lord Malcombe, whose "Memoirs" formed one of the most wonderful pictures of English society. A book has been devoted to the history of heart burial entitled "Enshrined Hearts of Warriors and Illustrious People." Formerly the executioner of a traitor was required to remove the body from the gallows before it was extinct and pluck out the heart, exhibiting it to the people with the words—Here is the heart of a traitor." Sir Walter A. Wood reports that Sir Kenelm Digby spoke and answered "Thou lie." Lord Bacon reports that two or three persons were reported to have taken two or three words under similar circumstances.—[New York Sun.

Far Ahead of Bluebeard.

A native Japanese paper mentions a case of a man, aged forty this year, living in the province of Bizen, who has married and divorced thirty-five wives, and is married to the thirty-sixth. He was married at eighteen, and the reason assigned for this extraordinary example of inconstancy is that he has a younger wife of extremely jealous and rancorous disposition, who from the moment that she enters the house, institutes a reign of persecution, which soon drives the happy woman to ask her husband for a divorce. The husband is helpless to restrain the rancorous of his sister, and must turn her out, so the wretched process goes on year after year. The Japan chronicler adds a circumstance which is improbable, even in the far East. He says that in two cases the husband, arriving at the door of their future home, changed colors, and declaring that he recognized the house as one where he had already passed some months of miserable wedlock, fled without entering.—[London Globe.

PECULIAR INFATUATION.

Different Methods of Following the Injunction "Love One Another."

Do men ever fail in love with each other? Women do. Not long ago a young woman in New Jersey was married to her youthful lover, at her father's farm. Somewhat later, she found to her surprise, that her husband was a woman before she was led to the altar.

If men do not exhibit this strange infatuation for one of their own sex, they at least sometimes give evidence of the fact that they love one another. There are many instances on record where one man has given his life for another. There are many more instances where men have given life to another.

It is a proud possession—the knowledge that one has saved a precious human life. Meriden, Conn., is the home of such a happy man. John H. Preston, of that city, July 11th, 1890, writes: "Five years ago I was taken very sick, I had several of the best doctors, and one and all called it a complication of diseases. I was sick four years, taking prescriptions prescribed by these same doctors, and I truthfully state I never expected to get any better. At this time, I commenced to have the most terrible pains in my back. One day an old friend of mine, Mr. R. T. Cook of the firm of Curtis & Cook, advised me to try Warner's Safe Cure, as he had been troubled the same way and it had effected a cure for him. I bought six bottles, took the medicine as directed and am to-day a well man. I am sure no one ever had a more severe case of kidney and liver trouble than I had. Before this I was always against proprietary medicines but not now, oh, no."

Friendship expresses itself in very peculiar ways sometimes; but the true friend is the friend in need.

"PUNCH" says "Ought to be done?—Ought stands for nothing." The house ought to be cleaned with Sapolio. Try a cake in your next house-cleaning and be convinced. ENCYCLOPÆDIA

"IGNORANCE of the law excuses no man," and ignorance is no excuse for a dirty house or greasy kitchen. Better clean them in the old way than not at all; but the modern and sensible way is to use SAPOLIO on paint, on floors, on windows, on pots and pans, and even on statuary. To be ignorant of the uses of SAPOLIO is to be behind the age.
