PROGRESS IN ONTARIO.

Work of Dominion Alliance an Example for United States Societies.

THE report of the executive committee of the Ontario branch of the Dominion alliance, which has recently been issued shows that encouraging progress has been made in the work of the organization throughout the year.

In the Domi fon alliance which dates from 1876, are affiliated all the religious and temperance organizations in Canada, actively engaged in the promotion of temperance. The dominion council of the alliance is the recognized agency in legislative quarters for the expression of public sentiment concerning the subjects of temperance and moral reform. While the majority rule and the prohibition object are the important features of the organization, the alliance unites many others of less radical sentiment and has been chiefly instrumental in securing the advanced legislation on the liquor question which has taken place since its inauguration.

A steady campaign for the reduction of licenses has been carried on by the organization, the good results of which may be judged by the statement showing that in 1875 the number of licenses issued in Ontario was 6,185, while for the fiscal year 1906, this number had been reduced to 2,691. This reduction is notable in consideration of the fact that there has been a large increase in population in the province. Past efforts have also secured prohibition of the sale of liquor to minors and in further limiting the hours of the sale of liquors by retail dealers. A further increase in the territory under local option was noted in the year's report which shows 311 municipalities in the province in which the sale of liquor is prohibited. Special efforts are being directed toward the abolition of the treating system, drinking in clubs, and toward imposing on the general traffic such further restrictions as will effectively remedy its evil. There can be little doubt that the alliance represents an overwhelming public sentiment in regard to temperance reform, and is proving a powerful agency in eradicating the liquor evil by educational, moral and legislative means.

What Would You Do

If three good physicians agreed your case was hopeless. If they should decide that you could not live longer than six weeks. And if you should get well, after using only $12.00 worth of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine, what would you advise a friend in like condition to do?

"I have to thank you for saving my wife's life two years ago. We had continued with the doctor until the third doctor, like the previous ones, said she was dying and could be saved only by a miracle. We then tried Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine from the hospital to quietly wait for her time which could not be far off. We did not know we brought her home and that I thought probably would be the last Christmas we might help her, so I got a bottle of each and she commenced to give them to her and commenced to improve, and We soon saw this we continued giving the medicine, and we gave her doses in all of the medicine. She has taken it occasionally now for 2 years. To the ministry, and have been for 44 years."

REV. F. MILLIGAN, Genda Springs, Kans.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails he will refund your money.

Concrete Floor and Cellar Wall.

In placing the concrete floor, says the correspondent of Prairie Farmer, we made a cellar around just inside the wall, which catches any water which may seep through the walls, and prevents it from running over the floor. Practically all the water which runs down the outside of the walls goes into the tile and does not seep through.

GOOD PASTURES.

The Part They Play in Maintaining the Soil Fertility.

I know of no work upon the farm that will make such a decided improvement for the amount of labor used as the cultivation of pasture, writes Forest Henry in The Farmer. We have had little experience with seeding into the native sod. I have been, in fact, surprised with the good results. I am very glad to get the words of a writer in one of our very valuable exchanges where he says: "Our whole philosophy of a good pasture may be summed up in this: 'Get your land so full of the valuable grasses that weeds can with difficulty find lodgment, and can not grow even if they get a start by reason of the shading by the tame grasses. Remember the old Scotchman's remark: 'If you keep the bushel full of wheat, there is no room for chaff.'"

Rape as a cover crop would prevent many of our loose soils from blowing during the winter and also hold the winter snows. Altogether I fully believe it would mean much if practiced, especially on our early plowed fields. There one has sheep pasture. This matter of cover crops is being studied and put in practice largely in the east, where they feel the need of fertility more. Why should we not profit by their experience and begin earlier and keep up our fertility while our soils are comparatively rich?

GARDEN NOTES.

If an orchard is to be grown on flat land the soil should be well drained otherwise the trees are put in, as drainage operations are not easy after the trees are in place and are making roots.

Fruit trees to be hardy should grow slowly.

There is also a disposition on the part of many shippers to put out very inferior goods. This always works to the disadvantage of the grower and is certainly not good for the consumer. The latter will buy poorer grades of vegetables only sparingly and you can't blame him either.

Think of the Farm.

There are several sides to the dairy question. Almost always we think of the side that relates to the dollars and cents we expect to get out of the business now, forgetting that there is a far more important way of looking at it. We have the satisfaction of knowing that the man who engages in dairying does not skin his farm and give-give the hide away. Every year he is putting back a good share of the fertility he takes out of his land in the form of grass, corn and other soiling crops. This is not the case with the man who raises grain exclusively, keeping little if any stock, and selling his farm bare year after year, until it will produce little or nothing.

Why not start now—today and cure yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion? A dieted stomach sets the blues and grumbles. Give it good eat, then take Pape's Diapepsin to start the digestive juices working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of gas or eructations of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and Dizziness, and your food will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents for a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of indigestion and upset Stomach in five minutes.

There is nothing better to take Gas from Stomach and cleanse the stomach and intestines, and besides, one triangule will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as a sound healthy stomach would do it.

When Diapepsin works, your stomach rests—gets itself in order, cleans up—and then you feel like eating when you come to the table, and what you eat will do you good.

Absolute relief from all Stomach Misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to begin taking Diapepsin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapepsin because you want to be thoroughly cured of indigestion.

WORLD'S CITIES HARD TO KILL.

Rome Twice Burned, Six Times Starved—Paris' Eight Sieges.

Few of the world's great cities have not faced, at one time or another, total destruction. But a city is hard to kill.

Take Rome, for instance. She has been swept by pestilence no fewer than ten times. She has been twice burned and six times driven to submission by starvation. Perhaps it is on account of her great vitality that she is called the Eternal city.

Paris has gone through eight sieges; ten famines, two plagues and one fire which devastated it.

Constantinople has been burned out nine times and has suffered from four plagues and five sieges. In addition, she has been ruled by monarchs who were worse than a plague. Yet Constantinople still flourishes.

London has been decimated five times by plagues, in addition to visitations of typhus, cholera and other epidemics. She has been burned more or less severely several times.—Stray Stories.

Recognized the Line.

Two girls were talking over the phone one afternoon, the subject of the conversation being a lawn party to take place the following day. Both were discussing what they should wear, and after five minutes had come to no decision.

Right in the midst of this "important" conversation a masculine voice interrupted, asking humbly what number he had. A stern reply that the wire was busy did not successfully squelch the inquirer, for he asked again for the number. One of the girls now became indignant and with supreme scorn asked: "What line do you think you are on, anyhow?"

"Well," said the man, "I'm not sure, but judging from what I've heard I should say I was on a clothes line."

The Malacca Wildcats.

In the forests of Malacca and other islands in the Indian ocean may still be found the animal known as a wildcat. The upper parts of it are generally of a clear yellow color, with black spots; the lower parts are white with black spots also. On the back the spots lengthen almost into lines or fringes, black on yellow.

The average length of the animal, excluding the tail, is almost two feet; the tail averages nine inches. Its height when standing erect is about 12 inches at the shoulder and 15 inches at the hindquarters. Its temper is mild and gentle; it plays almost like a domestic cat, or rather kitten, chasing its tail and amusing itself with anything that it can roll with its paws.

There is no case on record of a cough, cold or a grippe developing after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it cures the most obstinate deep seated coughs and colds. Why take any thing else?

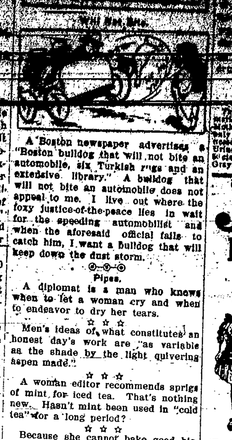
The Kind You Have Always Bought



A Boston newspaper advertises a "Boston bulldog that will not bite an automobile, six Turkish rugs and an extensive library." A bulldog that will not bite an automobile does not appeal to me. I live out where the foxy justice-of-the-peace lies in wait for the speeding automobilist and when the aforesaid official fails to catch him, I want a bulldog that will keep down the dust storm.

Pipes.

A diplomat is a man who knows when to fet a woman cry and when to endeavor to dry her tears.

Men's ideas of what constitutes an honest day's work are as variable as the shade by the light quivering aspen made.

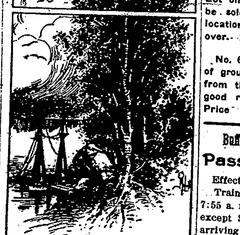
A woman editor recommends sprigs of mint for iced tea. That's nothing new. Hasn't mint been used in "cold tea" for a long period?

Because she cannot bake good biscuit does not make a pretty woman's eyes any the less beautiful and alluring. That is where man gets goldbricked.

One Iowa editor complains that he cannot get over the "Merry Widow" hat, whereat a brother editor advises him not to get over it, but to climb under. Yes, and climb slowly!

The Iowa and Texas newspapers have locked horns on whether or no it costs anything "to smile once a day." The Iowa editors claim it doesn't, and the Houston Post, after considerable figuring, announces that the price of smiling once a day for a year is just $54.75. And think what it is going to cost "us humorists," who are supposed to smile all the time!

Communion.



The shadows in the mirrored depths of quiet-water ways
Are calling me to come and dream
throughout the Autumn days—
Are calling me to rustling banks where maple leaves are strewn,
And all the world is during to the river's babbling rune.
The cadence of the soughing wood, the fragrance of the glen,
Are calling, calling, calling in an ecstasy again!

The path that winds where plover play and tipups go "Peep! Peep!"
Is calling me in dulcet tones to where the shade is deep.
To where the maples riot free and grapes in treasure trove
Are clinging to the browning oak within the blending grove!
Is calling me to come and play where all the world is sweet,
With peace a halo o'er my head, a carpet at my feet!

The singing brook that winds away to where the world is glad,
Is bidding me to leave the paths where human hearts are sad,
Is telling me to drop it all and in the sylvan shade
Imbibe the glory of the hills in all their peace arrayed!
Ah, where the mirrored depths are still, I slip the chains of care—
The wood, my trampled edifice—the mirrored depths, my prayer!

Sobsequetes.

I heard of a certain husband who seeing some packages of new goods on the table, examined them, and picking an article up remarked: "What a pretty little lamp shade this is." "Lamp shade," said his wife scornfully, "that is not a lamp shade, that is my new bathing suit."

I heard of a wise little school boy who appeared at school one morning and told the teacher: "Teacher, my sister has the measles." "Well, that's too bad, you must stay at home until she entirely recovers," instructed the teacher. After the boy had gleefully gone away, a companion said to him: "Johnny, Jimmy Dolan's sister wots got de measles. Dey in Omaha."

A western editor is said to have set upon a plan to keep subscriptions paid up which "takes the cake." Every time a delinquent subscriber is mentioned in his paper his name is inverted. For examples "John Smith and wife are spending a few days in Chicago." Every other subscriber understands what it means, and there is a grand rush to get "right side up."

The editor of an Iowa paper reported last week that some of the citizens of his village were visiting in Chicago, from whence, he said, they would "come up the Mississippi to Milwaukee. His readers inquired if they would return by the Pecos river.
