A Decided Cut

is gifts appropriate for New Years. Have you forgotten any one in your remembrance for Christmas? If you have, now is the opportune time to look for one. Gifts appropriate for Xmas as well as New Years have met with a decided cut. While the quantities are not as large the assortment is still in pretty good shape. We avoid carrying holiday goods from one year to another and therefore remarked most of them so that the most expensive articles can be gotten at very little cost.

Come and look them over.

The Business of Farming.

We are just awakening to the fact that the value of farm land is rapidly increasing in America. Ever since the discovery of the continent there have been vast tracts of unoccupied land subject to free settlement until now. We have at last filled up the continent and all the land worth tilling is under ownership. We are doing much by irrigation to reclaim the arid lands, but these are rapidly filled up as soon as they are made tillable.

Relieved of the pressure of vacant lands, there can be no doubt that the value of farms will continue to rise and the value of farm products will rise with them. The present depression in the commercial and industrial world has caused no drop in the price of farm products, no particular decrease in the cost of living; indeed, it has increased, if measured by wages. —Indianapolis Star.

The Whistling Boy.

But woe betide the hand that bids the whistling boy be still! He is the sole survivor from an age of innocence into one of ill-starred knowledge; he binds the disparities of the present and the past. The same in country lane and on the city pave—cosmopolite, blithe, bohemian, a little pagan Pan!—is he, Amphibian of truant idleness and endless preoccupations is he; without rest, without haste, he shuttles back and forth between things as they are and things as they are dreamed. If, in these transmigrations, from the inner to the outer world and back, he impinges on the edges of things a little sharply, he cannot arouse our ire—for there is a whistling boy within every man who keeps his courage up as he passes through the graveyard of his hopes.—Washington Post.

Avoid Round Shoulders.

Are you letting yourself sag a bit at the shoulders? Don't, if you want to keep either young or well. There is nothing so fatally easy as to grow round-shouldered. Keep a sharp watch on yourself to prevent it. Don't stooping stand up against the jamb of a door and see if you have been to stoop. Also walk around your room with your back against the back. This brings your chest well forward, opening the lungs and giving exercise to the muscles of the back. This last is the simplest of all preventives, for if it is always practiced the rest will follow.

Natural Question.

She—How is it your sister didn't sing to-night?

He—O, the doctor has forbidden her. He says she must not sing for six months.

She—Does he live near her?

Poor Cabbage Year.

Many dealers are kicking about the poor grade of cabbage marketed this year. One dealer goes so far as to say that he has not seen a decent barrel of that commodity since last winter. So pronounced has this become throughout the country that in some localities dealers have cut out cabbage sales on account of the poor quality available. It's pretty tough on the gardener to think that good cabbage is nearly unprocurable.

Many little lives have been saved by Foley's Honey and Tar, for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough. It is the only safe remedy for infants and children as it contains no opiates or other narcotic drugs, and children like Foley's Honey and Tar. Careful mothers keep a bottle in the house. Refuse substitutes.

BRUNDAGE & ROGERS.

DRINKERS, DISEASE VICTIMS.

Alcohol as Related to the Health of the Masses.

Recent statistics seem to show that the death-rate from tuberculosis among manual workers is from two to three times as high as among the mercantile, agricultural and professional classes, and the causes contributing to this excessive mortality are being earnestly sought by intelligent students of social problems. There can be little doubt that one reason lies in the unhygienic surroundings of the home, while another undoubtedly lies in the unhygienic surroundings of the workshop. In New York, George F. Dugan, secretary of the Teamsters' union, and the Rev. Charles Steele, of the State Charities association, are endeavoring to work on these lines, and in connection therewith they have undertaken to investigate the relation which the saloon holds to the ill-health and other ills of the working classes. Mr. Steele has sent to every union in the city a circular containing 11 questions, covering the whole ground of the relationship between the saloon and the working people, and ascertaining the ideas taken in relation thereto by the said union. All previous evidence adduced in this relation contributes to the general opinion held by social-reformers that the saloon as the "poor man's friend" is really one of his worst enemies.

Alaska in for Reform.

Alaska is clearing her title to a star in the flag. This month the last dance hall in the territory will close its doors, its license being about to expire and a new one being refused. Decency and order are the rule, even in the larger towns, and there are few left of the usual mining camp characteristics, unless it be the high prices which prevail. Though newspapers cost 20 cents apiece they have a big sale.

A Cure for Rheumatism.

Capt. Dibble, who lives on a farm near this place, is in his ninety-sixth year, and says he never had a rheumatic pain in all his life, and but little of any other kind of sickness. He accounts for this by having sailed 50 years on the salt seas. He says salt renders you immune from rheumatism, as well as other ills to which the body is heir. The captain drinks freely of salt water and sprinkles salt in his bed every night. He is a well preserved man, and although near the 100 milestone, gets around as well as the average man of 50 or 60.—Rolla Sharpshooter.

What We You-Do

If three good physicians should pronounce your case hopeless. If you should decide that you could not live longer than six weeks. And if you should get well, after using only $12.00 worth of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nervine, what would you advise a friend in like condition to do?

We have to thank you for saving my wife's life two years ago. Her sufferings were so great we built her a third coffin, like the two we had once used before. We had given up hope for her; that was why we sent for you. Her death was daily expected for three weeks at the longest. Instead of three weeks she lived three years. Your medicine kept her alive. We thought nothing could do her good. We had given up hope. Your medicine did her good. We thought nothing could save her life. We thought it was only a question of how long we could keep her with us. We had given up hope. Your medicine saved
