Fourth Monday of February, at Belmont, by Justice Mullin Martin.
Second Monday of July, at Angelica, by Justice Barnes.
Third Monday of October, at Belmont, by Justice Barnes.

We are obliged to issue our paper one day late this week on account of the illness of our chief devil.

Mr. Henderson has raised the frame of his new barn.

Mr. James Shaut is building an addition to his house.

Our streets are alive with teams drawing in tan bark. It finds a ready market at $5 per cord.

Drug in Market.—Strawberries are a drug in our market. The streets are lined with berry peddlers, offering them at any price.

Mr. Dyer will please accept our thanks for a box of the largest strawberries that we have seen this year. The shape and size make them quite a curiosity.

Libel.—Mr. McClave, keeper of the Steuben County Poor House, has commenced a libel suit against the publisher of the Corning Democrat.

Mr. Everett speaks to all of you through a new advertisement this week. He has just received a new supply of goods, and is offering them at bargains.

Mr. Everett is moving the building used by him as an Ambrotype Gallery over on Second street, where he intends to fit it up for a dwelling house. He is going to erect a new building for his rooms.

Band.—There is some talk among our young men here of organizing a Cornet Band. We have seven or eight young men who have been connected with other bands, and it would not take them long to be able to discourse music to us in good style; and there is no one organization that will enliven town more than a good band. We say, let us have one immediately. The town will have to help to get the instruments, and this we can well afford to do. Start the paper; we will go to the bottom of our pockets and fish up a few cents.

We would call the attention of all grocery dealers to the advertisement of Birdsall, Baker & Co., of Wellsville, one of the largest wholesale establishments in Western New York. You will find that gentlemen in every respect pleasing and accommodating. Give them a trial.

A Run Away.—An accident occurred the first of this week to Mr. T. Ieet Brown. His horse ran away with him somewhere in or near the town of Alfred, breaking two of his ribs and otherwise severely injuring him.

Fire.—The Eagle Hotel at Friendship, owned and kept by W. W. Moore, and adjoining, owned and occupied by Mr. Fairbanks, was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday morning last, with all of their contents. We have been unable to learn whether they were insured or not.

In Town.—D. H. Bonk, the renowned auctioneer, the man that blows so much with his mouth—yes, he has come, and brought with him a large stock of Dry Goods, Drugs and Yankee Notions. He is in need of money and is obliged to sell our goods at any price in order to raise the "creature." And now is your time. And set all improve it. Young and old, old maids and bachelors, are all cordially invited to attend his evening sales. No reserved seats.

A Cowardly Attempt at Murder.—On Wednesday evening, July 7 as Mr. Wm. B. Green 2d, of Independence was on his way home from Rexville about 1 4 of a mile this side of the town, a man suddenly sprang from the road-side and fired three shots from a revolver at him, one of the shots taking effect in his hand. After firing, the cowardly miscreant effected his escape, the darkness preventing his being recognized or captured.

Another Wild Man.—Andover is infested with a wild man—not wild in the woods—does not go prowling around after little children—is not wild on woman's suffrage. But he has been wild on the low price system. He is selling goods at such reduced prices that everybody considers him wild. If you want to see the man, go to N. B. Walker's cash store. He is perfectly harmless, and gentlemanly in all his dealings.

The managers of the Erie Railway have issued an order to all agents on the line of their road, directing that when twenty-five or more persons desire to make an excursion on regular trains from one station to another station on the Atlantic & Great Western or Erie Railways and return, agents are authorized to issue excursion tickets, making a reduction of one third from the sum of the tariff both ways. This arrangement will give satisfaction to the getters up of excursion parties. And we assure you that there is no better way of enjoying one's self than an excursion on the Erie Railroad.

Stolen.—A woman, whose present name we have been unable to learn, but who is a daughter of Perry Green, who lives about three miles from town, —who was stopping with Mr. Robert R. Boyd, a connection of hers, got up one night last week, and went down cellar and took ten or twelve pounds of butter that had not been worked over, and carried it out to the barn, and then took off her night dress and rolled the butter up in it. In the morning she started to town with it, and stopped at Mr. Wilson's and worked it over; she put a part of it in a pail and took it to Mr. Walker's to sell, but young Mr. Boyd, who had followed her, arrived, and made her take the butter back home. This woman and her husband had parted for some reason, and she being lame and unable to work, the neighbors were in the habit of assisting her. There has been no arrest made as yet.

The Wild Man.—The Woodhull correspondent of the Hornellsville Tribune furnishes another report of the wild man in this week's number of that paper. He still reports him roaming. He also states that on Monday last he stole a little girl that was in a field adjoining the woods. When this was known (according to correspondent) the citizens turned out en masse for the purpose of hunting down this ere animal, and, with the assistance of bloodhounds, succeeded in running him up a lofty pine tree, with the little child in his arms, to the height of seventy feet. Now they are endeavoring to devise some means of obtaining the child. If that correspondent will run the animal to this place, we have a man that will climb pure him, tree child and all; and if he fails, we will put "Hale D." on the war-path. We are in want of some excitement. Bring him along. We have got hotels to entertain all who wish to see the wild man.

New Drug Store.—We would call the attention of our readers to Dr. W. W. Crandall's New Drug Store. Dr. C. has furnished it with all the latest improvements in the way of bottles, drawers and labels, and it looks as nice as can be. He has a large assortment of all kinds of pure drugs and medicines Also, all the latest and best of patent medicines. And we assure you that if you should want anything usually kept in a first class drug store, and at reasonable prices, Dr. Crandall's is the place for you to go. See advertisement in another column.

Freshet.—Last night (Thursday) it commenced raining quite hard, and continued all night, and at about daybreak this morning the creek on the south side of our village raised to an overflow making its way down through the gardens on the south side of Franklin st., belonging to F. S. Robinson, E. Benton, W. R. Benton, F. Lee, J. Hunt and Hale Davis, injuring them to a serious extent; crossing Main street, through the gardens of P. Hunt, and Mike Kenney, which have also sustained heavy damages. Some of the fences were swept away by the violence of the water, and several cellars flooded. About six o'clock the water commenced to fall at nearly the same rate as it came up. We are unable to give full particulars, but as we write we hear that at the flats below the village were badly cut up.

Later.—All of the bridges for five miles up Dike's Creek are washed away.

Wonderful Excitement.—On Monday last two sons of Lyman Denning, living about two miles from our village, were going over the back part of their father's farm, when they discovered something lying in the field. Not daring to approach near it, they stood in wonderment, thinking it was some kind of an animal, or the Woodhull wild man. Finally they concluded to go back to the house and get each an ax and some other implements of defence and "go for it." On their way they ran across a man by the name of James Pardon, who plucked up courage and said he would go with them. So they procured arms, and started for the supposed battle field. On reaching the field of operation, with the courage of Sancho Panza, they proceeded to the attack. But lo! and behold! their imagined animal was nothing but a fantastic trimmed balloon, that Prof. Eggleston had sent up from Wellsville on the 3d of July. We leave our readers to imagine the closing scene of this drama.

Friendship.—We give below the programme for the Exercises of the Allegany Academy of Music. Friendship, commencing on Monday the 12th, and continuing through Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with a grand Reunion and Supper on Friday evening. Thomas K. Beecher will deliver an address on Friday afternoon. We can say, without any fear of being disappointed, that this will be one of the grandest displays of musical talent ever produced in Western New York. And all lovers of good music should not fail to attend at least one of the five days. The exercises are—

Monday—Exhibition of the Primary Classes during the day; public performance of church music during the evening.

Tuesday—Exhibition of the Advanced Classes during the day; Oratorio of the Creation in the evening.

Wednesday—Exhibition of the Graduating Class during the day; public performance of secular music in the evening.

Thursday—Exhibition of the Solo Classes during the day; Opera of the Doctor of Alcantara in the evening.

Friday—Address by Rev. T. R. Beecher in the afternoon; Reunion and Supper in the evening.

Editor Advertiser:—The following, from the pen of Miss Anna Bell Waffle, by request, was read before the Lodge of I. O. of G. T., in Andover, July 25. The topic used being "Water," rendered it appropriate to the occasion, and coming from one that accepts it freely as the only beverage, I thought it worthy of publication, that the many readers of your excellent paper who choose to read it may do likewise. Yours, B. Phinney.

"When an all-wise Creator fitted up an earthly habitation for man, knowing what would best promote his happiness, He separated the chaotic mass, not yet having taken on shape or form, into land and water, with a great predominance of the latter. And among all the works of His hand, there is not a living thing, animal nor vegetable, great nor small, that could exist without this life-giving element.

He formed it into clouds that float in bright fleeciness or rise in imposing grandeur, that it might descend to earth, and that all vegetation, from the stately king of the forest to the tiny plant a foot could crush, might drink of it. Out of it He made bubbling springs and laughing rivulets, that the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air might have their bodies and slake their thirst.

He commanded it to stand in pools and ponds, that myriads of reptiles and insects might exist in, and sport over it. He expanded it into broad seas and oceans, that huge monsters, wondrous exhibitions of His power and handiwork, might have a dwelling-place, and that on its surface might be borne the fruits and luxuries of distant climes for the benefit of mankind. For no more is it necessary to the existence and well-being of the inferior inhabitants of earth, than to the comfort, pleasure and life conditions of the crowning work of creation. There is no beauty of the heavens that greets his eye, whether it be the mellowness of a golden sunset, the awful grandeur of the storm clouds when they come together in battle array and shout forth fiery chains, or the gaudiness of the rainbow, that does not have its source therefrom.

There is not a change in all the varied face of nature, from the freshness of spring, the blossoming of summer and the ripeness of autumn, to the white robes and glittering frost work of winter, that without its agency would come to give him pleasure and subsistence. There is not a luxury of the princely mansion, nor a life necessity of the humblest cottage, that without its aid would come to cheer and to bless. In the hands of the Divine Workman it is everywhere a diffuser of joy and beauty, of life and happiness.

As a beverage, it is a promoter of peace and prosperity, of health and purity; a blessing freely bestowed alike upon the rich and the poor, the high and the low; for God hath so ordered that for the desire of this vital element they shall meet together, and that from the same source the lordly aristocrat shall drink with the humble toiler. It does not incite neighbor against neighbor, nor make enemies of friends. It is not the instigator of robbery, murder and bloodshed, but quenches the demoniac fires of envy, of malice, of hatred and of passion.

O, why is man, made in the image of God, less wise than the plants and the flowers, that he quaffs that which will destroy both soul and body! That which will rob him of friends and prosperity, burn out the very impress of his maker that is upon him, and stamp him with the degredation of the brute! nay, worse than that of brutes, for they have instincts of joy and affection, of self-existence and preservation—a consciousness of living and being as their Creator intended they should live and be, that "they who tarry long at the wine" have not!

That "he looketh upon the wine when it is red, and when it moveth itself aright in the cup, but at last biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder," and puts aside and speaks scoffingly of life-giving, health-promoting, purifying cold water!
