MEET OUR TEACHERS

Mr. Lawrence Bartz, art instructor and homeroom adviser for the junior boys, was born in Buffalo, N. Y. He attended Buffalo State Teachers, Albright Art School, Genesee and Syracuse University where he received a B. S. degree in Art Education.

Mr. Bartz, who likes the color blue, has an eye for a Chevrolet car.

When he reads as a pastime, he enjoys a book by Goldstein or "Art In Everyday Life." While gardening, his hobby, a tantalizing steak, his favorite food, might be cooking on the out-door oven. In the evening Mr. Bartz likes to listen to Bing Crosby or go to the movies to see Spencer Tracy or Barbara Stanwyck. The only thing that could possibly spoil his day would be to have a person snapping his gum.

Mr. Bartz, who is now living on Maple street in Andover, is married and has two children, Allen and Jean.

THANKSGIVING

By Eunice Hall

All the legends and traditions of Thanksgiving bear out the fact that the responsive heart brings into a true and larger focus the gifts that life gives. The outward circumstances of the little Massachuetts Bay settlement seemed to offer little that called for thankfulness. Privation and hunger had taken the lives of nearly half of the colonists. Danger hung a constant shadow over the survivors. Yet, above and beyond these depressing conditions, they perceived rewards for which to be thankful.

This is the transformation that the spirit of thankfulness can so often make. It enables us to see the real worth of possessions that would otherwise be lost to sight in the distractions of the day. The truth is that thankfulness is one of the brave graces of living that can make a very great difference in one's outlook on life. So sure of thsi was Charles Dickens that he accounted it a necessary means to the attainment of happiness.

Thanksgiving is solely an American tradition, and we are fortunate that it is. It gives us an occasion for enjoyment of the abundance our land produces. But amid the pleasures of family gatherings, bounteous dinners and good talk, the real meaning of the day should not be forgotten. For it symbolizes the truth, "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord."

Better Health For Children

A Community Service Issued by Children's Hospital of Buffalo, N. Y.

Practically every month some child is admitted to the Children's Hospital of Buffalo suffering from aspirin poisoning. Many children like the taste of aspirin and, if given the chance, will eat it like candy. This is especially true of certain types of aspirin preparations on the market which are sugar coated.

Although aspirin is perfectly safe for most adults, in young children it can produce actual poisoning if taken in quantity. The younger the child, the more he is affected, and for this reason aspirin should never be given to a child unless it's prescribed by a physician. He advises the proper amount and how often the dose should be taken. It is important to follow the doctor's advice.

Symptoms of aspirin poisoning are: drowsiness, vomiting, lack of appetite, and deep rapid breathing. These are danger signals that call for immediate medical attention because the child's condition may become so critical that he loses consciousness. Sometimes there is a sweetish odor from the mouth and sometimes aspirin poisoning causes convulsions. If your aspirin bottle becomes suddenly empty and you note these symptoms in your child, you may suspect he's been eating the tablets and has aspirin poisoning. Lose no time. If you can't reach your doctor at once, don't wait—take your child to a hospital for emergency treatment. The best way to avoid such trouble is to store aspirin preparations and other medicines well beyond possible reach of children, or better still, lock them up.

One further word of caution, don't give babies or young children bottles of pills or medicine to play with even if you think the top is on tight. It's surprising how easily tops become loosened. Also it's a bad idea for children to regard such things as toys.

Prisoner: "Judge, must I be tried by that jury with all those women on it?"

Magistrate: "Certainly; they have all been sworn to duty."

Prisoner: "Then, your honor, I plead guilty. It's no use to try to fool a pack of strange women when I can't deceive my own wife!"

Movies Pase Long-Term Gain In Popcorn's Variable Crop

Popcorn, which traditionally winters by home firesides and summers at ball parks, circuses, and shore resorts, nowadays sends its buttered aroma through movie theaters all year round. Its consumption is on the increase.

You couldn't be sure of the increase from the crop totals of the last few years because popcorn is one of the most up-and-down harvests on which Uncle Sam compiles statistics. The U.S. crop, in millions of pounds, roller-coastered from 235 in 1944 to 428 in 1945 to 253 in 1946 to 102 in 1947, then up again to 309 in 1948, only to drop back to 157 in 1949.

What movie popcorn vending machines have helped do in recent years, however, is seen by comparing the 247-million-pound average of the six years above with the annual figure of only 116 million pounds during the decade ending with 1944. That the national appetite for the explosive grain appears to have more than doubled is confirmed by the fact that close to half the present market is in theater lobbies.

Over the years, Iowa has accounted for close to one-third of the nation's popcorn production. Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio have provided another third. The remainder of the commercial crop comes largely from eight states—Missouri, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Kentucky, Texas, Kansas, Michigan, and California.

Two adjoining counties in northwestern Iowa, Sac and Ida, have at times produced more popcorn than any state except Iowa itself. The Sac county town of Odebolt has laid claim to honors as "the popcorn center of the world."

Iowa's plant wizards, known for Burkanbian progress in improving types of corn, have not overlooked the popping grain. Concentrating on taste and popability, they are developing strains that will expand 30 more times their unpopped volume, as compared to the usual 20 times or less.

Lemming Migration Drives Owl South, Fox to Hunger

The lemmings swarm along on one of nature's strangest death marches: Canada's snowy owl, an unwilling DP from subpolar haunts, forages as far afield as Virginia; and fur traders dealing in the arctic fox and ermine face slim profits.

Unrelated as these events seem they are tightly bound together this winter by the freak behavior patterns of a little animal that is close kin to the familar house and field mouse.

The far North's lemming is a sensitive, highly nervous creature preyed on by his fowl and animal neighbors for their winter food.

Every two to four years, the lemmings succumb to their fears and unknown drives and seek relief in mass flight. Thousands strong, these rodents swarm over mountains, swim rivers, drive through forests, always toward the sea. Hordes die en route, others drown themselves upon reaching their goal, thereby destroying much of the normal food supply for the snowy owl and arctic fur-bearing animals.

The wise old owl starts to travel for his health, venturing this year deep into the unfamiliar middle Atlantic states. Lacking airborne mobility, the fox and his friends stay behind to struggle against death by starvation.

Fox Fire of Legend

Logs in a wood box alongside a fireplace may glow though there is no fire. This does not show the presence of radium. The light comes from a luminescent fungus that spreads throughout the wood in tiny threads, very much like a mould on bread. Many different kinds of fungus have been found to be luminous. This is the "foxfire" of English legend, where it was associated with elves and fairies.

FARM PRACTICE Project for 1951 among the Granges of New York state is called "Homestead and Grange Hall Improvement". Next to our Community Service contests, which have contributed so much to better living in rural N. Y., our yearly Grange Projects have done more to "lift the country's face" than such former programs as Grass Silage, Farm Ponds and Birdsfoot Trefoil.

In the seven Lecturers' Schools currently being held in various convenient locations over the state, demonstrations and literature are being made available for this attractive project. Unlike other years, exterior improvement and beautification appeals to everyone in the farm family. Although Lecturers will spark the program, Masters, Service and Hospitality chairmen and Juvenile Matrons will all be expected to do their part. To quote from the 1951 Notebook describing the plan when families can join with their neighbors to plan to make their Grange Hall more attractive and then work together in good cooperative fashion to bring these plans to a reality, we have community action at its best." Be sure your Grange and its members participate.

RURAL CHURCH Institute's annual meeting will be held at Warren Hall, Cornell University December 7th. This is the Institute's 15th Anniversary and a record attendance is anticipated. The Grange has always been prominently identified with this worthy church movement, together with the other major farm organizations, to strengthen our rural religious groups. Mark the date, and take friends along.

First prize of $15,00 went to Capital Grange, of Dover, Del., with Goehner Grange, Seward, Neb., and Matrimony Grange, Rockingham Co., N. C., runners-up with prizes of $5,000 and $2,000 respectively. Already entries for the 1951 Community Service Contest have begun to pour into the office at Washington, D. C.

British Research

Research in Britain has, in recent years, produced a number of notable drugs for the protection of human health and the world's food supply. During 1949, a new pain-killing drug, heptalgin, was developed, which is six times more effective than morphine. Britain, pioneer of penicillin and the sulfa drugs, has also produced a new drug which will protect cattle in Africa from the dread tse-tse fly, and may therefore open up a great new meat-producing area to the world.

Television

The television industry continues to employ increasing amounts of nickel and nickel alloys in various component parts of transmitting and receiving equipment. Pure nickel is used extensively for cathodes in the camera and picture tubes, as well as in all the receiving and many of the transmitting vacuum tubes for cathodes and structural parts. Long life tubes with nickel [illegible] cable networks which link the cable [illegible] link the studios and transmitters.
