THE SESSION LAWS.

The bill for the repeal of the Session Law Act, so far as it relates to this county, has passed both houses of the Legislature, and only awaits the Governor's signature to become a law. The NEWS doesn't pretend to be much of a prophet, but we don't believe the Governor will sign the bill, and we think his reason will be that it is "special legislation." Wait and see if we are correct.

THE JUDGESHIP.

A recent decision of the court of appeals virtually places Justice Daniels out of the race as a candidate for renomination for Justice of the Supreme court of this district this fall. The court holds that a justice is entitled to and can draw salary ($7,200 a year) till the end of his term, even after his services cease, by reason of his age. Judge Daniels could not act longer than three years if re-elected, but he could for eleven years longer continue to draw $7,200 per annum, and at the same time the district would be paying another a like sum. With Judge Daniels out, two new men will be nominated this fall and not more than one of these desirable nominations can be claimed by Buffalo. Will Allegany be in it? —Cuba Patriot.

Notwithstanding the above mentioned decision, we learn from Buffalo papers that Judge Daniels would accept a re-nomination if it should be tendered him. We do not believe, however, that the people will be anxious enough to give Judge Daniels a gratituity of $7,200 a year for eleven years to induce them to re-nominate him.

As to the question of whether Allegany will be "in it," we see no reason why she should not be. We should give a pull long enough and strong enough to bring the nomination to this county, and the feat is not too difficult to be performed. Of course it is understood that the 'pull' should be for one man and for one only. Two or more candidates from this county would only prevent each other from securing the nomination. Unite on one candidate, and never yield an inch until he is nominated and elected, is good advice to the people of this county, and if they follow it Allegany will get the Judgeship.

PRINTER'S INK.

There are business men in every city and village in the United States who, although recognizing the fact that money well spent in advertising is one of the most profitable investments that can be made, yet have not a concise idea of just what methods should be employed to suit their particular cases, and who would gladly receive any information on the subject that might be available. For such as these, and for those also who think they know all there is to be learned in this respect, a publication called Printer's Ink has been established. It is published by Geo. P. Rowell & Co., 10 Spruce St., New York. These gentlemen have had over twenty-five years experience in newspaper advertising, and if there are any persons capable of giving instruction in the art of advertising, they are surely the ones, and they have called to their aid many contributors of large experience. The only fault that could possibly be found with Printer's Ink is that so much information is contained in a single number that a man is liable to think he needs to read no more, but when the next issue comes to hand, behold, here are other equally valuable points; and so on through the whole year. We believe that every man who carefully examines a copy of the Printer's Ink (and every man who receives one does that) will watch more eagerly for its coming than for any publication he receives. A reader of Printer's Ink will have his eyes opened to a new light, and will realize the things of which he has heretofore never dreamed. A man who spends $10 a year for advertising will find it as useful as the man who spends $50,000. It covers the case for either one. The subscription price is two dollars a year, single copies five cents.

New York State Alliance.

W. C. Crum, a native of Chemung Co., but for ten years a resident of Florida, has returned as state organizer of the National Farmers' Alliance. He bears the following credentials: Organizer of the National Citizens' Alliance, organizing officer of the state from the Florida Alliance, organizer of subordinate Alliances of the Colored Farmers' Alliance National Alliance from the state of Texas.

Mr. Crum says the Alliance in this state has been in a state of inactivity. It is now proposed, however, to push organization rapidly. The organization of the state will occur at Hornellsville, April 22. President Polk of the National Alliance will be present and direct the proceedings. Six million farmers are now enrolled, and ten million will be before the close of the year. With regard to the relations of the Alliance to politics in this state, Mr. Crum said that while it was non-partisan, any candidate who accepts the main principles of the Alliance will be supported. Mr. Crum is the editor and proprietor of the Wall Street Farmer, published at 143 West 4th street, New York, which he hopes to make the official organs.

SAVED BY A BRIDE.

While Riding on a Locomotive Cab She Averted a Terrible Accident.

R. J. A. O'Reilly, assistant superintendent of the Pullman Car company for this division, has returned from a flying trip to Portland. He brought with him a thrilling story of the narrow escape of the southbound Oregon express train from a catastrophe while rounding the picturesque horseshoe curve on the South in Pacific line a short distance this side of Sisson.

It was shortly after 7 o'clock on Sunday evening, he relates, while sitting with a number of gentlemen in the smoking room, they were thrown from their seats by a sudden stoppage of the train. The passengers, instantly calling to mind the fatal Salem accident, were thrown into a turmoil, but as the train seemed to be still holding together they stood up in their seats and breathlessly awaited developments. A minute later and the cars were at a standstill.

The conductor rushed out of one of the foremost cars, and, followed by a number of the more excited passengers, ran to the head of the train. There, lying scarcely three feet before the cow-catcher, lie found two bowlders, each fully three feet in diameter, in the middle of the track. With the aid of crowbars the obstructions were speedily removed.

At the point where the rocks were displaced the track winds along the edge of a precipice fully 400 feet in height, and should the engine have struck the obstructions the entire train would have been tumbled over, and nothing could have possibly saved it from destruction. The train consisted of some eight cars, including four sleepers, all well filled.

The danger was discovered in a rather peculiar manner. Frank Fox, an official connected with the operating department of the Southern Pacific, was riding in the cab of the engine, together with his bride, and it being a moonlight night both were leaning out of the cab window enjoying the picturesque scenery along the curve.

Mrs. Fox was the first to see the huge black object lying ahead on the track when the train was some forty yards distant. She called the engineer's attention to it, and luckily just in time for him to reverse the lever, put on the brakes and whistle "down brakes." Mrs. Fox was so excited over the sensations produced by the sudden stop that she was about to jump from the cab when her husband seized her about the waist and restrained her. It is customary for the track walker to inspect the way before every train, but whether he neglected his duty on this occasion or the bowlders were displaced from their lodgings after he had passed is not known.—San Francisco Chronicle.

They Try to Edge Out of It.

"Where do you live?" asked a business man of a customer a few days ago.

"Oh, up here a piece—well, just in the edge of W——."

After the man had left the store the merchant turned to the reporter and said: "I've been in business here ten years, and I'll be blessed if I ever yet heard a man own up to living fairly and squarely in that town. They either lie out of it altogether or else barely admit that they live just on the edge, you know." The reason for the evasion is that for years the town, as is the custom in some sections, has been picked upon as a butt for ridicule on account of the real or fancied sayings and actions of some of its people. Every rural joker and every traveling show give it a slap at every opportunity. Therefore one of its residents away from home feels like apologizing whenever he is compelled to give the name of his native town."—Lewiston Journal.

An attentive audience gathered in Prest's opera house last Thursday evening, to listen to a lecture on the Prohibitory Amendment, by Mrs. Barker of South Dakota. Costly Wreck Near Cuba.

One of the worst freight wrecks that has occurred in this vicinity in many years took place on the Erie road, two miles east of this village, at about 11 o'clock Tuesday night. It was a head-end collision, in which engines 563 and 577 came together with terrific force, and in the worst of all places—on a curve. How it happened that human life was not sacrificed is a miracle.

In the cabs of the two engines were five men, all of whom jumped and escaped serious injury, none of the crew of either train being hurt. When the engines met they reared up in a deadly embrace, and fell over on the south embankment. Many cars were derailed, some of which at once caught fire, and sixteen of them were entirely destroyed: The engines were a complete wreck. The cars were loaded with sugar, corn and tin plate. Wreckers from both directions were soon on hand, and the work of clearing the track commenced. This proved a long and tedious job, and was not completed until two o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The foreman of the wrecking crew said it was the worst wreck he had seen on this division of the Erie in five years. The estimated damage is placed at $70,000.—Cuba Patriot.
