MISERY FROM AN UPSET STOMACH VANISHES FIVE MINUTES LATER.

Why not strat now—today, and forever rid yourself of Stomach trouble and Indigestion? A disted stomach gets the blues, and grumbles. Give it a good eat, then take Pape's Diapepsin to start the digestive juices working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of Gas or eructions of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and Dizziness, and your food will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cent for a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of Indigestion and Upset Stomach in five minutes.

There is nothing else better to take Gas from Stomach and cleanse the stomach and intestines, and besides our triangule will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as a sound, healthy stomach would do it.

When Diapepsin works, your stomach rests—gets itself inorder, cleans up—and then you feel like eating when you come to the table, and what you eat will do you good.

Absolute relief from all Stomach Misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to begin taking Diapepsin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapepsin, because you want to be thoroughly cured of Indigestion.

Silver Medal Milk.

The silver medal for market milk at the national dairy show was awarded a dairy whose herd consisted of twenty-eight cows of mixed breeding, including Jersey, Holstein and Shorthorn grades. The barn is of frame, of ordinary type. The cows are fed a well balanced ration the year round. When the milk was produced for the contest the ration consisted of millet hay and cut corn stover, supplemented with corn and cob meal, dried brewers' grains and molasses feed. The milk was produced and handled in a cleanly manner, cooled and aerated immediately after being drawn and stored in spring water.

Exercise For the Ewes.

In order to insure a sufficient amount of exercise being taken, we feed our ewes in several large yards, which makes them travel back and forth a great deal, says a breeder. If an old pasture is near by, it is well to let them run out to it when the weather is mild and the grass is not too deep. This gives additional exercise, which is necessarily beneficial. Pure water and salt should, of course, be kept before the flock at all times; otherwise they will drink of stagnant water, which is sure to cause disease.

Up Before The Bar.

N. H. Brown, an attorney, of Pittsfield, Vt., writes: "We have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for years and find them such a good family medicine we wouldn't be without them." For Chills, Constipation Billiousness or sick Headache they work wonders, 25c.

Why the Difference?

With some concerns advertising cut prices on account of "dull times" and "over stock", our carpet Department shows a gain in business of 87 per cent. in February 1909 over February 1908.

The reason for this is the fact that we have had the best Carpet and Rug values that we have ever shown.

In January we received, what we supposed would be enough Carpet Size Rugs to carry us through the entire season. The fact is, however, that the entire line was practicaly closed out by the middle of March. Our buyer was forced to go to the market for more goods.

He found one, of the largest jobbing concerns with a big lot of fine rugs on hand. They wanted the cash and were willing to make a big sacrifice to close the entire lot.

The Result Was

He bought the Rugs at a liberal discount from the regular mill prices. Every one of these are this year's patterns and are perfect in every way.

The lot makes one of the best showings we have ever had and the prices are the level that have ever been quoted on the same class of goods.

Read every item carefully, then come and let us save you money on your Rug purchases.

How Advertising Benefited "Lostburg" and Paid a Syndicate.

VENTURE OF THREE HUSTLERS

Bought Up Whole Town and Outlying Lands in Remarkable State—Developed Water by Sinking Wells—Wonderful Change in Less Than Two Years.

Does it pay to advertise a town? Here is a true narrative that proves how greatly it pays. In this instance it has paid a syndicate of three men and the citizens of the town have profited inevitably, but if these same citizens had done the advertising themselves, as they might have done, the big profits would have gone to them instead of to the three outsiders.

In a western state there was an old town very much run down at the heel. It had had a fairly good population a years gone by, but owing to lack of interest in the home place among the people who lived there this old town gradually disintegrated, went to pieces got liver complaint or something and finally faded almost out of existence. Its population of 600 to 700 dwindled to less than 200. Grass grew in all the streets, so that the village cow had no need to go afield for pasture. It was fine for the village cow, but not so fine for the village men who owned the cow and who had to earn money there in order to buy milk from his cow owning neighbor.

There was a railroad that ran through this town. "Run through" is just what is meant. The trains ran through, on the through line, too, the main line, and now and then they heitated at the station to let off or take on a passenger who flagged the engineer. Train crews got to making this deserted village the butt of their jokes. They took joy in commenting upon the run down appearance of the place. They called it "Lostburg," because it had disappeared from the state map and was but an infinitesimal point on the railroad map.

The few remaining citizens used to go up to the "deepo" and watch the limited train speed by like a flash of chilled lightning on a stormy day. They would go up and sit beside the water tank and chat with the head brakeman of the local freight. The local freight sometimes stopped in Lostburg to get a drink. Be it known that the lost village was in one of the semiarid states, where water is scarce at the surface. The railroad people had "developed" water. They sank a well down about eighty feet and found a fine supply—just the sort that locomotives like to drink. The rest of the village drank the subsurface water, ten or fifteen feet under, which they could get at small expense. They used to sit around the tank and talk of the possibilities of Lostburg—if it only had more wells like the one developed by the railroad.

"Finest farming and orchard land in seven states around here," was the common expression, "but nothing doing because we hain't got the water."

"Why don't you get the water, then?" inquired a keen looking young fellow of about thirty-five who loped off the limited when it made a slight pause one day. He loped off down near the water tank because it was water that he was looking for in Lostburg and its vicinity.

"Oh, we don't just seem to take no interest," said the languid citizen who had made the "nothing doing" remark.

"Huh!" commented the newcomer.

The young man spent a week at the local hotel, which had not entertained a guest in six weeks. He went out into the surrounding lands and made investigations. Then he went back to the state's metropolis.

A month or so later the keen looking young man returned with two other men, older and just as keen. In six weeks' time they had bought up the town—actually bought the whole works, reasonably too. They bought also the outlying lands for miles around, so that they had a town and a tract surrounding it about five miles square.

Then they brought engineers to the place and developed water, just like the tank brand, here, there and everywhere. The wells flowed with wonderful regularity and volume. There was water enough in sight to irrigate the entire tract and plenty more on the outskirts, or, as the keen eyed young promoter remarked, "the underskirts."

"What happened?"

Do you ask it?

Just this. The syndicate sold back to the original owners in many instances their houses and lots at a big profit to the syndicate. They sold also thousands of acres of farm and orchard land. They set out thousands of orders of apples and other fruits for which the soil and climate were best adapted. They planted the plains to alfalfa and sold other acres to alfalfa hungry farmers. The result is that this town in less than two years has upward of 1,200 happy, satisfied, prosperous people, while several hundred more are developing farms near by.

Now the limited stops there because there is such an inrush of home seekers, land buyers, speculators and promoters.

The syndicate did all this by advertising. They paid for space in city and country newspapers. They plastered the plains with posters and deluged the deserts with dodgers.

"Might a done it ourselves if we had the grit," may say the water tank pessimist, who knew all the time that the country was underlaid with water.

Any town can boost itself by advertising itself. ROBERTUS LOVE.
