MISS MORGAN, CATERESS.

Financier's Daughter Tells of Restaurant For Navy Yard Employees.

With Miss Anne Morgan, daughter of J. Pierpont Morgan, behind it, there doesn't really seem to be much chance that a restaurant to be started at the Brooklyn navy yard on May 1 can be anything of a failure.

The financier's daughter is going to start it so the government employees will be able to get something to eat without going to saloons outside the navy yard Miss Morgan learned of conditions at the navy yard when she made a visit a year ago. It didn't take the energetic young woman long to get into communication with the government authorities, and they recently told Miss Morgan that she might go ahead and run an experimental restaurant.

The government will turn over a building formerly used as a machine shop, and this will be speedily equipped to accommodate 750 men. Miss Morgan will conduct the place as chairman of a committee of the women's department of the National Civic federation.

"I don't want to claim all the credit for this restaurant idea," said Miss Morgan quite modestly. "The whole women's department of the Civic federation is behind it. We want to show the government what a great advantage it will be to the navy yard employees. If we make a success of it we expect that the government will take the restaurant off our hands. Not only that, but we expect that other restaurants will be established in other places where they will be of use to government employees. We shall serve meals at the very lowest possible cost—just enough to cover the expense."

HARRIMAN ON HIS POLICIES.

Government Should Co-operate With Railroads, He Says.

ALWAYS FAVORS REGULATION.

Declares Ex-President Roosevelt Possibly Carried It Too Far—Blames Interstate Commerce Commission For Share In Panic—Denies Rumors of Ill Health and Retirement.

E. H. Harriman, president of the Union Pacific railroad, forcefully outlined his policy of the conservation and consolidation of railroads in an interview at Los Angeles, Cal., the other day. Mr. Harriman's initial remarks were a prediction of the remarkable development which he believes is to come to the west coast of Mexico, where he is building 1,800 miles of railroads. Asked about the extent of railroad building on his lines and the territory he would cover, he said:

"Our objective point is to connect with the Mexican Central, and about 450 miles of line will make this route complete. We went about seventy miles up the Yaqui river, into the mineral country."

"What is the attitude of the Mexican government toward capital?"

"Very liberal—very liberal, indeed. We found it so, and when anything unusual occurred we found we could always get very quick decisions."

"Do they have an interstate commerce commission down there?"

"No; they are quite intelligent."

"Do they try to exercise any jurisdiction over your operations?"

"No; they are very fair. They grant a charter and state just what you can do. I will let you into a little secret and will state that the conditions as brought about by my visit in 1901 are now in existence. At that time I asked them what they would do if I worked up a plan for them. They have that plan in operation now."

"Have they government ownership?"

"No; they have not so much government ownership as government partnership. I told them in 1901 not to make the mistake they have in America and build railroad lines at the expense of wasting capital without serving the country. I have always favored combination, and I believe that legislation will sooner or later be enacted in the favor of combination and forcing combination. By this I do not mean to remove individual competition. Everybody should have the same right to move what he wants over the lines. I have always been in favor of legislation. That is on record. The men looking for political preferment are doing all the talking and are misleading the people. Some of them are afraid to tell the truth for fear that their heads will fall at the next election. It is carried to such a length that finally the people think there is really something in all this talk because the other side has nothing to say.

"It is more or less the fault of the railroads that they have become discredited to such an extent as they have.

"Today it is even a conspiracy for the managers of railways to get into a room and talk of the relations of their lines to each other, and they can even be convicted if the fact can be proved. Such conditions have been carried too far.

"There should be co-operation between the government and the corporations. We can make no gentlemen's agreement any more. The law prevents, as I understand it. On the other hand, the rates have become more stable. Agitation against the railways has reached the point where a great many of the agitators are getting somewhat mixed up and afraid."

"Have you any reason to think that Mr. Taft will continue the same conditions as those brought during the administration of Mr. Roosevelt?"

"The Interstate commerce act was passed in 1887. There were regulations long before Mr. Roosevelt was talked of. The Sherman act was passed about the same time, I think. The idea of regulation did not originate with Mr. Roosevelt. It had become acute when Mr. Roosevelt came into the political field, and he was quick minded enough to see it and possibly carried it too far. I think the results have been rather disastrous. I think I said to Mr. Roosevelt in 1905 that he ought not to have the Hepburn amendment passed without having an amendment that would give the railroads protection as well as regulation. That was the time to have done it. We could have stopped all this-recent trouble if that had been done then.

"The fact was the interstate commerce commission was just as much at fault as the rebate payers and the rebate takers. They failed to enforce the original act passed in 1887 or 1888. This should be considered in a settlement of any kind—viz, that they are at fault as well as the railroads. Certain of the lines did not want to pay rebates, and still they have to bear their share of the blame. I do not think it is fair. I am not defending any particular corporation or any particular person, but this agitation, I am positive, caused the culmination of the panic in 1907."

Asked about his health and the rumor that he intended to resign, Mr. Harriman said: "I have not felt better in years, and my physician says that I am in good condition. Under those circumstances I have no thought of retirement. I am not going at work at 1 o'clock in the morning, as I used to, but I do work as hard as anybody, I hope."

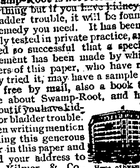
Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It is the cause of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root is recommended by druggists for every form of kidney trouble that makes you miserable, such as pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.



Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.
