WELLSVILLE CORRESPONDENCE

MR. EDITOR:—In all my travels I have never before passed through Canada or Michigan; permit me therefore to give you a few of my impressions in the shape of notes of travel.

There was just a little unpleasantness at the suspension bridge, and at Detroit, in the close examination of baggage by the custom house officers. They are more particular here than at New York. I remember that at Whitehall, N. Y., upon returning from Europe, my trunks were passed on nothing but my word, but here, every thing in my satchel was closely examined, even to a little medicine in an ounce phial. Perhaps it is necessary, but one strangely in this necessity, and the mind is led to consider the improvement there would be in having North America all under one government.

With the climate and country of Western Canada, most of your readers are familiar. In appearance it resembles Northwestern New York, having a beautiful rolling surface, with a rich and productive soil, well calculated to produce all the comforts of life. One would not think that by merely crossing the Niagara river that real estate property would go down in value 30 to 50 per cent., but it is a truth that land of as fine a soil on the Canada side is much cheaper than the land in N. Y., on the other side. It seems that with a four heavy debt and taxes that there is an attraction, energy, and power, in the United States that will always keep Canada in the back ground until she fulfils her "manifest destiny," and becomes a part of the great republic. A large part of her people are now looking toward us, and the same desire no doubt exists unexpressed in the minds of many more.

The greater part of the people were Scotch, at least the Scotch brogue predominated. Not that the broad Scotch of Burns was used, except by a few, but the tone and accent sounded like my own first efforts to speak good English. At one of the stations where we stopped 30 minutes, a good old Scotchman seemed anxious to crack about the "craps and weather," and old lang syne when he was a gallant, and it did him good to find one who could understand him. The very names of the villages made me feel at home. There was Hamilton, Bothwell, Dundas, and many others whose originals I had visited on the other side of the Atlantic. The canny Scotchmen, not so anxious for appearances as for the "siller," made the most of the Yankee travelers, and were sure to charge them as much in silver as they could buy the same things for in paper in the States, continually reminding them that paper "was ny gude" and that a dollar was only worth seventy-two cents. Not so boisterous in their mirth as we are, I well knew from what I heard in a journey of 250 miles, that they had all the Scotch fondness for a joke that had a point to it. In short Canada will one day make a desirable part of the United States, freeing us from a long line of custom houses, and worth to us a thousand Cubas which only would be a dead weight and a source of weakness. This desired event will take place, not by war, but through the desire of the people of the New Dominion, and the friendly consent of Great Britain.

Having bought a Toronto paper, and being anxious to read the news from England relative to the great question before the British Parliament, I turned at once to the page containg the foreign news. I was for a moment taken back at finding the first item headed "United States,"—there it was, almost in sight, and yet it was a foreign country.

The city of Detroit is a finely built [illegible] of its city is and avenues well compare well with almost any other city. The [illegible] of stone reminding one of cheaper than brick, has made it nearly a stone city, and adds much to its beauty. Pleasantly located on the Detroit river, the great highway between the lakes, it has built up a trade and commerce of foreign or New York. It has only one drawback but in our short visit we could discover, but that is the tremendous mosquitoes it raises. Although I slept under a net and supposed myself securely protected, I found in the morning that the net only gave a monopoly to the ten or twelve that pressed on me, giving me the appearance of having chicken pox for a week after. In the morning I tried to count them, and thought of killing them, but as they had done their work, I thought I might break the law against cruelty to animals.

The wheat fields of Michigan were the finest I have ever seen. It seemed that nearly half of the surface was covered with the finest winter wheat nearly ripe, and very large in its yield. In all my travels I saw less as Minnesota I saw nothing like this, and I felt that if I was a farmer I should settle in Southern Michigan in preference to any other part of the United States.

An amusing incident took place on the cars. An old gentleman full of fun and loquacity got into conversation with a young man who thought the South were very much abused in the rebellion. After a great deal of talk about the bravery of the South, the old gentleman told him the he knew he had not much courage, and that one look from a daughter of his would evaporate his courage. The young man came, was introduced, but sure enough, his reception was such that he beat a hasty retreat. SCIO.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.—We deem it a matter of duty and it is certainly one of pleasure, to notice the work of superior mechanics. A piece of work belonging to this class has just been completed in our village, that is deserving of more than a passing notice. We allude to the papering and frescoing of St. Paul's Church. The paper selected by the society, was an elaborate and expensive pattern, and the work of putting it on no small or easy job, by the way—was undertaken, and most successfully accomplished, by that old veteran in the business, Mr. D. W. Barnard. Mr. Barnard is certainly one of the best workmen that can be found in this section, for hanging of panelled and ornamented wall papers. Two of the largest pieces of that kind of work ever done in Angelica, (we refer to this last job and the Presbyterian Church) have been done by him, and fully sustain the commendations which we take pleasure in bestowing upon him. Our friends of the Episcopal denomination have reason to congratulate themselves, on the present improved condition of their house of worship. We believe a more pleasant and attractive structure cannot be found in this locality. Aside from the internal improvements above noted, some very desirable changes have been made on the outside; among which we may mention the new shingle roof, new fence, and new sidewalk. We are pleased to notice these unmistakable signs of prosperity, and we bespeak for the Society, that steady advancement in interest and accession, which it so eminently deserves.—Angelica Reporter.

To Wellsville is awarded the credit of being the most wide-awake town on the Erie Railway, and especially in wholesaling goods. Wellsville station receives more full car loads of merchandize, and ships off more than any other station on this line from Dunkirk to New York; and one firm here, of course it is hardly necessary to mention the name, for it is known, and has been proved by freight bills and bills sold and sent off so often, that C. H. Simmons, of the Regulators, is considered to be the leading wholesale jobber of this section, especially on flour and groceries. About two years ago Mr. Simmons made an extended trip west, and while there, made investments and contracts to sell and job flour for certain mills, and have the full sale of all their flour cast, and since that time flour has been jobbed in Wellsville and sold to nearly all stations on the Erie Railway, and largely by Mr. Simmons to the Buffalo and Dunkirk trade, at prices lower than the same could be bought in any other market in this section, and all that have used the flour sold by Mr. Simmons unite in saying that he sells better grades than can be got ground at mills in this section. He keep all grades from a superfine to the choicest white wheat, and is particular to represent all goods just as they are. Mr. Simmons also has one of the largest wholesale groceries; also dry goods and general merchandize departments in this section, and as he pays no rents and is one of the best buyers and judges of goods in this section, and saves on freight and all expenses, this establishment is the best for country merchants to patronize, as goods well bought are half sold. All goods of this firm warranted as represented, and stock kept full at Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 State and Main streets, Wellsville, N. Y.
