KILLED BY FUMES OF GAS

FATHER, SON AND TWO DOGS ARE FOUND DEAD ON THE FLOOR OF THEIR HOME.

Olean, Nov. 1.—George Russell, sixty years old, and his son, William Russell, twenty-six, were found dead on the floor in their home on Irving street yesterday morning. Two dogs were stretched out dead in the kitchen of the house.

The gas stoves in the house were burning, with all the gas turned on All the lights were on in the house and the hot plate was red hot. There was a strong smell of gas fumes in the house. The men and the dogs had been poisoned by carbon dioxide

A neighbor, who had not seen the two men since Friday night, looked in a kitchen window about 9 o'clock yesterday morning and saw the stiffened body of the largest dog near the kitchen stove. Suspecting that something was wrong, he asked the police to break into the house.

The officers found the body of the old man on the floor in the parlor. His son, William, lay dead in the doorway of his bedroom.

The men had come home on Friday night after a heavy day's work. It is presumed that they lighted all the fires for it was acold night. They fell asleep without turning out the lights or tending to the stoves. Then the gas fumes got in their work.

GEN. OLIVER O. HOWARD DEAD

Probably in More Battles Than Any Other U. S. Army Officer.

General Oliver O. Howard, last of the Union commanders of the Civil War, died at his home in Burlington, Vt. Oct. 26th, from heart disease. He was seventy-nine years old.

One week before General Howard was in Ontario delivering his lecture "Abraham Lincoln." His last public appearance was at Lenox Sunday night. On Monday he returned to his home in Burlington and apparently was in good health. While sitting in a chair at his home he was attacked by heart disease and was dead when a physician reached the house.

Including General Howard's services in the Indian wars he probably was in more engagements than any other officer in the United States Army. He was born in Leeds, Me. November 8, 1830.

The New Postoffice

Greenwood's new postoffice building is completed and Postmaster, G. M. Webster moved into his new quarters, this weke.

The office is roomy and well lighted and ventilated and has a large plate glass window in front. The side walls are painted yellow and the overhead ceiling is metal of a pretty pattern, while the floor is concrete and the whole is fireproof But few towns in the county can boast of a finer building for postal purposes than this.

Printing a Paper to Suit

HOW A NEWSPAPER WOULD BE RUN IF everyBORY IN TOWN HAD THEIR SAY IN CONDUCTING IT.

Commenting on a case in which the question arose as to what a newspaper really is, the American Press suggested that it would like to receive suggestions from its readers on that question. A Binghamton editor submitted the following suggestions on "What is a Newspaper?"

"A newspaper is the thing which every person in town knows how to should be an oven for 'roasts' on run except the editor. It is what every one except yourself, members of your family and a few of your particular friends, for whom it should be a sweet scented bouquet of praise.

"It is a promoter of profanity if it is not on the front porch when you get down in the morning, and what you tell the man who works on it isn't fit to go into a decent person's home.

"It is what the young man who borrows it from the saloon bar kicks about because it contains only one sporting page and which the woman tells her neighbor when she takes it back is not worth subscribing for because it has but one page devoted to fashion and making currant jam.

"It is what the merchant threatens to pull his ad out because he cannot have the run of the paper and what the old subscriber declares is going to the dominition bowwows because it is getting so that nothing but advertising can get a position in it any more.

"It is what you want to see the editor to keep your name out as soon as you have settled with the police justice on the morning after and to get your name into as soon as the cards are issued two weeks before.

"It is what is just too horrid and inquisitive for anything and 'please keep my name out,' when the reporter wishes to know about the bridge whist club and which is the mean old sheet that never gets anything right when your name is omitted from among those present.

"It is a subsidized organ when it fails to tell about the millionaire's wife running away with the coachman and a libelous yellow rag when it reports your police court trial for killing your neighbor's rooster.

"It is what is difficult to print so as to suit anybody and which would be nothing but eight pages of blank white paper with a headline if it were published to suit everybody."

The first official recognition of the approach of Christmas is given by the Postoffice Department in the following notice to postmasters: "The Department having been advised that postmasters are refusing to receive packages containing candy for delivery by parcel post, postal officials are hereby instructed that the prohibition against confections in the parcel post extends only to fruit preserved with sugar. Consequently candy not containing fruit is mailable by parcel post, providing it is so substantially packed as not liable to damage other articles in the same mail.

Mrs. Louie Hite, 428 Outlen St. Danville, Ill., writes, October 1st. "Foley's Kidney Pills started me on the road to health. I was treated by four doctors and took other kidney remedies but grew worse, and was unable to do my housework, and the doctor told me I only could live from two to six months. I am now so much better that I do all of my work and I shall be very glad to tell any one afflicted with kidney or bladder trouble the good results I received from taking Foley's Kidney Pills. Majority of the Democratic Senators Elected Results in Joy

STRONG REPUBLICAN DISTRICT

Judge Scripture Did Not Carry a Single One of the Six Counties in the District, While Vote in the Cities Was Particularly Strong Against Him—Rome Only Gave Him a Majority—Would Have Served Only Four Years If Re-Elected.

Utica, Nov. 3. — Justice William Scripture of Rome, the Republican nominee, was defeated for re-election to the supreme court bench in the Fifth judicial district by Edgar S. K. Merrell, county judge of Lewis county, who was the candidate of the Democrats and Independent Republicans. Justice Scripture's defeat was most decisive, the majority of his Democratic opponent reaching 15,000, which is most remarkable in view of the fact that the normal Republican majority in the Fifth judicial district approximates 25,000.

Justice Scripture did not carry a single one of the six counties in the district while the vote in the cities against him was particularly heavy. Utica gave Merrell 4,400 majority. Syracuse gave him 1,500 majority, Little Falls 770, Watertown 464 and Oswego 700.

Lewis county, in which Lowville, Judge Merrell's home village, is located, gave Merrell over 5,000 majority. Rome of all the cities in the district gave Scripture a majority rolling up 1,685 for him. This is due to the fact that Rome is Justice Scripture's home town. While it will be impossible to give accurate majorities in the district which comprises the counties of Onondaga, Oneida, Jefferson, Oswego, Lewis and Herkimer at present, it is conceded by Scripture's supporters that his defeat is far more decisive than was former Attorney General John C. Davies' in 1902. In that year Davies, as the Republican candidate in the Fifth district for supreme court bench, was defeated by 10,000 majority, his successful opponent, Watson H. Rogers of Watertown, running on an independent ticket with Democratic endorsement.

The defeat of Justice Scripture was a rebuke to him largely for his activity in political matters in Oneida county while holding the position of the supreme court bench. This political activity cost him more votes than any other issue raised against him, with the exception possibly of the charge that his allowances to attorneys appearing in litigation tried before him were too liberal and that widows and orphans frequently suffered in consequence.

In the case of former Attorney General Davies his defeat in the Fifth district in 1902 for the supreme court bench was also due in large measure to his activity in politics, the voters considering that politics and the administration of justice do not mix well, where the public welfare is concerned. Had Justice Scripture been re-elected he would have served only four years, the age limit then intervening. Judge Merrell is elected for a 14 year term.

INDIANS GO TO WASHINGTON

Carlisle Team Pretty Badly Used Up but Hope to Pull Out a Victory.

Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 3.—The Carlisle Indians went through a light drill today in preparation for the George Washington university contest at Washington on Saturday. The redskins will go to the national capital pretty badly used up but hope to pull out a victory.

Indian Coach Warner had his hands full with individual instruction to his ends and back fielders. The scrimmage which followed a light signal practice and easy going fundamentals showed remarkable improvement in Coach Edgar Windgard's scrub Indian team.

Democrats Get All County Offices.

Medina, N. Y., Nov. 3. — Orleans county goes Democratic for Wright, assemblyman, by 1,027 majority. This gives all the county offices to the Democrats, now equalling Schoharie county in that respect.

Majority Against Amendments.

Jamestown, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Chautauqua county elects to the assembly Augustus F. Allen, First district, and John Leo Sullivan Second district, and gives a substantial majority against constitutional amendments and proposition.

Democratic Mayor in Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Nov. 3. — Sam Lew Shank has been elected mayor of Indianapolis, according to unofficial figures from the entire city by a majority of 1,200.

Disfranchisement Amendment Beaten

Baltimore, Nov. 3. — Republicans have made handsome gains in Maryland and have defeated the disfranchisement amendment by a majority of over 20,000. Signed Felix Agnus, publisher, Baltimore American.

In the Heart of a Storm. New Land Sighted—Mid-Polar Basin a Lifeless World

[EIGHTH ARTICLE]

DURING two days of chilly blustor the sleds were forced along with encouraging results, and on the evening of March 28, with a pedometer and other method of dead reckoning for position, we were placed at latitude 84 degrees 53 minutes. The western horizon remained persistently undisturbed. A brisk storm, it seemed, was gathering, but it was a long time in coming eastward. On the evening of the 26th we prepared for the blast and built the igloo stronger than usual, hoping that the horizon would be cleared by a good blow on the morrow and afford us a day of rest. The long, steady marches, without time for recuperation, had begun to check our enthusiasm.

In the daily monotony of hardship we had learned to appreciate more and more the joy of the sleeping bag. It was the only animal comfort which afforded a relief to our life of frigida, and with it we tried to force upon the weary body in the long marches a pleasing anticipation.

In the evening, after the blocks of snow walled a dome in which we could breathe quiet air, the blue flame lamp sang the notes of gastronomical delights. A heaven given drink of ice water was first indulged in to quench the chronic thirst, and then the process of disrobing began, one at a time, for there was not room for all to act at once.

THE NEW LAND PHOTOGRAPHED.

Tea in an Hour.

The fur stuffed boots were pulled, and the bearskin pants were stripped. Then half of the body was quickly pushed into the bag. A brick of pemmican was next taked out, and the teeth were set to the grind of this bonelike substance. The appetite was always large, but a half pound of cold withered beef and tallow changes a hungry man's thoughts effectually.

The tea, an hour in making, was now ready, and we rose on elbows to take it. Under the influence of the warm drink the fur coat with its mask of ice was removed. Next the shirt, with its ring of ice about the waist, comes off, giving the last sense of shivers. Pushing farther into the bag, the hood was pulled over the face, and we were lost to the world of ice.

The warm sense of mental and physical pleasure which follows is an interesting study. The movement of the arms, the sting of the air, the noise of torturing winds, the blinding rays of a heatless sun, the pains of driving snows and all the bitter elements were absent. The mind freed of the agitation of frost, wandered to home and better times under these peculiar circumstances; there comes a pleasing sense with the touch of one's own warm skin, while the companionship of the arms and legs, freed of their cumbersome furs, makes a new discovery in the art of getting next to oneself.

In the Heart of a Storm.

On March 27 it blew a half gale at night, but at noon on the following day the wind eased. The bright sun and rising temperature were too tempting to remain quiescent, and though the west was still darkened by threatening clouds, the dogs were put to the sleds and off they went among the wind swept hummocks. We had not gone many miles before the first rush of a storm struck us.

Throwing ourselves over the sleds, we waited the passing of the icy blast.

There was no suitable snow near to begin the erection of a shelter, but a few miles northward was a promising area for camp, and to this we hoped to take ourselves after a few moments' rest. The squall soon spent its force, and in the wind which followed good progress was made without suffering severely. The temperature was 41 degrees below zero F. and the barometer 29.05.

Once in moving order, the drivers required very little encouragement to prolong the effort to a fair day's march in spite of the weather. As the sun settled in the western gloom the wind increased its fury and forced us into camp. Before the protection afforded by a newly heaping wind brush ed the hummocks and piled up the snow in large dunes like the sands of home shores.

The snow house was not cemented with water. The tone of the wind did not seem to indicate danger, and, furthermore, we were beginning to realize the great need of fuel economy. We therefore did not deem it prudent to use oil for the fire to melt snow, except to quench thirst.

Not particularly anxious about the outcome of the storm and with senses blunted by overwork and benumbed with cold, we sought the comfort of the bags.

Buried Under the Snow.

Awakened in the course of a few hours by drifts of snow about our feet, it was noted that the wind had burrowed holes in the weak spots through the snow wall. Still, we were bound not to be cheated out of a few hours' sleep, and with one eye open we turned over. Later I was awakened by falling snow blocks.

Forcing my head out of the ice incased hood, I saw that the dome had been swept away and that we were being buried under a dangerous weight of snow. In some way I had tossed about sufficiently during sleep to keep on top of the accumulating drift, but my companions were out of sight and did not respond to a loud call.

After a little search a blowhole was located, and in response to another call came Eskimo shouts. Violent efforts were made to free their bags, but the snow settled on them tighter with each tussle.

I was surprised a few moments later as I was digging their breathing place open to feel them burrowing through the snow. They had entered the bag without undressing and half emerged with shirt and pants on, but without feet.

After a little more digging their boots were uncovered, and then, with protected feet, the bag was freed and placed on the side of the igloo. Into it the boys crept in full dress, except coats. I rolled out to their side in my bag.

Move on Refreshed.

The air came in hissing spouts, like jets of steam from an engine, but soon after noon of the 29th the ice under our heads brightened. It became possible to breathe without being choked with floating crystals, and as the ice about the facial furs was broken a little blue was detected in the west.

The dogs were freed of snow entanglements and fed, and a shelter was made in which to melt snow and make tea. A double ration was eaten, and then the sleds began to move again.

Soon the sun burst through the separating clouds and raised icy spires in towers of glitter. The storm had ceased entirely, and a scene of crystal glory was laid over the storm swept fields. With full stomachs, fair weather and a much needed rest, we moved with inspirations anew. Indeed, we felt refreshed as one does after a cold bath.

The pack had been much disturbed, and considerable time and distance were lost in seeking a workable line of travel. Camping at midnight, we had only made nine miles for a day's effort.

Awakening in time for observations on the morning of the 30th, the sky over was found beautifully clear. The fog, which had persistently screened the west, had vanished, and land was discovered at some distance west, extending parallel to the line of march. The observations placed us at latitude 84 degrees 50 minutes, longitude 95 degrees 36 minutes.

A Long Coast Line.

In the occasional clearing spells for several days we had seen sharply defined land clouds drifting over a band of pearly fog, and we had expected to see land when this veil lifted. We had, however, not anticipated to see so long a line of coast. The land falls of snow, combined with the alternate melting and freezing of summer and a process similar to the upbuilding of glacial ice, are mainly responsible for the growth in thickness. The very heavy, undulating fields which give character to the mid-polar ice and escape along the east and west coasts of Greenland are therefore mostly augmented from the surface.
