Our boys in France are standing behind the lines waiting for their "crowded hours of glorious life."

The mold in which heroes were cast evidently still exists. General Haig was turned out from it.

* * *

Nat Goodwin doesn't seem to be able to impress his wives with the seriousness of the matrimonial tie.

* * *

The wheat crop will soon be coming up, but Congress predicts that it will not come up to $2.50 a bushel.

* * *

George Creel should make a fine volunteer for the trenches. He must by this time be immune to gas shells.

* * *

The President wanted an impression of tank warfare, but a less vivid one would have answered his purpose better.

* * *

"Nobody but the farmer knows how oats, peas, beans and barley grow," but the nation is getting a good idea how they taste.

* * *

The ladies, God bless 'em, have long worn beauty patches. Now the men propose to go them one better and wear utility patches.

The Hindenburg line is changing with disconcerting rapidity, but the bread lines in Germany keep their place from day to day.

* * *

Now watch the little brown hen do her bit toward relieving the meat shortage. She's one of the greatest little patriots among us.

* * *

It isn't to be wondered at that poor Emperor Charles yearned for peace. He is said to have a mother-in-law, as is a mother-in-law.

* * *

In calling Schwab to the shipbuilding job the Government is calling wide knowledge and trained experience. Our ships will sail.

"Digest of Food Prepared by the Government"—Headline. We don't need it. We'll attend to the digestion process if we can only get the food.

Liberty Bond subscriptions tell us
Kaiser Bill don't stand no chance;
We'll give till we wear behind us
Bigger patches on our pants.

Plant seeds in your war garden, plant your dollars in Liberty bonds. You will have to take care of the garden, but Uncle Sam will take care of the bonds for you.

Germany, having fixed the amount of the Allies' indemnity at one hundred billion marks, Foch and his armies are proceeding to inflict as many of the "marks" as possible.

Five hundred gallons of oil had to be applied on the hides of Ringling Brothers' twenty-seven elephants to get them ready for the summer season. Why not Hooverize on elephants?

Secretary Baker has doubtless smuggled thru a trunkful of new ideas on the military situation. He will declare them later, and we will gladly take care of the duties as our part of the transaction.

Political discussions are taking second place these days. What is the use of going so far afield for a topic, when even such a simple thing as a loaf of bread [illegible]

KEEPING BUSINESS "NORMAL"

We are faced by our leaders in this war, as a vital pre-requisite to the mammoth undertaking in which we are engaged, that we do our utmost to keep business normal. The request is a broad one and comprehends the whole scope of human character, in the concrete, as well as in the abstract; individually as well as collectively.

It is incumbent that we use energy and industry. This, tho, the exigencies of the times insure. The demands for the products of our industry are so great that none but the hopelessly slothful can consent to remain inactive. The pressure of human needs can generally be relied upon to guarantee a corresponding outlay of energy and industry.

But there are other equally as important human characteristics that must be considered, and among these we must give first place to unselfishness as opposed to self interest. We must learn to think in the mass, rather than as individuals. We must learn to shape our actions in the light of the public weal, rather than in that of the individual. The temptation is great for a spirit of selfishness and greed to dominate our lives. The opportunity was never greater for men in all lines of endeavor to make "killings" and "feather their nests," but we must bear in mind that this will always be done at the expense of the industrial health of the masses. In plain words, what we get out of the present commercial conditions will be a true gauge of our character. The man who emerges with unduly swollen bank balance may know in his heart of hearts that his country has been second in his thoughts and actions. It is the man whose entire thought and actions have been devoted to sustaining the commercial life and strength of his country, who will have the satisfying knowledge that he has measured up to the standard of a man.

"By their fruits ye shall know them" was never more applicable than in the present emergency.

MARGINS WIPED OUT

The United States has always heretofore been a land of plenty—in fact a land of surpluses. Up to two or three years ago we have always had a fair balance to run on at the end of each year, and had no need to practice real economy. There was plenty of every commodity, and a reasonable plenty of money with which to buy it.

Now the only commodity of which the United States has plenty is money. Of the things which money will buy she finds herself alarmingly short. Wheat, meat, wool, coal—the four great requisites of life, she is called on to conserve and to use as sparingly as possible. The serious phase of the matter is that in all these lines the erstwhile margins of plenty have been completely wiped out and in their place is a positive deficit.

It was estimated during the fuel saving period that the country was actually short fifty million tons of coal; that we lacked that much of having enough fuel to carry on normal activities. Practically the same condition prevails in the other lines.

What is the answer?

CONSERVATION!

Waste MUST be absolutely eliminated.

Production must be speeded up by every means in our power.

And wherever a substitute for either of these four articles can by any means be made to serve the purpose, it is the patriotic duty of every true American man and woman to make use of that substitute.

The time for discussing the war has passed. The problems growing out of the war are pressing for attention, and should be met as live Americans have always met the stern problems of life—with a smiling courage and a firm determination to solve them and solve them correctly.

The war must be won, so let every American say from the bottom of his heart, "We can and we will."

WAR SAVINGS STAMPS OF THE FOURTH ALLEGANY COUNTY

As is shown from the following statement, all the towns in the county have now registered sales of War Savings Stamps, except the Town of Allen, and steps are being taken so that Allen will be reported in the next statement of all the towns, having sold a War Savings Stamp. Up to April 20th, $120,000 worth had been sold, and it is expected that $130,000 worth will be disposed of before the first of May, which will leave our county a long way from the number of Stamps required to be sold before the end of the year. The Third Liberty Loan being now completed, it is up to every one to do his bit along this line.

It's rather puzzling to know whether it would be best to go by Mexico on our way to Europe, or wait and come by there on our return. That trouble spot is due for a visit before long.

"I've been fooling myself—I ought to Dig Deeper"

"YES—I thought I was patriotic. I thought I'd been doing pretty well. All the war relief funds, the different Liberty Loans, the excess profits tax—it seems like something nearly every week.

"I thought I had done my share!

"But have I suffered any? Have I sacrificed anything? Am I any worse off than before the War started?

"What have I done to deserve the sacrifice, the blood, the life of a single soldier or sailor?

"No—I have not done my share!—I am going to dig deeper for Liberty Bonds! I am going to give up something—get along without something that I want or need—I too am going to make a sacrifice! I am going to put more than I can spare into Liberty Bonds!"

Is This Year's Supreme Value

IT IS not a small car. The wheelbase is 120 inches—the motor is 40 horsepower.

It is not a stinted car, but a car which shows you extra values—unique values—in every part and detail.

It has the Mitchell strength and endurance. It has oversize parts, big margins of safety.

It has the costly steels, the wealth of drop forgings for which Mitchell cars are famous.

It has a power tire pump, a dashboard engine primer, reversible headlights, shock-absorbing springs. Also many other features which most fine cars omit.

It has finish and luxury far excelling any other car in this class.

How It Is Done

The more you know of present-day cars the more you will wonder how we sell such a car at this price.

The reason lies in factory efficiency. The Mitchell is built in a mammoth, model plant.

The entire factory was built and equipped under famous efficiency experts. Years have been spent to eliminate every waste.

Mitchell builds the whole car—chassis and body—under these ideal methods. And the savings are enormous.

Those savings pay for this extra strength, these unusual standards, this unique equipment and this matchless luxury.

Every New-Type Body

The new Mitchell line embraces 19 new-style bodies—the largest line that is built. So it exhibits every attraction known to 1918 cars.

Come and see how many rare attractions this new Mitchell line includes.
