Andover is a wide-awake town. Every one realizes that no more public spirited citizens can be found anywaere than we have. The civic improvements accomplished in the past six years would do credit to a village of many more inhabitants. Yet there are others which should be taken int consideration at once. The improvements have already paid for themselves in the new business they have brought us and the new inhabitants gained. It would be the same with a few others.

Of course there is the old fire-alarm proposition, which every one knows we need, and which the News has said more about than any other improvement ever advocated by it. It is like the poor, we always have it with us. Possibly it will take a few more practical lessons of its need before we awaken. Let us hope not. But there is another need almost as great, and one which would partly solve the fire-alarm problem if right, installed. That is continuous telephone service. Andover is the only village of its size in these parts that isolates itself from the outside world at nine o'clock p. m., to say nothing o the accomodation to all the subscribers of the telephone company. If we had the night service which we shoul have, and will have in the very near future, as the people are demanding it, with a very little expense a fire-alarm system could be had, thus giving Andover people two needed improvements at little cost.

Another matter that we should be thinking of is the matter of paving Main Street. It would cost no more to have Main Street paved and kept in fine condition the coming ten years than it has cost the village for the inferior maintenance of the present mud road system. Wellsville is still talking paving, and their progressive business men say that no improvement that has been made in recent years has increased trade more than the pavements. If so much paving is good for Wellsville, a little would be wise for Andover. There is no good reason why we should not have at least one street paved. It would be an economical thing to do to say nothing of the benefits that could not help but acrue from such an improvement.

Motorists will be at liberty to speed at will if a bill introduced by Assemblyman Robinson becomes a law. The measure proposes to amend the motor-vehicle law by striking out the definite speed limits and withdraw the power of local authorities to fix such limits. It sets the rule that the maximum speed should not be greate than is reasonable and proper, having regard to the traffic then on the highway and the safety of the public.

MUST PAY THE DEATH PENALTY

The Court of Appeals has affirmed the sentence to death in the case of Salvatore Bandazzio, Cattaraugus county, who is in the condemned row at Auburn prison for the murder of Pietro Bandazzio. Bandazzio was originally sentenced to die during the week of May 11, 1908, but the appeal to the Court of Appeals stayed the execution.

The Court of Appeals has fixed the week of March 15, 1909, as the date for the electrocution.

THE EDITORS REPLY.

An editor out west having been asked if he ever saw a bald headed woman replied. "No, we never did. Nor did we ever see a woman waltzing around in her shirt sleeves with a cigar between her teeth and running into every saloon she saw. We have never seen a woman go fishing with a bottle in her pocket, sit on the damp ground all day and go home drunk at night. Nor have we seen a woman yank off her coat and say she can lick any man in the town. No, God bless her, she isn't built that way.

ROOT AND HUGHES.

Trouble Makers Who Would Read Impossible Things Into the Senator's Speech.

Trouble makers have sought to read all sorts of things into Mr. Root's splendid speech and also to predict all manner of dire things. They will only have their trouble for their pains. There will be no differences of opinion between Senator Root and Governor Hughes, because there cannot be. Senator Root occupies a position essentially political in character; but he, like Governor Hughes, would not attempt to dictate to the legislature. Senators and assemblymen are deliberative public servants, and the governor recommends matters for their consideration. Moreover, Governor Hughes has no mind for details of practical politics, as many men have found out who have sought to make him recede from his rightful position as the chief executive of the state government and mix up in factional political wrangles. Mr. Root as United States senator will have to take more or less part in state politics, so it is but natural that so long as he does not shrink from leadership the several county leaders should welcome his advent.

It may not be overstating the situation to predict that before long Senator Root will have as compact and as effective a state organization welded together as Thomas C. Platt, easily the most skillful political general the state Republican organization had in recent years so long as he retained his physical powers. Cor. Ontario County Times.

AGREES WITH ROOT.

Albany, Feb. 8.—Vice President Elect James S. Sherman was a visitor at the capitol a few days ago and addressed the senate briefly. Introduced by Lieutenant Governor White, Mr. Sherman said in part:

"I read with great satisfaction the words uttered a few days since by him whom the state has honored by selection as a senator from this imperial and imperious commonwealth in the senate of the United States. I noted with great satisfaction that Mr. Root declared that he believed in political organization. I do not know that it will surprise those who have known me best in this body when I say that I am in accord with that sentiment uttered by Mr. Root.

"I believe that you honored yourselves as well as the state when you selected Elihu Root to speak for you and to represent this splendid commonwealth in that body which is recognized as the greatest legislative body upon this or any other continent.

"There has been much said, particularly in the recent past, in reference to the rules of the house of representatives. In my judgment, the rules of the house of representatives of the United States are the best calculated to do business of any code of rules adopted by any legislative body in the world."

SCHOOLS AND HOSPITALS.

Governor Hughes Advocates Improvement In Curriculum and Management.

I called attention not long ago officially to the great demand that there was for an increase in vocational training in our schools, to the large extent of school mortality, to the fact that we had so many of our boys and girls leaving schools before they had completed the course. It is a lack of interest.

It shows there is something wrong in the ordinary curriculum of the public schools. We must correct that. We must have better training for our trades, larger opportunities for boys to fit themselves for something that is worth while, and then to a degree we may aid in a work of prevention by giving an opportunity for more useful lives.

Reference has been made to the good of hospitals for advanced cases of tuberculosis. That is a subject to which I called attention in my annual message. It struck me with great force when it was brought to my notice. Here we were preaching hygiene to people of congested quarters of our great cities who could not carry out our instructions to save their lives. There they were herded together under conditions which defy ordinary measures of cleanliness, to say nothing of the extraordinary precautions to prevent the spread of this disease.

What a mockery it is to go down on the east side of the city of New York with charts and with various instructions as to the manner in which they should take care of the sick.

We have got to reach in with philanthropic hand and just pluck out those centers of infection and put them somewhere where they will be better taken care of than they can be in their homes and where they will no longer be a source of danger and injury to their neighbors. That is the way to deal with the subject.

I commend the work done at the hand of the last legislature with these efforts for the betterment of the people of New York state are quite ready that things should be done that ought to be done, and they have the money to pay for it, but they are very skeptical whether or not it will be done right, and all that we want to do is to be sure that we have got the proper program that can be defended, not now, but in a campaign when somebody is accusing you of extravagance.—From Address by Governor Hughes in Albany on Feb. 8.
