Inspiration Necessary.

A great deal of improvement work lags for the want of an inspiration on the part of some willing worker, and a large amount of effort is being expended from sheer force of will. Were it possible to combine inspiration and will and supply the combination on demand to every organization now struggling to improve its environment, what an impetus would be given to the movement in general!

Prevents Frozen Troughs.

When watering stock from a stock well bore a hole in your trough, sharpen a pin and use for stopper. Make a lead from trough back into well. If your stock fails to drink all the water pumped into the trough remove stopper and water will run back into well. Your trough will then never be full of frozen water.

REV. MR. MacLEOD, DEAD.

A Former Andover Resident and Pastor Dies at Greensboro, N. C. at St. Leo's Hospital.

Rev. P. M. MacLeod died Feb. 4, at St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro, N. C., where he was taken three weeks before, suffering with the weakness of old age and a general breaking down. He was 73 years old, and was born of Scotch parents in New Brunswick, but came in young manhood to the United States, where he has been a naturalized citizen for the past 35 years. Forty-five years of his life were spent in the ministry. For thirty years he was a Baptist and, for the last fifteen he was a Unitarian, but he has not preached for the last ten years. A number of years Mr. MacLeod lived in Andover, and was at one time pastor of the Andover Baptist church, going from here to the West. He went from there to Greensboro, N. C., three years ago to make his home with D. V. MacLeod, his only surviving son. He has one brother living.

Mr. MacLeod was always a student and a thoughtful man and spent his life in the service of his fellows. It was easy for his friends to see in his life of self-sacrifice the influence of pide reading and hard study.

The funeral was conducted from the residence of his son, Thomas G. Faulkner officiating. The interment was made in Green Hill Cemetery. He was buried with Masonic honors.

Memorial Address.

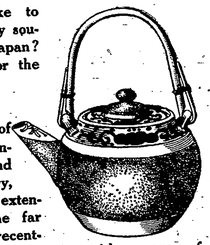
The members of Edward Seaman Post and Relief Corps of this village attended service in a body at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning, and together with a large congregation listened to a splendid sermon from the text "There was a man sent from God," given by the pastor, Rev. H. D. Bacon. The address was a fine one and we are to give News readers an opportunity to enjoy it too. On account of space the sermon could not be published this week, but will appear in next week's issue of this paper.

Notice.

The members of the Andover Rebekah Lodge are requested to meet at the lodge rooms at 6:00, Sunday evening for the purpose of marching to the Presbyterian church in a body.

Cannon Brothers

WOULD you like to have a dainty souvenir from far-off Japan? If so, it is yours for the asking.



Here is the story:

Chase & Sanborn of Boston, the largest importers of Teas and Coffees in this country, have of course very extensive interests in the far East. Their agents recently shipped them in conjunction with a cargo of their teas a few thousand as per our illustration. They are designed for individual rather than family use, having a capacity of perhaps three or four cups.

As Chase & Sanborn's local agents we have from them fifty of the teapots for presentation to the users in this section of their Teas and Coffees. We will distribute them impartially to the first applicants, our only stipulation being that you must prove yourself to be a bonafide patron of their products, and so they will be presented in conjunction with a purchase of Chase & Sanborn's tea or Coffee or both together. Full details regarding the assortment of the Chase & Sanborn line which we carry (the quality of which is unsurpassed anywhere in the world) will be gladly supplied to all interested to call.

If you wish to procure one, do not delay in availing yourself of this opportunity.

LETTER FROM L. A. BULLARD

A FORMER ANDOVER MAN MOVES STILL FUURTHER WEST. LOCATES IN PORTLAND, OREGON.

(Written for a So. Dakota paper.)

I will greet my old neighbors and write to them through the medium of the Herald and give you a little sketch of our trip to Portland.

We started from Sioux Falls, at 2 P M., Saturday, November 28, with fine weather. Snow began to fall as we neared Sibley. About two inches of snow at that point, and the farther we went the more snow we found until it became to dark to see. We were in northern Kansas in the morning, and there it looked as if it had rained all night. We did not like the looks of that part of the country. Few improvements were seen, no shelter for stock cattle out in the cold rain with their backs humped up so high they looked more like camels than cows. The towns we passed through were as a rule very poor. No large buildings, in fact they were what one might call "shanty towns." There seemed to be no ambition among the people, and we had no desire to stop there "not even for a day." In western Kansas we again found lots of snow and more falling. We reached Colorado Springs Colorado, at two o'clock in the afternoon, and soon were busy seeing the sights. One of the most interesting trips we took while there was to see the "Garden of the Gods."

The scenery there is beyond description. Language can scarcely express the sublimity of it all. There is rock pushed straight up out of the earth 423 feet and so small at the base that one wonders how they can possibly stand. Then you will come to masses of rock that look like the ruins of some great temple. As one wanders among the great red domes of rock it causes a feeling of awe to take possession of him and to almost wonder if some great and powerful spirit is do not make them their abiding place

After viewing the beauties of nature in Colorado, we again started and went by the mountain route to Salt Lake. This is a trip no traveller will forget. Our train had two powerful engines to draw us up the mountains through great canyons and tunnels and over gorges. In places the rocks towered above us thousands of feet, and on either side of the car were so close you could stick your arm out of the window and reach them. As you look at those great rocks you can almost imagine that they tremble as the train thunders by and wonder how long before some of those huge masses will topple over and crush into the bowels of the earth some train with its load of human freight—and that is just what will happen some of these fine days. As we said the scenery in the Garden of the Gods was beyond description, so it is on this trip over the mountains.

When we reached the great divide on top of the mountain, we were 10,240 feet above sea level. That was getting pretty well up to heaven, and we are not sure but what it would have been a good plan to have staid up while we were there; but we made up our mind to chance it with the rest so—here we go down the other side with all breaks set and all steam shut off—and we go sliding down to the valley thousands of feet below. The grade is so steep that—should the brakes fail to work—not one person on the train would reach the valley alive. Our train stopped on the way down to let another train coming up pass us. Here we got off to take a look around, and as we (I, myself, I mean) looked under the train, we saw that all the brakes looked blue like very hot iron. We touched a finger to one of them, but we took it away a good deal quicker than we put it there, for they were almost red hot from the terrible friction caused by holding the train to a safe speed. However, we descended the mountain all right, and went across the great Salt Lake basin to Salt Lake City, where we stopped for another day to see the sights. First we viewed the Great Salt Lake—one of the wonders of the world. Its water is so salty that if you put 100 pounds of it in a tank and let it evaporate, you will have 26 pounds of salt left—in other words the lake is 26 per cent salt. Next we viewed the Morman Tabernacle, another of the modern wonders of the world. It is an immense auditorium, oval in shape and seats between 8,000 to 10,000 people. It is 250 feet long by 150 feet wide and is 80 feet in height. This self-supporting wooden roof is a remarkable piece of engineering. It is ten feet thick and rests on pillars of red sand stone built ten or twelve feet apart around the whole building. These pillars support wooden trusses or archers ten feet in thickness and spanning 150 feet. This great roof is built without a bolt, nail, or spike. It is put together with wooden pins and then wound with rawhide. There is not a post or pillar of any kind inside the building to support this massive roof. In this building is one of the largest pipe organs in the world This organ was built right where it now stands and mostly out of native wood. The front towers of the organ are 48 feet high and the dimensions are 80 by 33 feet; it has 110 stops and contains a total of over 5,000 pipes ranging in length of from one-fourth inch to over 32 feet. There is no other instrument in the world like it. There are 500 singers enrolled in the choir—the largest church choir in the world. There is something very mysterious about the building in its reproduction or carrying of sound. You can stand at one end of the building and plainly hear a pin drop over 200 feet away, and the very lightest whisper can be heard anywhere at a distance of 200 feet. No one has been fully able to explain this mystery.

After looking over the wonders of the city we again boarded the train for Portland. After leaving Salt Lake we went to Ogden. There we change cars and took the Oregon Short Line, and as we passed along through the country we saw several places where steam was raising in large quantities from the earth and on inquiring found that the steam was from boiling springs. At one place we passed a small lake the water in one side of the lake being so hot that you could cook eggs or potatoes in it. We were glad to pass this place without stopping very long for it made one feel as if he were getting pretty close to the "old man himself"—and you know that it isn't advisable to come in contact with him too soon. But we got past all right and reached Portland in safety, and found a very pretty city of about 250,000 people. The suburbs are especially beautiful with thousands and thousands of large fir trees, and nearly every yard has roses and other flowers still in bloom in them. This is a very progressive city. Improvements going on all the time. And everywhere you go you will see new houses going up and one wonders where all the people come from to occupy them. We like it here fully better than we expected. We have already met several families here from South Dakota and that makes it seem more like home. They don't have near as much rain here as we expected. There are many days clear and bright. Some frost came, but not enough yet to kill the flower what are the wild waves saying sister and one can go out and pick a nice boquet every day. We have rented a house for a year, with a number of fruit trees and berries in the yard. Well we guess we have written enough for this time so will close with best wishes to all my old friends and neighbors.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you all.

Yours,
L. A. BULLARD,

Spoke About Boys.

Mr. Smith, Secretary of the Young Men's Christain Association of Hornel gave an address at the Methodist church Sunday evening. Mr. Smith is an earnest speaker and his talk was on good practical lines concerning the boys of to-day. The boy's Clubs of the village attended the service in a body and while there was a fair audience it did not speak well for the fathers and mothers of our village that so little interest in the subject was shown by them. Surely if our clergymen are willing to take the lead in providing a place where our boys can be safely trusted to enjoy an evening's amusement, the parents should be willing to back them with hearty support.

To Our Friends.

By a vote of Andover Lodge, No. 786, I. O. O. F., we extend hearty thanks to those who contributed to and patronized our recent Fair.

We are especially grateful to those who furnished entertainment.

Committee.

LANE ROGERS TERRIBLY MANGLED

DIED MONDAY NIGHT FROM INJURIES RECEIVED WHILE RIDING FREIGHT TRAIN MONDAY AT BELVIDERE.

Thomas Lane Rogers, the sixteen-year-old son of Erie Engineer William Rogers, of Hornell was fearfully mangled by an Erie freight train at Belvidere, Monday afternoon, which resulted in his death a few hours later.

The young lad had a bad habit of riding freight trains, which ultimately resulted in his death. Monday he went to Wellsville on a freight train, and got his dinner at Henry Reuning's bakery. The Reunings are old friends of Mrs. Rogers and they tried to persuade Lane to return home, but he insisted he was going to bum his way to Salamanca. The sleet storm made it exceedingly dangerous for boarding a train, even standing still, and the lad took extreme chances. He evidently jumped a west bound train and went as far as Belvidere. There he dropped off and tried to catch an east bound train, probably intent on returning to his home in Hornell, but fell under the wheels and had one leg and arm cut off.

The freight crew side tracked their train and with an engine and cabose made a hurried run to Hornell, where the unfortunate lad was taken to St. Mary's hospital. There he died at 9:45 Monday night.

Lane was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Rogers, of Hornell, and a nephew of Charles Rogers of this village.

The remains were taken to Wellsville on Erie train 25 Thursday noon, and burial made at Woodlawn Cemetery.

Hawthorne Club.

A delightful evening was enjoyed by the members of the Hawthorne Club at the pleasant home of their president Mrs. F. S. Clarke, Monday night.

Each lady was requested to furnish a valentine in response to roll call, after which they were given the problem of translating a series of anagrams arranged by Mrs. Clark. Miss. Waterbury secured the prize in having the larger number correctly solved. The company were then invited to the dining room which presented a most attractive appearance, where an elaborate luncheon was enjoyed. As they bade their hotess good-night it was remarked that this evening added another number to the list of pleasant events enjoyed by the Club.

Look For Announcement.

Rockwell Bros. & Co., of Wellsville are soon t inaugurate a great 30 day Furniture and Carpet Sale and will make it a decided object for people to come from Andover and surrounding places to take advantage of it. Watch the News.

If it's to be printed bring it to the News office.

GEO. F. HALL IN "THE AMERICAN GIRL."

A Play that Has Stood the Test of Time and Appeal of Heart Interest Season after Season.

Speaking of the play which is announced for presentation at the auditorium Wednesday evening February 24th it has been said that the title "The American Girl," with a male star as the feature of the attraction, seems a misapplication. To a certain extent this appears to be so. While a strong story of intense heart interest centers around an American Girl and her twin children, there is so much of unctuous comedy and irresistable effusiveness, coupled with the vigor and dash of a typical American hustler, in the character of Ross Bolter, as portrayed by Geo. F. Hall, it sweeps everything before its overwhelming flow of rapid-fire talk, quick repartee and general attractiveness, so that the part has come to be most important in the play. In the three seasons he played it, Mr. Hall has become a universal favorite and gained for himself a large following who will no doubt gladly welcome his reappearance as the irrepressible Ross Bolter.

A play that has stood the test of time and carried its appeal of heart interest for season after season must necessarily have elements that go to please a wide range of theatre-goers. So it is that the announcement of "The American Girl," with Geo. F. Hall in the principal comedy role, is always anticipated with pleasure.

The play is too well known to need extended comment. With the assistance of a good supporting cast—and it is said that Mr. Hall has never had a better one—theatre patrons are assured of an entertainment more than worthy the low scale of prices established for the engagement to be played.

Much interest always attaches to the two children who play exacting roles, and Gracie Brackman and Laura Hathaway are said to be decidedly clever as Prince Roy and The Little Lady.

Seats go on sale Saturday noon at Calhoun's. Prices 25, 35 and 50 cents. Cannon's Orchestra will furnish music.

Jefferson Saunders.

Thomas Jefferson Saunders whose death occured last week at his home in Franklinville was one of the organizer of the Colored Masonic lodge of Olean, and was a 33rd. Degree Mason. His parents were both slaves. He was supposed to have been about seventy-five years of age. During the war he served in Co. A. 20th colored regiment.

Deceased often spoke with pride of the fact that when the present King of England, then the young Prince of Wales, first visited Canada as a young man, he was living at Ingersoll, and was delegated to go to the hotel where the Prince was stopping and shave him.

Donation Visit.

A donation visit for the benefit of day and Friday.

Rev. A. L. Boynton, pastor of the Baptist church, will be held at the parsonage, Wednesday evening, February 24th, 1909. Supper will be served from 5:30 until all are served. All are cordially invited to attend.
