FORTUNE [illegible] IN AUTO.

How One Farmer [illegible] Found It.

"My met[illegible] is by keeping [illegible] thrives. [illegible] by trial a [illegible] New York [illegible] farm is ten [illegible] est railroad [illegible] to impossible [illegible] it was so [illegible] my butter and eggs and it keeps that it didn't seem worth while.

"I used to be always wishing we could get money the [illegible]. It seemed to me that if we could only get where city people would be willing to come in the summer our fortune would be made. I have always been a good housekeeper, and my husband is known all through our part of the country as a good provider. Some people used to say that was the reason we never could get rid of the mortgage on the farm.

"The children and I had all but persuaded him to sell out and move to the village when our eldest daughter suggested opening an inn for the automobiles, who were continually stopping at our place for water and other little things. My two daughters set at work and brightened up the house and yards. Then they put out a sign at the crossroads and another on the front gatepost stating that we were prepared to furnish meals and lodgings for small parties.

"Then small parties soon began to come in, and they have been increasing in size and number ever since. At first there were only two rooms in which we could accommodate those who wished to remain overnight, but as my children have married off three more have become available.

"Yes, both my daughters have married since we turned our farmhouse into an inn four years ago, and during the last year both sons married also. That leaves me alone with a niece to look after the inn, while my husband still devotes himself to the farm.

"From the first our object in keeping the inn has been to brighten our home and add to the value of the farm. The house is old fashioned, and besides the kitchen there are eight rooms. They were very bare when we began to take in automobilists, but now, thanks to the money that they have left with us, there are not many farmhouses in this part of the country where you would find more books and more comfortable furnishings.

"One of the boys took a course at the agricultural college of Cornell university, and the other could have done that also if he hadn't preferred the Institute of Technology in Boston. As soon as he finished there last summer he took a job that was waiting for him, and then he got married. His specialty is electricity, and he wired our house and put in electric bells almost two years ago. That is one of the conveniences we would never have had if we hadn't opened the inn.

"We don't pretend to give our visitors anything fancy to eat—just the things raised on the farm well cooked and served. My niece has studied domestic science, so she knows how to cook by the new methods, while I can do about as well as the next one with my old recipes.

"You mustn't think we have had things all our own way. Several farmers who live near the road have put out the inn sign, and some of them have a good business, but as we began first and have kept our place up to the standard the visitors have continued to stop with us instead of going to neighboring inns. Besides, we haven't tried to change our house very much, only to freshen it up and make it more comfortable.

"I have found that what folks want when they come to the country is good country eating. That is what we give them at our inn—a plenty of it and with fresh, clean linen and china that is washed and polished until it shines. We no longer have a mortgage on the farm, and we have money in bank."

Monkeys Apt Pupils at College.

That a monkey can learn something new every day, although the only people with whom it comes in contact are college professors, is said to have been demonstrated by the department of psychology in George Washington university, says a Washington dispatch. Experiments have been conducted upon twenty monkeys, and interesting data are being arranged for publication.

Flying Yacht For Lipton.

Sir Thomas Lipton, in a letter to friends in Milwaukee, declared that he will soon take to the air instead of trying to conquer America at the yachting game. It is hinted that he may offer a trophy for supremacy in navigation of the air, which will give Britannia a chance to compete with America on even terms.

TO LAY OUT ROADS.

State Commissioners Will Visit Each County For Conferences.

The State Highway Commission announced today that it proposes holding meetings in each county of the State in the near future at which opportunity will be afforded citizens of the several counties to present their views as to the location of thirty-seven state routes for which the law provides, consisting of roads running north and south and east and west across the state. The entire cost of this improvement is to be borne by the state instead of the state and county. In a few cases the law specifically designates the roads to be improved.

Burial of Editor Frank S. Whitford

The body of Frank S. Whitford arrived in Alfred Saturday from Boulder Colorada, and the funeral was held at the home of his mother, Mrs. Sophia Whitford, Sunday afternoon.

The service was conducted by Rev. L. C. Randolph assisted by President Boothe C. Davis of Alfred University.

A large attendance was president at the funeral, to pay the last tribute of respect to one who held the love and esteem of the entire community.

Owing to the fact that Erie train 12 was 4 hours late it was impossible for many of Mr. Whitford's brother editors to attend the funeral.

Modesty Forbids

A well meaning citizen is a book to a newspaper reporter and it is a notable fact that many good items are lost to a newspaper every issue by the modesty of people who hesitate to tell the editor of matters concerning themselves. As remarks an exchange. The right thing to do is to stop the newspaper man on the street, or any place else you may happen to meet him, and tell him you have entertained friends, have been on a visit or anything that is a matter of news. If you have done anything mean keep it to yourself for he already knows that. There are others who make it their business to tell that. It would be a fair exchange for the facts he don't print, to occasionly give him a few that he could.

Strangled

Behind locked doors, March 10th the Judiciary committee of the assembly smothered the Hill-Tomlins concurrent resolution for a constitutional amendment, blotting out the word "male" from the state Constitution.

So the gallantry of the gentleman in their thoughtfulness for the feelings of the women of New York state, is truly touching and delicate "we don't want to hurt the feelings of the women, so the members all are sworn to secrecy as to who voted against the resolution". In the vernacular of the street, "What do you know about that".

Boy's Views on Father's Sermon

Dr. Thomas A. Hoyt, the Philadelphia pastor entertained President Patton of Princeton and other eminent men at dinner. The guests were speaking in praise of a sermon the minister had preached.

Dr. Hoyt's young son was at the table, and President Patton said, "My boy, what did you think of your father's sermon?"

"I guess it was very good," said the lad, "but there were three mighty fine places where he could have stopped."

Does It Pay To Advertise

It would appear that some firms believe in it, when the rate for advertising in some of our magazines is considered with the fact that they are not wanting for patrons.

"Ladies' Home Journal, $7 per line, $5,000 per inside page; inside cover pages, $8,500 and $7,000 for the back cover. Saturday Evening Post, $5 per line, $3,000 per inside page; inside cover, 3,500, and back Covers, $3,500."

Forness Re-Elected.

President F. W. Forness, Jr., was re-elected President of the Village of Allegany, Tuesday. His majority over his opponent, John Laubenthum, was 80.

Mr. Forness is well Known in Andover, where he has relatives and friends who congratulate him upon his success.

SOME CHIPS AND SPLINTERS.

the earliest settlers in this country. He located on what is now called Vinegar Hill, and later, the title to his farm came into controversy. This was because of an early dispute among the aborigines, as to whose great, great, grandfather caught the first muskrat in that vincinity.

Now, according to traditions of the aboriginal tribes, whoever caught the first muskrat and sold its skin thereby established his right to name all the surrounding country.

This right was claimed by each of two tribes, and the contest waxed hot and was warmly waged by the head man of each of the tribes. Much argument followed, but in the end the courts finally decided, that the territory in that vincinity should be called Vinegar Hill.

This was an act of justice on the part of the courts and ever after, Columbus enjoyed peacable possession of his property on Vinegar Hill.

It did not make any material difference to the community at large whether the first muskrat was caught by an Ojibway, or a Choctaw, by a Pequot, or a Pottawotomie,

So, after the decision of the courts, peace reigned over the land.

In proof of the foregoing, the following extract was taken from the second chapter of an early history of America; which was found by one of the early settlers on Vinegar Hill. The history was found in a hollow stump, on Vinegar Hill, and on the estate formerly occupied by Christopher Columbus.

If there should be any doubt as to the genuiness of the history, its authenticity would seem to be fully established by the signature of Columbus himself, which appears on one of the fly leaves of the history, THUS.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS
HIS BOOK 1492

1492. All students of history will remember 1492 as the date when Columbus settled on Vinegar Hill. Furthermore, the cashier of the assistant cashier of the Second National Bank, either, or both of them, will readily recognize the signature as being that of Christopher Columbus. It is an essential part of their business as officials of the bank to be able to verify a signature at a glance. They will both substantiate the statement that it looks as much like the signature of Christopher Columbus as any they ever saw him write. They are probably as familiar with the signature of Columbus as any of the young men of the present day are likely to be.

Columbus always saved all his checks after they were returned to him from the bank.

He did so because the shoemaker once tried to make him pay twice for tapping his rubber boots.

It is not generally known that Columbus used to drive a stage when he first came over, and later historians do not mention the circumstance, but when men are writing histories they forget things sometimes. It was a pretty tough road that Christopher had to drive over, for the pathmasters were careless and did not give proper attention to their duties and the money system had not yet gone into effect.

Christopher, sometimes used to let some of the old chaps ride on the front seat with him, and, it was from one of these old chiefs that he first heard what a nice country it was around Vinegar Hill.

The old chief that told him about it did not wear creased trousers, and a four-in-hand, and his wife had never had a pair of high-heeled shoes on a merry widow hat.

They did not wear many clothes because they had to wade around in the water to catch frogs and fish for the children; and then they would dry off so much quicker, when they crawled upon a bank and laid down in the sunshine. The name of this chief was, Tariff for Revenue Only.

He was a very nice old fellow who used to give away a lot of alligatorpears, so he was sometimes called Free Silver.

In conclusion, then; The fact that the history was found where it was: (in a hollow stump); and the farther undisputed fact, that Columbus was the earliest settler on Vinegar Hill, would seem to establish beyond a doubt the genuineness of this history. Of course, it is to be supposed that Columbus traveled about the country some, before he finally settled down. The extracts from the 2nd chapter of the history are as follows:

Christopher Columbus,
Used to live on a mountain
When this country was new,
Lots of woods were full of alligators,

LINCOLN LETTER

Written to the Methodist Conference And Never Published Until Now.

At a local meeting last night George S. Dail read from the original a Lincoln letter not published since the time of writing. It was written to the Methodist General Conference at Baltimore, May 1, 1864, upon being assured of the loyalty of the Methodist church in his prosecution of the war. The letter was kept by Bishop Morris, secretary of the conference, and later given to Judge E. G. Dail of Springfield Ohio. The letter follows:

"Gentlemen in response to your address, allow me to attest the accuracy of its historical statement; endorse the sentiments it expresses, and thank you in the nation's name for the sure promise it gives. Nobly sustained as the movement has been by all the churches, I would utter nothing which might in the least appear invidious against any. Yet without this it may fairly be said that the Methodist Episcopal church, not less devoted than the best, is, by its greater numbers, the most important of all.

"It is no fault in others that the Methodist church sends more soldiers to the field, more nurses in the hospital and more prayers to heaven than any. God bless the Methodist church—God bless all the churches, and blessed be God, who, in this, our great trial, giveth us the churches.

"A. Lincoln."

Fired at Trolley Car

As the 8 o'clock trolley, on the run from Olean to Bradford, approached the cut through the hill at Knapp's Creek March 9th., twelve miles from Olean, the motorman saw a man with a mask on his face standing under an electric light at the cut.

The fellow shot at the approaching car. Throwing on the current, the motorman dropped to the floor. As the car shot through the cut, two more shots were fired at the car one of the bullets lodged in the wall a few inches over the head of one of the six passengers.

Deputy Sheriff Osterhoute and the police chief went on to Knapp's Creek. They entered a house and pulled young Arthur Lawton from bed. Under the bedclothes was a a revolver with but one full chamber. black mask and under the pillow was a long-bladed stiletto.

The youth admitted he was the fellow wanted. Lawton was conveyed to the Olean lockup, and the following morning removed to the Little Valley jail. He is about 25 years of age.

A Startling Motto

A traveling salesman died very suddenly in Pittsburg. His relatives telegraphed the undertaker to make a wreath; the ribbon should be extra wide, with the inscriptioon "Rest in Peace" on both sides, in the Little room, "We Shall Meet in Heaven."

The undertaker was out of town, and his new assistant handled the job. It was a startling floral piece which turned up at the funeral. The ribbon was extra wide and bore the inscription, "Rest in Peace on Both Sides, and if there is Room We Shall meet in Heaven."—Inland Printer.

Mrs. Arlie Drake, of Sharon, Pa., who pleaded guilty to cruelly beating little Irene Marvin, made a plea of guilty a few days ago in court at Coudersport and was sentenced to pay the costs of prosecution, a fine of $100 and severe eight months in the Potter county jail. And had the sentence been eight years in place of months it would not have been to severe.
