Once Again

Memorial Day once again will soon be here and all the tender memories of loved ones departed will pour again to millions of minds where the day is observed. The day has taken to itself a wider meaning than at first intended and not only the old soldier will remember the comrades of the days agone, but all people will remeber departed loved ones or friends, and that is well, is a splendid custom and one that will grow as the years pass, to honor the dead. In this hurry and push it is well to stop and meditate. We do not, as Americans, do it often enough. The spirit of rush, called so often "Americanitus," catches us, the hallowed memories, and the debt we owe the living of the past years, escape us, or is seldom thought about. And there is the old soldier, not so many of them as there were a year ago. The stooped shoulders, the halting step all too plainly indicate to us that many of the familiar faces on our streets will soon be gone. We will then go to the grave and scatter flowers, and that is well. But, flowers for the living, kind words and boquets are more appreciated by live folks than dead ones. Give them now. How? You ask. Well, by entering heartily into the observance of the day that recalls so many tender and precious memories. Let the old soldiers see your interest, give them the word of cheer, let them know that you appreciate all that they secured for you in the old days of long ago. It's an old story some would say. Yes of course it is. There are many hearts that will feel the anxieties, live over again the old days, and feel the thrill of those anxious times, the privileges that are ours, the United States unbroken, we owe to men of the 60's and as the day comes once again let us remember the dead. Put flowers on their graves, but better than that, give the kind words and boquets to the living and once again the heart will feel the pulsations of kindness and the world will be brighter and better and for some, life worth more, and the desire to live greater.

Cleaning Day

A new idea has evidently come to the minds of some of the people of the larger places and a day is set apart each spring as a cleaning day. The idea originated in one of the Western cities a year ago, and this year was taken up by many of the larger municipalities. One day each spring is set apart for a general time of house cleaning (as the women would say), of the back yards, lanes, and alleys of city or village. It is a capital idea and one that is bound to catch fire and spread. There is something contagious about such an idea. It arouses a village pride and the inspiration of all working together at a given time certainly brings about results that would not otherwise be attained. Andover is indeed fortunate, our use of natural gas relives us of the unsightly piles of ashes so often and generally seen in the coal burning districts, and in many other ways we are able to pat ourselves on the back and smile because we are relived of many of the things that make life in other places more burdensome. But, after all, the idea of a general clean up would be a good thing for the village. Old refuse is bound to accumulate and it is surprising how much of it will accumulate in a short time, and a village cleaning day would be an education to the younger ones to keep the streets clean. Perhaps some public spirited organization would provide receptacles to be placed on the corners to receive the old papers that would otherwise litter the streets. Finely mowed lawns and carefully painted building are splendid for visitors to observe, but how often the effect on the mind is destroyed by streets littered with papers, or spattered with spit, a menace to health and outward evidences of lack of good breeding. Let us have a cleaning up day, then keep cleaned up. It will be good for the health, pleasing to the eye, and cause visitors to remark on the beauty and public spiritedness as evidenced in clean streets as well as the beautiful residences of which our village can be justly proud.

NORTH SIDE NEWS.

Earl Bassett met with a painful accident last Friday, while springing blades at the Cutlery factory. He left a knife in the vise and stepped upon the bench to open a window. In getting down he placed his hand palm downward on the point of the knife endeavoring to support himself on the vise, and the point of the blade severed an artery.

J. A. Platts laid the ball of his thumb open on a piece of steel, while pressing blades, Saturday.

Dan Witter, of Grove street, who has been confined to his home for some time, is reported on the gain.

Mrs. Wm. Galutia, of Baker street had the misfortune to fall down the steps leading from the walk up to the house, Sunday. Though quite severly shook up, she escaped without serious injury.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Berman are nicely located in their new home on Rochambeau Avenue. They are a welcome addition to our section.

Leo Stevens cuts quite a dash with his new turn out, but a man that can catch fish and pigeons at the same time is entitled to the best there is going.

We expect and hope to see the Stamping Works boom this summer.

A heavy frost, Monday and Tuesday nights in the valley.

The pond bids fair to be the Coney Island of Allegany County, this summer.

A few of the North Siders are contemplating a fishing trip to the wilds of Potter County in the near future. Uncle Dudley says he will show Leo Stevhens what trout are when they return.

John Armstrong is convalesing at his home on Grove street.

Horace, How are you?

Erie Station Turned into Bill Board

People who have occasion to go to the Erie Station will find its appearance altered considerable. The exterior of the depot having been transformed into a huge bill board, where on gaudy and more or less artistic advertisements are displayed.

At every station the available wall space on the exterior of the building is transformed into a bill board and big signs are placed all over. Small village stations are "beautified" with only three or four.

A New York concern has leased the space and will thus decorate all of the stations along the Erie. While from an artistic point of view the result is said to be a little discouraging, especially in cities where campaigns are under way for the beautifying of the city, there is a good flow of coin into the Erie treasury as a result of the scheme.
