Andover Grange Notes

Conducted by C. A. Robinson.

There was a very good attendance at the meeting of Andover Grange, Wednesday evening, June 9., and the interest, manifested was exceptionally good.

The following program was given Paper, the regular bi-monthly edition of the "Grange Budget" by Mrs. Myrtle Mingus, It was very interesting and spicy.

A recitation by Mrs. Matie Robinson, followed by a numerous encore.

Conundrums by Mrs. Wm. Dodge.

Recitation by H. E. Robinson followed by an encore.

A discussion of the subject of which causes the more crime, Riches, Poverty, or Ignorance, was participated in by a large number and was very interesting to all. Some quite strong arguments were given and result was a close thing between riches and ignorance.

The roll call of the membres, which called for a response of a saying or short story was very unique and enjoyable.

The un-married people of the grang furnished ice cream and cake, and to say that all did justice to this part of the program is stating it very mildly.

Special mention should be made of the grange cake made, frosted and ornamented by Bro. Edson Langworthy, which was not only fine in looks but also in texture and flavor.

An exceptionally good time is being planned for at the next meeting June 23rd.

CLASSICAL COURSE AT HOME

"CLASSICAL COURSE" MADE EASY—CHAUTAUQUA HOME READING DEPARTMENT DOES IT.

If skepticism is challenged at all by the Chautauqua proposal to "give the college outlook" through a four-year course of spare-minute reading in plain English, the challenge will arise in "classical year." How can the riches of classical lore, which have always been the coveted reward of patient studious toil, be achieved by people of little previous training with the effort of twenty minutes a day for a few months? The answer is that they cannot—not altogether. But perhaps it would be well to ask what these Chautauquans mean by "the college outlook", what we ourselves should properly mean by the phrase if we were to use it, whether this "outlook" may be arrived at so shortly, and whether when reduced to its actual meaning it is a thing worth making a great to-do about anyhow.

"Chautauqua does not profess to make scholars in a fortnight," says a recent official statement. "What it does profess is to give an impulse and a lift in the right direction; not the exactitude and exhaustive knowledge of the scholar, but the broad outlook of a cultured mind may be given, and intellectual faculties may be kept vigorously alive." This is like spying out the land, getting an introduction to its language, and becoming no longer a stranger to the inspiration of its outspread views and larger hopes. Maybe something like this can be made possible for plain people with the time and means at their command. The question is worth serious asking.

"Classical Year" in the C. L. S. C., which comes round every fourth Chautauqua home reading year is scheduled for 1909-10. The four books now announced (they are never twice the same, it appears) are "The Greek view of Life" by G. Lowes Dickinson; "Social Life at Rome," by Homeric Stories," illustrated translations of Homer's Iliad and Odyssey, and "The Friendly Stars" by Martha Evans Martin. In The Chautauquan Magazine there is to be a popular "Reading Journey through Egypt" by Professor James Henry Breasted of Chicago, a series on "Historic Types of Architecture," and a really notable series by George Willis Cooke on "Woman in the Progress of Civilization." There is nothing in this whole list that an ordinary citizen cannot read by his fireside—his radiator, perhaps we should say—or on a car-seat. It demands no lexicon nor thick spectacles. Yet it really presents a great deal of that broad survey of life and culture which means liberal education and for which we are indebted so largely to classic times. It deals consciously with "life," not with dead ruins or dry-as-dust survivals from antiquity. "The Greek View of Life" is presented largely by extracts in translation from the great writers of significant comment and persistent worth-while comparison between the ancients and ourselves. Much the same may be said of "Social Life in Rome" which of course is devoted, not merely to Roman analogies with the modern realm of pink teas, but to the social institutions of the Roman state. The place of the Homeric Stories along with such a group need hardly be discussed. As for Mrs. Martin's book, "The Friendly Stars," it might be appropriately given with any C. L. S. C. year and would, we believe, be fascinating to intelligent readers whenever given. It is neither technical nor difficult, and it prepares one to make real companions of the most familiar stars.

Taking it altogether we believe the course is one that a person of limited early advantages can read; and certainly it would reveal to any such person things undreamed of. The college graduate and even the scholar, on the other hand, will find no ground on which disdain it; and for the ambitious student the way is pointed to a great deal of collateral reading beyond the estimated twenty minutes a day of required work.

Four such years devoted to Classical, British, American and modern "Continental" subjects clearly might do what the Chautauqua course is reputed to have done for numerous thousands.

STOP RAILROAD DISTURBANCE

Railway Business Men's Association Claims it's Injuring Business

The efforts of the Railway Business Association an organization consisting of business men who produce and deal in goods which are mostly bought by railways, are entirely justifiable. This organization appeals to State Legislatures, Cautioning them against the passage of laws which must be disturbing to the railways and their allied interests. The organization does not in any way attempt to obtain favorable legislation but considers always the principal of justice for all, and just because of this principle desires to prevent hasty legislation, which may not only be of no benefit, but act injuriously, if not declared invalid by the courts.

The demands of the organization are entirely proper for two reasons. First, all legislation adverse to railways must affect all industries depending upon them, and the extent of these industries can be appreciated when one realizes that 1,500,000 hands are employed by them, upon whose earnings 7,500,00 people are dependent; in the purchase of rolling stock, in the construction of sufficient terminal stations, freight depots etc., so that when the longed for revival of business conditions comes along the roads will find themselves in the same unpleasant situation as in 1906 and 1907 of not being able to handle their work quickly enough.

The Railway Business Association has in its effort the approval of 52 of the most important Chambers of Commerce and similar organizations in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Pittsburg, Baltimore, Boston, Indianapolis, etc., who have perceived the value and the justification of this agitation. This is most pregnantly expressed in the resolution adopted by the National Association of cotton manufactures in which the Board of Directors are asked to represent to the Legislatures, in the face of the extended improvements which are needed for the handling of railway traffic, to make careful inquiries before passing laws which might hamper the roads or in any way hinder them in the development of their business.

The demand is not unjust, especially when one considers the repeated court decisions which have declared these measures invalid. The trend of the times has changed. The mad attack which in consequence of a misunderstood reform-movement was directed against everything which went by the name of railroad or corporation, is seen to have been purposeless, and it is recognized that we cannot deal a severe blow to a large factor of the commercial commonwealth without affecting seriously the rest of it, as well as the workingmen.—New Jersey Freie Zeitung.

PHILLIPS WILL NOT ACCEPT

STATEMENT MADE BY JESSE S. PHILLIPS AS TO THE DEPUTY ATTORNEY GENERAL MATTER.

I have this day declined the position offered me by the Attorney General. In reaching this conclusion I have been guided largely by what I believe to be my duty to the constituency which I represent and which has honored me with an election to the Assembly for the past nine years. Since it has been rumored that the position of Deputy Attorney General had been offered me, I have received various communications from citizens of my own district and outside of the district, urging me not to resign from the Assembly, and many have written me requesting that I accept a re-nomination.

My term of office does not expire until January first, 1910, and the people who have elected me have a right to insist that I serve them for the entire period for which I was elected, ordinarily, the duty of a member ceases with the adjournment of the regular session of the Legislature. This year, however, various committees have been appointed and I have recently been named by the Speaker as a member of the joint committee to investigate the question of Direct Nominations. This is an important subject, and the question wether our state should adopt it has given rise to considerable discussion and honest differences of opinion.

As a member of Assembly, I do not care to evade any responsibility nor to shirk any duty which may be imposed upon me. I greatly appreciate the recognition which has been given me by the Attorney General in offering me a position in his office. The integrity, great ability and legal experience of Mr. O'Malley and the character and ability of his assistants have brought the law department of the state to a high standard of efficiency, and the privilege of being associated with such men is not only an honor, but would in my judgment be a positive benefit to any man. It is therefore, with some reluctance that I have decided not to accept the position. Having given the matter careful consideration and realizing that the acceptance of such a position would require my whole time at Albany and that I would be compelled to give up entirely my private law practice, and in view of the urgent requests which have been made by my friends, and of the duty which I owe to my constituents, I feel that it is only fair to them that I remain in the Assembly and assume the work on the Committee to which I have been assigned.
