PINGREY HILL.

Saw your paper had no Pingrey Hill news, and thought that may be you would like to hear from me.

All is peace and harmony, the last of the week, not a skirmish of any kind.

Everything looks fine, crops and fruit of all kinds that we raise here.

Farmers are done planting. Now comes the trouble to attend the potatoes and cut the hay. One reason we farmers are bothered for help is our long days. Get up at half-past four or five o'clock in the morning, work till five or six in the afternoon. Then chores, Sundays too, we have to work, taking care of the stock. If we could only get help the times were never better for the farmer. High prices for the farmer. Every one who buys knows their cost.

STROKE OF PARALYSIS

Horace D. Eaton Has a Shock and Lies all Night on the Hillside.

Horace D. Eaton, of Alfred Station, suffered a stroke of paralysis Monday evening and is in a critical condition. Mr. Eaton went to his farm about three o'clock Monday afternoon to clean out a spring. He failed to return home for supper and about ten o'clock his wife became so alarmed that a searching party of about a dozen men was formed and the entire farm was traversed from then until about six o'clock Tuesday morning when Frank Sisson's bird dog went into the brush and came directly out and ran to Mr. Sisson and acted in such a manner that Mr. Sisson decided the dog had found something in the brush, so he went where the dog had been and found Mr. Eaton lying where he had fallen, with his limbs around a log, feet crossed and left arm bent back and across his back. He had evidently been there twelve hours or more. He was conscious when found and was taken to his home.—Alfred Sun.

Mr. Eaton expired Sunday morning from the effects of the shock.

ANOTHER BEAR.

A Black Bear Seen Near the Station Tuesday Morning.

About daylight Tuesday morning while out searching for H. D. Eaton, Frank Sisson and Fred VanCampen came across a large black bear. The bear raised itself on its hind legs, gave them one look and scampered across the hill through the barbed wire fence, leaving some of its fur on the barbs of the fence. None of the searching party were armed so no chase was given. Later in the forenoon a hunting party was made up and Bruin was faithfully hunted all the day with the result that his whereabouts are still unknown.—Alfred Sun.

102 YEARS OLD

Franklinville Has a Woman of Remarkable Age.

Mrs. Anna Stackman, who lives with her son in the Homer Frank house on Elm street, in this village, celebrated her 102nd birthday yesterday.

That is not a typographical error or a mistake of any kind if the aged lady and her son are to be believed. They are positive in their assertion that Mrs. Stackman was born June 24th, 1807, which means that she has now a nice start on a second century an experience which falls to the lot of but few humans.

She was born in Germany, and came to this country 24 years ago, locating on a farm at Fancy Tract in the town of Machias. She came to this village some eight years ago. Her husband died about 15 years ago, and according to the son was 105 years old at his death.

She has several sons and daughters living.

Mrs. Stackman at her advanced age is enjoying very good health, and her mental faculties are preserved to a remarkable degree. She is able to do the house-work for her son, and only the other day she was out with a scythe and did a little patch of mowing the way she did in Germany in her younger days.—Chronicle.

RIDES LOG TO HIS DEATH

JOHN MEAD OF LEBAM MEETS INSTANT DEATH IN A PECULIAR MANNER.

John J. Mead met with accidental death in Page Soule's logging camp last Saturday. The sad accident occurred after working hours, and while the men were returning home from their day's toil. The last turn of logs was being hauled in and some of the men were riding on one of the logs. It was not unusual for them to ride on the logs while they were being hauled across the flat on top of the hill, but before reaching the landing the road makes a more rapid descent, for a hundred yards or more, and is called the chute, from the fact that the logs will usually run to the landing from that place and will sometimes gain a lot of speed in doing so. No one had ever undertaken to ride through the chute because it was considered too hazardous an undertaking. It would be regarded as a miracle of miracles if one should ride through there without injury or death. On the fateful evening the men who were riding on the logs all got off at the head of the chute except Mead. His companions had expected, as a matter of course, that he would also get off, and when they noticed that he remained on the log they gave a warning cry and used every means in their power in an attempt to get the unfortunate man off the log, but it was now too late. The log had already entered the chute and was fast gaining speed. Other logs were trailing close behind, rushing and bumping the log he was riding. He could not get off. Those who were unwilling witnesses to the sickening tragedy realized at once that the man was doomed. They knew that his only chance, however slim, was to retain his hold on the log until it reached the landing far below. Could he possibly remain on the log? They hoped that he could, but they knew that he could not. They were powerless to help him. Had the fate of the whole world been in the balance they would have been powerless to act. Rooted to the spot, hoping against hope, dreading with sickening dread, they watched for the catastrophe they knew must follow, and which soon came. The poor man was soon unseated by the bumping of the trailing logs against the one he was riding, and falling into the chute was instantly crushed to death.

The terrible news was soon conveyed to the town and caused a shade of gloom to spread over the entire community. The sorrowing wife was almost prostrated with grief, but loving hands ministered to every want and a flood of sympathy poured out, but the sympathy of friends goes not far to assuage the grief of great and sudden bereavement.

The deceased was born in Greenwood, N. Y., on the 6th day of September, 1879, and would have been thirty years old at his next birthday. On the 8th day of June, 1904, he was joined in marriage to Miss Amelia Baker, who survives him. Besides the grief stricken wife, he has at Lebam one sister, Mrs. W. P. Burdick, a brother, Lester Mead, and a host of friends to mourn his untimely death. In New York state he has a father, three sisters and three brothers.

He was a member in good standing in the Lebam lodge, I. O. O. F., and his fraternal brothers are rendering all the assistance and comfort possible to the afflicted relatives.

During his two years' residence in Lebam he had acquired a very comfortable home and it can truthfully be said that he was highly respected in the community.

On Sunday the earthly remains were shipped to the undertaking parlors at Chehalis, it having been planned to delay the funeral until after the arrival of the New York relatives. But these plans were changed, and on Tuesday the casket was returned and buried in the Lebam cemetery. The funeral was under the auspices of the Odd Fellows and was very impressive. Every place of business in town was closed and every logging camp in the vicinity was shut down for the day. Services were held in the M. E. church, the Rev. Dews conducting the service. There was a large gathering of friends at the grave to pay a last tribute of respect to the memory of the departed.—Willapa Harbor Pilot.

A Pension Horse

A faithful Government servant has been recognized and rewarded by Ormsby McHarg, Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Labor. This servant is an old horse named Caleb, which for twenty-four years has devoted his energies to pulling a wagon belonging to the United States fish commission at Green Bay, Me. Last week, after a serious attack of boils, he showed his inability to serve the Government any further by lying in his stall and refusing to be harnessed.

The officers at Green Bay, knowing that the animal's days of usefulness were over, reported the fact to the Department of Commerce and Labor and asked for a new horse, also expressing the intention of killing Caleb. This report fell under the eyes of Secretary McHarg, and he immediately issued an order that the faithful animal be placed in the pasture until he had a natural death. This is one of the few cases on record in which a horse had been placed on th Government's pension rolls.

BABY DROWS IN WATER PAIL

Fell Head Foremost into Bucket and Died Before Mother Could Rescue Her.

Falling head fore-most into a pail of water, the little fifteen months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Dudley, well known farmers of Bath, was drowned, June 26. The accident was a most peculiar one.

The little girl was toddling about the house and porch and having a good time. For a minute the attention of the mother was attracted elsewhere and she left the room. She came back a minute later to find the child with its head in the pail of water that had been standing on the porch. She seized the child quickly and saw she was still alive. In spite of every effort, however, the baby died in her arms a minute later.

It is suspected that the child fell and its head went beneath the water and being unable to help herself she drowned in a few seconds. The family are well known and the mother is heartbroken.
