To Kill Flies

The London "Lancet," the leading medical journal of the world, says "that the best and simplest fly-killer is a weak solution of formaldehyde in water (two teaspoonfuls to the pint), place in saucers throughout the house. It has no offensive smell, is fatal to disease organizers, and is practically non-poisonous except to insects. Ten cents worth will last an ordinary family all summer."

THREE MILE MARATHON RACE FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF ALLEGANY COUNTY

The Wellsville Fair Association have made arrangements to give a Three Mile Marathon Race for the championship of Allegany County at the coming Wellsville Fair. This race will be for a purse of $50, same to be divided among the first three successful contestants, 25 to first; $15 to second, and $10 to third. The only condition of this race is that there must be at least five starters. This race will be held on Wednesday afternoon, August 25th. Allegany County has many fast runners and this race will create a great amount of interest. More detailed information in regard to this race may be had of O. E. Jones, Assistant Secretary. Watch the papers for further announcements.

BEFORE NOAH'S TIME.

Remarkable Collection of Antediluvian Remains Discovered.

The Academies of Science has asked the city counsil for an appropriation to be used in developing a remarkable deposit of bones of antediluvian remains in the asphalt beds near Hollywood.

There have been exhumed so far complete skeletons of a giant sloth, an animal almost as big as a street car; several saber-toothed tigers, a prehistoric lion of the African type, but larger; a camel; three species of prehistoric wolves; a horse that seems to have been larger than any that exists today; giant eagles and condors; a large number of miscellaneous rodents; a small, prehistoric cat the skull of a bird larger than an ostrich and portions of skeletons of elephants.

The greatest find was the skull of an extinct species of buffalo, or prehistoric ox. So far as known there is not another like it in the world.

Changes in the Vital Statistics Lew.

The recently adjourned Legislature amended the sections of the Public Health Law relating to vital statistics and burial permits. The amended law requires that a certificate of birth be filed with the register within thirty-six hours of the birth.

The amendament relating to death certificate reads as follows: "It shall be the duty of the physician last in attendance upon any person who may die to fill out a certificate of the death and the probable cause, and duly certified to same and deliver the certificate to the local registrar of vital statistics within twenty-four hours after the death occurs. In case an inquest is required by law, the coroner or the coroner's physician shall fill out the said certificate, and if no inquest is required and no physician has been in attendance, the certificate shall be filled out, setting forth the circumstances and probable cause of death, by some reputable person known to the officer issuing the burial or transit permit, and the said person shall also make affidavit to the facts set forth in the certificate of death."

This amendment, it will be seen transfers the duty of filing of a death certificate from the undertaker to the attending physician.

Mrs. Young Honored By Chicago Educators.

The superintendency of Chicago's great school system has been given into the hands of a woman for the first time in its history. Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, principal of the Chicago Normal School, and an educator of national reputation was chosen July 26th, by the newly organized boards of education as head of the public schools.

Mrs. Young is 64 years old and was born in Buffalo, N. Y. She has been teaching since 1862. She was district superintendent of schools for Chicago from 1887 to 1899 and professor of education at the University of Chicago from 1899 to 1902. She is the author of several books on educational subjects.

German Joke on England.

Official Washington is chuckling over the latest bit of diplomatic gossip from London. The Anglo-German unrest, the phantom airships which hover over the channel and the Dreadnought building race all give point to the story. Here it is:

The military attache of the German embassy at London attended a performance of the sensational military drama, "An Englishman's Home," which was written to show the woeful military unpreparedness of England against a German attack. The next day a friend, hearing that the German officer had been to the theater, asked him what play he saw.

"I don't remember the name exactly," he replied, "but it should have been called 'What Every German Knows'."

HORSE WORLD OF TODAY.

The United States government is trying to preserve the Morgan horse of half a century ago and also establish a type of carriage horse distinctly American. While the importation of horses from foreign countries continues year after year, yet there is constant and continuous demand for the American heater for carriage and saddle purposes. The preserving of the Morgan horse is to provide a family horse. The government's work is being carried on in different parts of the country. The Morgan farm is at Middlebury, Vt., and experiments also are being made at the Colorado State Agricultural college.

A MORGAN STALLION.

Only two crops of foals have been obtained in the Morgan work. The aim at the Vermont farm is to preserve the Morgan type at its best, keeping the splendid conformation, spirit and endurance for which these horses were famous and eliminating the tendency to coarseness, heavy withers and low backs. A careful effort will also be made to improve the action by getting away from the choppiness and irregularity in gait and particularly to eliminate the tendency to pace and mix gaits.

Horse Values Keeping Up.

The Western Horseman says: Horse values in the country, right out in the farming and horse breeding districts, are but little short of prohibitive, the purchase of a nice driver, carriage horse or farm team requiring a "roll of money"—the like of which a few years ago would have answered for "first payment" on a good quarter section farm. And yet some brood mare owners say they "can't pay the price" to breed to good, fair stallions. Think of it—horses higher than they ever were; the country well supplied with really classy stallions, many of them superbly bred and with race records all the way from 2:20 to 2:03, standing at $15 and $50, and yet some—many—brood mare owners complain that they cannot afford to patronize good stallions.

Speedy Horses Wanted.

The manager of one of the largest horse selling establishments in the United States says that one of the noticeable effects of the introduction of automobiles has been to greatly increase the demand for speed in the fashionable carriage horse.

"People get used to going fast in their cars," he says, "and when they come to buy coach horses they all want a bit of step—a good bit, I may say. Next to conformation it is the first thing they look for. If a horse can't step away the dealer is wasting time to show him in most cases, for the customer won't buy. Showy action was the main thing only a few years ago, but 'get there,' seems to be the watchword with everybody now. Of course the best horse is and always has been the one that combines speed and action, but speed comes first."

Back to the Horse.

Two large New York department stores have recently decided to discard the auto for delivery work and have ordered horses suitable for this purpose. The animals are being purchased in the middle west. This is due, it is said, to the fact that the managers of the delivery departments of these two big stores have found that automobiles are not only more expensive to maintain, but that they have lost the advertising power they had when that service was inaugurated. There was a time when the automobile was a novelty and when the New Yorkers would "sit up and take notice" when an auto delivery wagon appeared on the streets. Now no more attention is paid to it than to the street cars. On the other hand, a fine pair of horses always attract attention.

Barn Ventilation.

Every barn should have a system of flues or, if they are too expensive, cotton windows. More trouble of garget and udder disease results from sudden drafts than from any other causes. In the outgoing flue the area should be in proportion to the number of cows, about one square foot to a cow, and should be opened at the top of the barn. Inside the barn the opening in summer should be up high and in the winter lower down. The incoming flues should have the same area, but there should be more of them, necessarily making them smaller. The air should come in from the outside near the sills and into the barn from under the eaves.

Giving the Horse Rest.

Remove the harness from the horses at noon, when they ought to have a full, free rest. They will feel better and work better. At least once during the day, preferably at night, give them a thorough currying and grooming. This will enable them to secure the full benefit of the night's rest and will aid materially in keeping them in good health and thrift.

A WEEK OF TALKS AND DEMONSTRATION BY LEADING PROFESSORS FROM THE AGRICULTURAL SCHOOLS.

The Wellsville Fair Association in co-operation with the Wellsville Business Men's Association, has arranged an entirely new feature for the Great Wellsville Fair of 1909 that will appeal to every farmer, livestock grower, dairyman and gardener in this section.

A week of practical talks and demonstrations by a corps of the ablest Professors and Instructors from the great State College of Agriculture at Cornell University and the State College of Agriculture of Alfred combined with an elaborate exhibit from Cornell that will be of practical aid to the Agriculturalist in overcoming the ravages of insects and disease, to help them to grow better and more valuable crops and to raise better horses and livestock.

Short talks and demonstrations will be given morning and afternoon of each day of the Fair. The State Agriculture Professors have kindly consented to answer all questions and advise those who would like assistance. This is the opportunity of a lifetime. You will receive instruction from the best and most experienced Agriculturists in the country and the exhibits will save you hundreds of dollars in showing how to prevent the annual loss from the ravages of insects and disease.

Come and have a heart-to-heart talk with the men who have made a life study of this work, Be present at every session during the four days. See the practical demonstrations and learn how to do things the better way. See the best livestock for general use in this sectioon and talk wit the men who can help you to improve your stock. Come and make the week a valuable one to you, the instruction is free.

BIRDS SAVE MILLIONS

They are the Farmers Best Friends And Should be Protected.

According to William Dutcher, president of the Audubon Societies of the United States, birds save to the farmers $200,000,000 a year in the destruction of noxious insects and noxious weeds. The great destroyers of birds are plume hunters for millinery purposes. Birds destroyed for food are restocked by natural process, but the plume hunters recognize no closed season.

Millinery interests in the United States represents $28,000,000 worth of work done annually by the birds for the farmers. As bobwhite is the arch destroyer of the potato bug and the cuckoo of the caterpillar and the woodpecker of the boring grub, and the lark of the grasshopper and the sparrow of the weed seeds, it would seem as though the birds should be protected by stringent laws that are enforced against the ravages of the wilfull slaughter of the milliners.

A Howard Man's Queer Boarder

After a number of years of severe suffering from stomach trouble Mott Hamilton, the well known hotel keeper of Howard, secured relief in a most unexpected manner last Monday night.

Hamilton had suffered intensely during the day from severe pains in his stomach and had been obliged to take laudanum for a sedative. He suffered a recurrence of the attack in the night and took larger doses than usual of the medicine. A few minutes later he was taken with a hard choking spell. He felt something in his throat and reaching down to dislodge it, he drep up a snake 9 inches in length.

Edgar Northup of this village was in Howard Tuesday and saw the reptile. He says that it is of the garter species and of a pinkish color. Hamilton has maintained for years that there was something alive within his stomach. He had often felt a creeping sensation there. The doctors, however, have disagreed with him in the diagnosis and for nearly 2½ years have been treating him for various phases of stomach trouble.

Laudanum and other opiates generally gave him temporary relief but as soon as the effects wore off he would be seized with severe pains which caused him the most intense suffering. Since the snake was removed he has felt considerably better and he believes that he will be permanently relieved.

Hamilton says he would have died of fright had he known the snake was in his stomach. He has the reptile preserved in alcohol.—Canisteo Times.

Some Points by a Breeder as the Care of the Flock.

Keep the sheep where they can get a liberal supply of pure, healthful water, says a Missouri breeder. Stagnant pools are great disease breeders, and the flock should be kept away from them. Place salt where the sheep can lick it each day.

Watch the dogs that come around the flock. They may be mutton lovers. Better keep the flock in the barn or a shed at night than to run the risk of having them killed by dogs.

Cut the tags from the sheep. It will improve their looks as well as their health. Be watchful for ticks, long toes and sore spots around the eyes. You may thus be able to save the lives of some sheep.

If you have a weed field or a patch of brick brush and briers, turn the flock of sheep on it and watch how they will clean it up.

Keep some of the lambs every year and sell off a number of the oldest ewes and all that are unprofitable. If you don't your flock will soon run down.

Always dock the lambs. Long tails gather filth when the lambs are on grass pasture and breed maggots.

When you buy a ram be certain that he has good blood. A scrub will breed downward instead of upward most every time.

Keep the flock out of fields where cockleburs and burdock thrive or the fleece of every sheep will be loaded down with burs.

Have some kind of shelter for the sheep in the summer. A shed opening to the north will furnish shade. Trees with widespreading branches furnish luxuriant shade for the sheep in the heat of the day.

Remedy For Lamb Cholera.

A writer in the National Stockman and Farmer says of a recent visit he made to a big sheep farm: Inquiring the meaning of certain little bottles on a shelf near the watering place, I was told that was the remedy for the lamb cholera, or cholera infantum, or whatever it is that takes the life of lambs, and takes them so quickly. When a lamb is seen foaming at the mouth and struggling as if in the grasp of the furies a hurry run is made for the place. To ten drops of sulphuric ether is added a little water, and it is poured down the lamb as quickly as possible and gives relief in almost every case. Whenever this trouble breaks out common baking soda is added to the feed of the lambs and proves a sure preventive. This information was of great value to me, for on reaching home I found a heavy rain had been sick every day during my absence. Soda was at once added to his feed, and there has been no trouble since.

Lambing Data.

The time that elapses between service and lambing runs from 145 to 150 days. About 147 days will cover the great majority. As to sexes, the males are carried slightly longer than the females. Old ewes, say from four to six years, will produce the most lambs and will save the most. There are more single lambs produced by young ewes than by older ones.

For indigestion and all stomach trouble take Foley's Orino Laxative as it stimulates the stomach and liver and regulates the bowels and will positively cure habitual constipation.

Following a request made by the Pennsylvania Society for the prevention of cruelty to animals, to the company, Pennsylvania officials issued instructions ordering that all cattle cars should be equipped with round cornered jambs. Having assured themselves of the success of this change as a preventive for injured animals, the company determined to make further improvements, and the new car is the result.

The new car now being built at the Altoonia shops is constructed with round cornered jambs, sills, doors and gate bars, while every bolt and nut on the inside of the car is countersunk. In addition the car is fitted with a coupler, which almost eliminates the jerks at starting and stopping. The doors have two feet more width than those of the old-fashion type, while they are from two to four inches higher, thereby permitting the easier handling of the cattle when the car is to be emptied.
