Brains and Soil.
MacDonald Reads Hazlitt.
The Fear of Death.
A Brave Cow.

This nation, with its annual income of NINETY THOUSAND MILLIONS of dollars, treats education generously. But the value of education depends not on money, but on the brains on which the education money is spent. A crop depends not entirely on the seed, but more on the soil.

Nearly nine hundred years ago, when Amelard, taught logic and theology to young men in the University of Paris, they gathered in Wintertime in a stone lined room, not heated, taking notes by candlelight.

And many, too poor to pay for candles, climbed the church steeple on bright moonlight nights, to continue their studies there by moonlight.

A few such students might be worth more to the world than a thousand million dollars of endowment. Edison gave to the world more money than wealth has ever given to education. So did Pasteur.

Neither ever went to college.

Ramsey MacDonald, flying from Scotland to London in a British bombing plane, a parachute strapped over his leather flying coat, read Hazlitt on the way.

Hazlitt, who worked himself into a fury over the Frech Revolution, quarreling with everybody that did not approve it, little thought that within 100 years of his death, a Socialist Laborite would be Prime Minister of England, without any revolution.

Still less did Hazlitt imagine that a British Labor Prime Minister would fly to his work.

Mr. D. Steuer, brilliant New York lawyer, says the best cure for any man that fears death is Hazlitt's essay on death.

Briefly Hazlitt says that, since we don't worry because we were not alive 100 years ago, we should not worry because we won't be alive or conscious a hundred years hence.

In rural England, a huge lion, knocked out of his cage in an automobile collision, jumped into a cow pasture. A cow with a young calf dashed at him, and gored him, attacking him again and again, until he killed her. Others, later, killed him.

The cow, not the lion, is the interesting animal, in that story, with its boundless courage. How many men would have attacked the lion with no better weapon than a cow's horns.

Consider also the marvellous inheritance of memory. The cow's ancestors, probably, had not seen a dangerous wild beast, in more than 1,000 years. But, at sight, the cow knew that the lion meant danger to her calf, and rushed to the attack. Man is not the only animal "fearfully and wonderfully made."

Dog Owners' Notice

Dog licenses for 1928 expired on June 30, 1929. The 1929 license fee is due July 1. Licenses so issued will cover the period from July 1 to December 31, 1929. Every dog must wear a tag of the current dog license year. A dog without such a tag is not protected by law and no action can be maintained for his injury or destruction.

An unlicensed dog may be seized and killed and the fact that a dog is without a tag is presumptive evidence that the dog is unlicensed.

Dog licenses must be obtained from the clerk of the city or town where the dog is harbored or kept.

License fees for the six months period, July 1 to December 31, 1929: Male dog, $1.25; female dog, $2.75; spayed female dog, $1.25. These amounts include clerk's fees.

No license can be issued for less than the full license fee.

The owner of a dog who fails or refuses to obtain a license or the dog as required by law incurs a penalty of $10 and costs.

The enumerators of towns and the police departments of cities are required to prepare in July of this year a list of dog owners. The omission of the name of an owner from the enumerator's or police list will not excuse the owner from obtaining a license.

If you owned a dog last year and do not own one now, so advise the clerk of your town or city.

Dog licenses in the town of Andover are issued by J. D. Cheesman, clerk. P. O. Address, Andover, N. Y. 30

Ezekiel Teaches Personal Responsibility

Ezekiel 33:7-16

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Object lessons were often used by Ezekiel. At such times he always had a curious if not interested audience. People are invariably attracted when something is being shown. Before the fall of Jerusalem the minister to the captive Hebrews at Tel-abib, in Babylonia took a piece of tile and drew the outline of Jerusalem thereon. The Temple appeared in the center and the city was surrounded with implements of war. The siege was indicated as he placed an iron pan between himself and the wall, and lay there for days eating a rationed portion of bread daily. In time a refugee arrived declaring all that had taken place, and that the city was no more a habitation for its founders.

Sick at heart the people suffered. Many were not individually responsible but they were in captivity because of the prolonged and wilful sins of their ancestors as a whole. Up to this time much had been declared about class responsibility. Henceforth more is to be proclaimed regarding personal responsibility. Have you read the second chapter of Ezekiel as was called for in the study last week? The special portions for today are all of chapters 18 and 33. Nothing can take the place of your own careful Bible reading.

Imagery is used again as Ezekiel is called a "Watchman" by Jehovah and commanded to be very faithful in performing the trust involved in that office. It is a position of great responsibility. Lives of many others are involved. Danger is at hand and at times must be met with life. Failure to do duty as a watchman is often punished with death in times of war.

The question "Am I my brother's keeper?" is clearly answered. Wicked men must face the death penalty due because of their sins. But what shall be done to those who stood lazily by and never raised a signalling hand or pleading voice to hold them back from the logical consequences of their own ways. The answer from Jehovah, through Ezekiel, is that all are held responsible who could have given any warning. "His blood will I require at thy hand." Excuses are not listed. Just one thing is called for, namely to definitely warn the wicked concerning the way he is surely going.

Suppose the wicked persists in following his own way after you have spoken? That places an added responsibility on him and frees you from any participation, thru knowledge, in his wrong doing.

The very heart of God was laid bare by Ezekiel. In times of despondency it is easier to say "God does not care." Punishment of the wicked is one of the safeguards of society. It helps deter others from transgressing the law and thus becomes a protection to all. God's pleasure is in the restoration of the wicked to a safe and constructive manner of living. Even good deeds in the past will not help under condemnation for sin at God's bar of judgment. Neither will open sins of the past stand in accusation against anyone who in true penitence seeks forgiveness in the Father's appointed way.

THE CALL of THE OUTDOORS

GOING LIGHT

Where to go, what to take, what to eat, are all moot questions for every vacationist, and especially the one who wants to "go light."

Excess luggage or equipment is a nuisance. Insufficient clothing, fishing tackle and photographic equipment are the cause of many pangs of remorse.

The veteran outdoorsman never worries about these matters. He has learned from bitter experience. He dreams for eleven months about the good time he will have, then spends about a day collecting the things to take.

The tyro worries, stews, frets and fusses for weeks and weeks ahead of the eventful day — but he gets a lot of pleasure out of that part of the trip, so why deny him that fun?

Is there a set rule governing the amount of equipment to take? No; there never will be. Everyone has different ideas and needs. The principle thing to keep in mind is that a vacation is a time to get away from every-day worries, to live a different life entirely — one continuous round of enjoyment.

The surest way to enjoy a vacation, whether it be a day, a week or a month, is to dress comfortably, take enough equipment to serve one's purpose, and not an ounce more.

What kind of clothing? That depends upon the country to be visited, and the mode of travel. For a woods trip, dress the part and be sure to take clothing that will be warm enough, still not bulky. Woolen socks, flannel shirts and substantial footwear are essentials.

Many hardy vacationists never carry a slicker or rain-cape, but a light rain-cape adds little weight and much real comfort in a cold rain. Extra shirts, rather than a sweater are preferred by many.

How much other equipment? Again it depends upon how and where you are going. If hiking, or on a canoeing trip, remember that the more you take the more you must carry; also the heavier you weigh down the canoe the harder it paddles. Cooking equipment, fishing tackle and photographic supplies are all essentials, but keep down the bulk.

What about food? Figure out just how many meals you will be in the woods and how much you will need for each meal, then buy accordingly. Don't load up with watery foods that add weight, when others more compact and less weighty will serve the purpose. Dried fruits, cereals, dried milk and evaporated vegetables all healp to reduce weight of the load.

To get rid of mosquitoes drain or fill up the ponds, or pools, in which the insects breed. If this is impracticable sprinkle stagnant water with kerosene oil every two weeks during the summer.

Rude Rural Rhymes

A GRANGE SONG

They had a war-time song of yore, God send we need war songs no more, but this one had a chorus sweep we cannot choose but wish to keep. Old Abe who was a country boy would gladly lend his song. We're coming Father Kelley, eight hundred thousand strong. We lift a chorus to be borne up from the cotton and the corn, out of the East with clover blest and from the wheatfields of the West. Now let the mountain breezes stir to bear thee word along. We're coming, Father Kelly, eight hundred thousand strong. Our feet are on a broadening way, our faces toward a coming day. We strive to learn that we may teach. God give us ever longer reach. Opposing still our sturdy will is many a rural wrong. We're coming, Father Kelley, eight hundred thousand strong. —Bob Adams.

Uncle Ab says that some religions are like worn-out, broken-spring, hair-cloth sofas; we keep them from habit and not because they give us any comfort.

SMELL IT . . .

TASTE IT . . .

but even then, you can't be SURE it's PURE

IF food tastes right, looks right, smells right . . . it certainly ought to be right. But it isn't always. Mold grows in food for 6 to 36 hours before the eye can see it . . . before the nose can smell it . . . a constant menace to your health.

That's why you need refrigeration. An electric refrigerator keeps food safely in dry, 45 degree cold. It prevents growth of mold and bacteria —keeps food sweet and fresh for days.

And is such a convenience! Kitchen floor stays clean. Left-overs can always be saved. Delicious frozen dainties make summer cooking easy.

Heart-Heart Talks

By Dr. John Joseph Haines

GOOD POLICY

Preaching is one thing; good business policy is another. Men find things to criticize in preaching; only a dumb-bell opposes the safe and sane business proposition.

If you study your newspaper as you should, then take note of the great number who are overtaken in crime, folly, and other wrongdoing. Set the number down in your memorandum-book each day for a month. The number will astonish you—and the sad total will be a shouting, thundering argument for right living.

There is absolutely no excuse for doing wrong — for it is the poorest business policy in the world; why? because it leads inevitably to disaster.

Take intoxicating drink, for instance. Over-indulgence, or, for that matter, taking it under any circumstances save under advice of a good doctor in illness — is a very, very poor business policy. Why? Because its victims are legion.

If cheating, defrauding and falsifying were not wrong morally, it would remain one of the worst business policies. Such an operator may apparently succeed for a time, but will surely be exposed in time, and bring sorrow to the perpetrator.

The price of a clear conscience is beyond doubt effort well expended. compared with the dividends reaped, the clear conscience pays more than the best stocks on the market today. To maintain a spotless character and reputation is to have the best credit and backing in the world.

Every man knows right from wrong by native intuition. Every man has been at the forks of the road. It has always paid to turn to the right. There is no better business.

The square shooter is the happy man; the crook does not know the meaning of happiness; because always apprehensive; he is never sure of being safe; his restlessness becomes self-torture in course of time. The best business policy in the world is — the Golden Rule.
