The trio refused to be brought to this state without a requisition from the governor, which was finally secured. Deputy Sheriff Tip Dennison, of West Union assisted in removing the prisoners. He said one of the prisoners was wearing a pair of pants taken from Coston's store.

SANITARY DAIRY METHODS.

While many dairymen cannot afford expensive buildings in which to carry on their work, they can adopt with profit many of the sanitary methods of the big dairies. Much can be done by keeping the bacteria from getting into the milk at milking time by adhering to strict rules and following sanitary methods about the dairy barn and separating room.

These should be well lighted and ventilated. All floors, mangers and gutters should be, if possible, of cement, so they can be scrupulously cleaned daily and washed as often as once a week. If these precautions are followed few germs can develop about the barn. Many germs, however, live about the body of the cow and drop into the milk while it is being drawn. For this reason the cow should be well groomed daily, and her udder and teats should be washed and dried with clean cloths before each milking. Care should be taken that particles of dust do not fall from the clothes while milking, and the milker must have clean, dry hands.

The manager of one of the largest dairies in the country writes of his methods as follows:

"Most of our cows in milk are kept in a stable about 112 feet long and 40 feet wide. This stable runs nearly north and south, with a row of stanchions on each side. There are plenty of windows on the east and west sides, so that there are always good air and sunshine. There is a wide driveway between the stanchions. These are of the swing pattern, all connected overhead with a lever, by which all of the cows can be let loose at one pull. This is a great feature, especially in case of fire.

"The cows stand on a plank flooring, with a gutter behind. At the present time they are bedded with sawdust, not because this is considered the best bedding (when the manure is taken into account) but because we can get it at very small expense. In addition to the sawdust, we sprinkle phosphate rock in the gutters. The phosphate rock takes up nearly all of the liquid and, we believe, adds more than one-third to the value of the manure. The surplus liquid that is not taken up runs underneath through a trough to a cement cistern, from which it is taken out and poured on the land as occasion requires.

"The day's work begins about 4 o'clock by feeding the cows their grain. This consists of 100 parts bran, 100 parts gluten and 100 parts cotton seed. This is fed to each cow in proportion to the milk she is giving. Occasionally some corn meal is added if we find that the cow needs it. While the cows are eating their grain the gutters are cleaned and the cows brushed off and made ready for the milking, which begins at 4:30.

"Once a week we use a disinfectant for spraying the gutters, the walls and back parts of the cows. After milking the cows are fed their roughage, which is about thirty pounds of silage and eight pounds of hay.

"At ten minutes after 6 the cows are turned out to pasture at about 6 o'clock, where they remain until 9. They are then fed grain about 5:30. The milking is begun at 4:30 p. m. In winter the water is warmed to about 60 degrees.

"Every cow's milk at each milking is weighed, and a record is made. The milk is then taken immediately to the creamery, a separate building, where it is run over a cooler and bottled at once."

A Narrow Escape

Edgar N. Bayliss, a merchant of Robinsonville, Del., wrote: "About two years ago I was thin and sick, and coughed all the time and if I did not have consumption, it was near to it. I commenced using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it stopped my cough, and I am now entirely well, and have gained twenty-eight pounds, all due to the good results from taking Foley's Honey and Tar."

TROTTING THOROUGHBRED STALLION

"A WIZARD FOR HARNESS"

Albany, Sept. 11.—The widely advertised Democratic conference of Saratoga, which it was proposed by those who were responsible for the meeting to rejuvenate and reorganize the Democratic party, was held on schedule time. Two or three hundred men who claim to be Democrats of the old school were there. A great many of them have been at one time or another candidates for various offices and as a general rule have met with defeat on election day. They organized what they called the State league and adopted a platform which favored an income tax, the giving up of the Philippines and the usual "economy and home rule."

Among those who took an active part in the proceedings were Alton B. Parker, who holds the record for having the smallest number of electoral votes given to a Democrat for president in recent years and who since his defeat has been active as a corporation attorney in New York city; D-Cady Herrick, who was defeated for governor at the same time that Parker led his party to defeat for the presidency; Augustus Van Wyck, who was once Croker's candidate for governor; Edward M. Shepard, who made an unsuccessful race for mayor of Greater New York when Tammany nominated him after his long years as an anti-Tammany warrior; Public Service Commissioner Osborne, who holds a $15,000 position by appointment of a Republican governor; District Attorney Jerome, who declared that he would like to be nominated and elected for another term by anybody regardless of party affiliations; ex-Judge Morgan J. O'Brien, who since his retirement from the supreme court bench has been the attorney for many large corporations in New York city, and many other "friends of the plain people."

Notable Absentees.

Some Democrats who are most conspicuous in the management of the party as at present constituted were not there. Among the latter number were Charles F. Murphy, the leader of Tammany Hall, and William J. Conners of Buffalo, chairman of the Democratic state committee, who have during the last few years controlled absolutely Democratic conventions and have adopted methods of procedure in conventions very much to the disgust of these old timers who have been at Saratoga this week. Patrick H. McCarren of Brooklyn, who holds in the hollow of his hand a considerable element of the Democratic party of Kings, was also conspicuous by his absence.

A careful scrutiny of the names of those present will show that many of them have been participants in previous attempts to reorganize, rejuvenate and restore the Democratic party to what they are pleased to call "the good old days of Tilden." Edward M. Shepard, for instance, has headed many a reform anti-Tammany movement at times when state campaigns have been coming on, and on several occasions in the very village of Saratoga has gone with contesting delegations to the state conventions, resolved to purify the party or perish in the attempt. On at least two occasions he has perished in the attempt, having been fired bodily, with all his Kings county delegates, by the powers that be. Joined with him in these previous attempts have been some of the men who were present this week, among them H. De Forrest Baldwin, Everett P. Wheeler and District Attorney Jerome.

A Big Club.

Political scoffers say that, having attempted thus unsuccessfully in party conventions to reform and rejuvenate the Democratic party, it looks as if they were now attempting to create a machine which would act independently of the regulars and if occasion comes will be in a position similar to that occupied by William R. Hearst after he had organized his Independence league. It is barely possible that some of these Democrats who do not like Murphy, Conners, Bryan and the rest may some time be able to hold such a club over the head of the regularly organized leaders that they may get a nomination for an important office. To that extent will the party be purified and uplifted.

With Gloves On.

Some of the speakers at this meeting took particular pains to say that they were not hostile to the regularly constituted organization; but, whatever that may mean, they certainly threw no bouquets or said a friendly word for anybody outside of the so called conservative elements of the party. They carefully avoided all discussion of W. J. Bryan and his followers; they did not discuss the Tammany-Conners method of bulldozing conventions, of throwing out duly elected delegates when necessary to maintain control, and they fought shy of the proposition which went through the last Democratic state convention by which Conners was authorized to send representatives into different counties of the state to declare who were and who were not regulars from his standpoint. But it is safe to say that these things were all on their minds more than anything else. They would like to wrest from the control of Murphy and Conners the Democratic organization in this state, but they would like to do it with kid gloves on if possible.

HUSKING FROM THE SHOCK.

Suggestions For Saving Labor and Quick Work.

For those who hunt out fodder the accompanying idea for saving much stooping and hastening the work of husking will be a good one to put into operation. The plan is to use two workers of a hooked antiadze to the work in hand or just high enough so that one does not have to stoop over in husking out the ears as they hang from the stalks as they lie crossways on the two sawhorses. The horses can be made of 2 by 4 and 1 by 6 material and should not be too heavy, as it makes hard carrying. Most persons will be surprised how much easier it is to husk shocked fodder this way. An armful of stalks can be laid across the sawhorses, and the ears will hang down, and one can husk nearly as fast as if he were husking standing corn. It is of course expected that the wagon be driven along so as to be right at hand for tossing in the corn as fast as it is husked. As soon as one armful is husked out it can be thrown back and another placed on the horses, and by working this way more corn can be husked out and with less effort than any other way known.

In connection with this plan here is another suggestion. Secure two 2 by 4's about eight feet long, good stock. Attach these to the bottom of the wagon box, allowing the ends to extend out on the side of the wagon from which the corn is thrown in. The 2 by 4 nearest the rear of the wagon may be placed so as to just clear the front of the hind wheel, but in attaching the one forward it must be placed sufficiently back of the front wheel to allow turning. The 2 by 4's can generally be attached to the steps of the wagon by chains or clamps such as are used in clamping a colter to the beam of a walking plow. The projecting 2 by 4's, it will be seen, form a support very similar to that made by the sawhorses, and on this support an armful of fodder can be thrown and husked out with the same ease and rapidity that it could be on the sawhorse. The wagon of course should always be stopped so that it will be convenient to the shock. This plan has the advantage of not having to carry anything from one shock to another.

TOPICS ON THE SIDE.

The largest melon ever grown, so far as can be ascertained, was raised last summer by Sikes Young on his irrigated farm near North Yakima, Wash. It was four feet long, three feet through and weighed 100 pounds.

Statistics show that tuberculosis in animals is on the increase. A recent estimate, based on the meat inspection and the records of the tuberculin test, shows: Beef cattle affected, 1 per cent; hogs, 2 per cent; dairy cattle, 10 per cent. The financial loss to stockmen and dairymen because of this disease is estimated to be fully $14,000,000 per annum.

About the most dangerous thing used about the barn is a cheap lantern, and the user is not always considered a brave man either.

The new elevators for unloading ear corn from the wagon are no doubt many steps ahead of the scoop shovel, but where the latter method is used all the boxes should be supplied with shoveling boards instead of ordinary end gates.

The exports of agricultural products for last year 1908 were valued at $1,017,000,000, an amount greater than for any year except 1907, the reduction of $37,000,000 under that year being chiefly due to the falling off in value of cotton exports. The exported cotton was valued at $485,000,000, the grain and grain products at $215,000,000 and the packing house products at $190,000,000.

Garden and orchard work can go right on in the winter as well as in the summer. There are many little things which can be done in the cold months. Repairing fences and pruning are never out of season.

Buckwheat contains about as much digestible constituents as corn, but not so much fat or carbohydrates.

A Texas stock raiser says cottonseed meal is not only not unsafe and detrimental to pigs, as a great many farmers believe, but is the most appetizing, nutritious and healthful of all feeds common to this country.

Fifty million lights burn in New York City every night. The city's electric light bill for twenty-four hours amounts to $65,000, or more than the salary of Roosevelt when president. London has a greater population, but only a little more than half as much electric light. The amount of current that goes to waste in New York in one year would sell at the prevailing rates for $6,000,000. The electric lamps would make a path of light around the world.
