STAND PATTERS

"Stand pat" was a phrase coined by the late Mark Hanna, and was used in a political sense and became the watchword of a national campaign. It might and can be used in a local sense, for if any one thing is needed to make a village grow it is men and women who will "Stand pat" for their local interests and give the village in which they live all that is coming to it.

Nothing will so help advertise and enlarge the possibilities of a town as to have every one whether merchants or residenters, to work and make every wheel turn to bring about conditions that will make for growth, and business.

The merchants can "Stand pat" by encouraging growth by advertising and getting in line for every increase of trade and be willing to adopt new ideas and customs to bring all the trade from the country side to his own store. He can "stand pat" with his own local paper by giving it the benefit of his business.

The citizen can "stand pat" by trading with the local merchant giving them the trade of their own household and refrain from patronizing the foreign mail order houses, and put money where it will be of no benefit to his own locality.

Parents can "stand pat" by sustaining their public school system, visiting the school and lending a word of help to the teacher by their presence and by letting them know that they are interested in having the best schools in all the country round. But why ring the changes? It is a well known fact recognized by every intelligent thinking man and woman that nothing succeeds like success and to make village life successfull and insure future growth it needs a community of stand patters.

Andover's future is assured when the dawn will bring those who will stop nagging along lines of increased expenditure. How long would it be before the Main street would be paved and conditions of growth insured if a new interest was revived and Andoverites stood pat for Andover and Andover's interests? Think it over, line up and boost and new days of business and opportunity will come.

Mr. Merchant get ready for the holiday trade and bring all the trade to Andover, that will be diverted by the bright advertising of neighboring towns. The moral is plain "stand pat." Advertise.

NEW YORK CITY POLITICS.

They have made the nominations for the Mayorality in New York city, and by the time this is read by the up-State people, the political pot will be boiling and both parties will be in the game for all it is worth. The Republicans have nominated a man whose record as a business man, and who will have the advantage of never having been in public life and hence will not have the enemies that such a life would have handicapped him with. The Democrates have nominated Justice Wm. H. Gaynor, a man well known for his sterling integrity and a man who has been the foe of Tammany and its interests. He has been after the Police Department of Greater New York for years and it was largely through his instrumentality that Commissioner Bingham was recently removed.

How Tammany endorsed the man who has always been their foe is one of the strange exigencies of politics. Evidently Mr. Murphy of Tammany saw that a man of his liking would bring the whole ticket he might nominate to defeat, and sooner than have that, he swallows the respectability of Mr. Gaynor and does so believing that the rest of the ticket, which, by the way, has on it men after his own heart, would be carried through and Tammany's grip still retained upon the city.

The fight will be a merry one and from this standpoint it looks as though Gaynor, might have a chance of an easy victory, but it remains to be seen what the strength of the fusionites will be, for arrayed against Tammany is all the political interests of the city.

Perhaps the friends of Mr. Gaynor have reckoned without their host and the allied political parties together with the republican hosts may see through Tammany's game, and unite in voting to destroy Tammany's long and fast hold on the great City.

It will be interesting to watch the developements and the result as New York City will be the storm center of a fight for political supremecy during the month to come, that will focus the eyes of the world.
