Don't be shirker. Be a booster.

Boom, Boom, boom-boom-boom, ANDOVER.

Got your Christmas goods yet Mr. Merchant? Advertise them.

A woman can vote more intelligently than a drunken sot, Can't she?

Mr. Merchant are you advertising that table linen, and other necessaries that go with the Thanksgiving dinner.

Don't let the merchant in the towns a few miles away get the trade you should have, Less rent and expense should allow you to sell goods cheaper than he, and save the people car fare, too.

Don't believe in women's suffrage eh? Well you look and see what a strong power the women will be in determining the results of the elections in the great cities.

We are proud of Andover people, who regardless of party offiliation stood by our fellow townsman and friend, Hon. J. S. Phillips, in the recent election. It shows the right kind of spirit in a community. The spirit of loyalty to Andover. Mr. Phillip's plurality in his own home town being the largest of any of the ten years in which he has been a Candidate for Member of the Assembly. The News not only congratulates Mr. Phillips but also all Andover people for their good and loyal work.

Assemblyman Phillips will be the senior Member of the New York State Assembly in its 1910 session. No other Member being as old in matter of service as he. He has represented Allegany County while all others of his colleagues who were Members of the Assembly ten years ago have been superceded by others. To think that Mr. Phillips' neighbors have stood by him so faithfully and loyally, after ten years of service must be highly pleasing to him and a compliment to his service, as well as to the county which he represents and the town from which he hails. This could not be only for the fact that he has wisely and ably represented his constituency and his fellow townsmen.

THE PASSING OF MEN.

Have you allowed yourself to think of the many changes that have taken place in our village life in the past few years by the passing away of men who were once active and prominent in the affairs of the public life and welfare of our village?

Think it over, and ask yourself who is to take their places. The men that have passed off the scene to other places or to the great beyend were without question the spoke in the wheels that helped to make Andover what it is, and the future if it is to equal the past, must have the men of the same sterling qualities that they possessed. Men who are willing to sacrifice, and yet with a determination of purpose to venture out into interests that will make the business opportunities even greater than they have been.

There is yet much opportunity, to think that Andover has reached the limit, is to guess it wrong. The work of pushing the interests forward has only opened the way for greater things.

What a splendid chance there is for the younger men to get into the harness, and push with a vim, and to make a record for themselves and better the conditions on every hand. It cannot be done by moping or thinking of the past. The lure of the future if it could only get hold of the men at the front of things would mean a better and greater village and business for everyone.

What can be done? Energize, agitate for better and more business. Advertise, and be willing to do the extraordinary thing, Don't be afraid of criticism, if you believe in the future of your village, talk it, push it, and work for it 24 hours in every day that you live.

Stand for the things that are, and when the opportunity comes to stand for the right do it, and do it with all the manhood you have got. Andover has got the men, who can do it, and we are hoping that the passing of the old war horses will bring to the front the younger men, with the will, vim, and purpose to get the best, and the better for all our Village interests.

Commissioner Whipple, in showing the rapid growth of public interest in practical forestry matters calls attention to the ever increasing number of applications filed for the purchase of young trees. Last year over one million pine and spruce were put out by the State at cost. This year the department will distribute about the same number.

Among the numerous applications is one for two hundred thousand Norway Spruce from what is probably the largest lumbering concern in the United States. These trees are desired for planting on denuded lands owned by that company in the Adirondacks as a future timber product. The fact is important because it demonstrates what practical lumbermen think of reforestation from a financial view point.

The total number of trees requested so far exceeds the product of the nurseries, although they have been brought to their maximum capacity, that it will be necessary to assign to each applicant a pro rata share. Assignments cannot be made until Jan. 1st.

An epoch in tree raising in the State of New York as well as in this country by the fact that the first entire distribution will be made from nurseries owned by the State and maintained under the direction of Commissioner Whipple.

Pleased Elmira People

We copy the following from a recent edition of the Elmira Advertiser.

"Lena Rivers, produced under the personal direction of Beulah Poynter, was played at the Lyceum Theatre Saturday night. The audience was appreciative. The piece was popular many years ago. Saturday night it was well played and the performers frequently were applauded.

"The cast was strong and the play produced with marked ability. Ann Frederick as "Lena" played her part excellently."

Lena Rivers comes to the Auditorium Monday evening, Nov. 15th

Clown Work Appreciated

The returns from election indicate that Charles E. Clark, the President of the Direct Primary League menagerie of this county, would have made a better hit in the roll of clown than as the real manager of the show.

A great Man's Telephone.

"His great instrument was the telephone," said a biographer of the late Edward H. Harriman in the Wall Street Journal. "He always had it beside him. The Harriman switchboard was one of the best equipped and the busiest in New York. Whether in his office, his library, his bedroom or his bathroom, the telephone was always there, and when he went into the Oregon wilderness the telephone would go, too.

"'A slave to the telephone,' wrote a New York editor in commenting on Harriman and his telephone, 'Nonsense,' said Harrfman, when this was called to his attention, 'the telephone is a slave to me' ".

It is altogether likely that much of the power and influence of the late Mr. Harriman was due to the aid of his telephone. In fact, he admitted as much. His telephone was his present messenger, always ready for service. With it he reached all of his business associates and every corner of his vast railroad territory. A man who puts the telephone in his home places himself in the avenue of approach to millions of other homes, shops, offices and farms.

Just as with the railroad king, so it is with farmers and men in all other walks of life. The telephone in the home or business place of many a man less famous than Harriman is performing a work just as great in importance, and perhaps is proving even more of a blessing than to the capitalist whose every command could be carried out. The instrument was probably just as important in the mind of the farmer who wrote:

"I would as soon think of mowing my hay with an old-fashioned scythe as try to conduct my farm successfully without a telephone."

Throughout the farming world the telephone to-day is a popular and useful instrument. It was not so long ago when its use in rural sections was unheard of. Now it is the farmer's greatest aid in business, in home life and for protection. He sells his crops with the aid of the telephone, catching a fluctuating market at its very tip. In the spreading of weather reports it has saved many thousands of dollars every season to the fruit-growers of the country. It brightens the lives and enriches the social opportunities of the wives and daughters on the farm. It is their protection against hoboes and marauders when the men folks are away. Perhaps its greatest service is in bringing nearer to home the physician and the veterinary—in answering instantly every emergency of farm life.

The telephones on farms are growing more popular and numerous. The statement is made by the Western Electric Company, manufacturer of the "Bell" telephones, that over [illegible] farmers throughout the country have written testimonials on the subject.

When President Roosevelt's Country Life Commission went among the farmers last year, it reported on conditions of farm life, it reported that the greatest encouragement to farming of the better sort and more healthful life in country districts was given by just such agencies as good roads, the extension of the rural mail system and the farm telephone.

You Cannot Depend Absolutely Upon Your Memory

The chances are that four or five months after you pay a bill, you forget about it. Suppose that bill you should be presented to you—possibly you could remember about paying it; but nine out of every dozen bills you pay, you forget about in six months. Some you could not recall after six weeks.

There is one sure way, however, and the only proper way to pay your bills---PAY ALL BILLS BY CHECK---file your checks. Six years afterward you can turn to the checks if necessary, and produce indisputable evidence of every bill paid

Remember we pay 3 per cent on our special interest accounts. It's a good place for your idle funds.
