CAPITAL AND LABOR

I.

A man, a strong, brave, manly man, stood before me, and I was struck by the firmness with which he stood on his two feet. It was a solid foundation of the real value that arose six feet and more above it, and I fell to comparing it with the necessary foundations of human society. Two firm points of support are necessary and these, as it seems to me, are capital and labor. Both are as necessary as two strong feet for a man, and harmony between them is as important as between the feet.

Imagine a man at war with himself, his natural faculties jealous of each other, hand against hand, sight against hearing, or body against soul. How can we describe such a man except as a fool going to ruin, and for my part I have no other description of human society in which capital and labor stand over against each other as enemies. They are the two feet of national and social oranization; harmony between them is a guarantee of prosperity and health, while discord between them promises only weakness and ruin. Everything that is really acomplished for human welfare is done at points where capital and labor work together in harmony.

I here use the terms capital and labor in a very broad sense. Every employer or purchaser is a capitalist to a greater or less extent, and the capital may be either material wealth or mental power; it may be in the form of railroad bonds or railroad brains; it may be bars of gold or golden thoughts. In either form it employs, directs or inspires the toiling hand or mind which it controls. The relation is that of master and servant, and this relation is permanent in human society.

When society reaches its highest stage of evolution, there will be no distinction in quality between master and servant. The best master minds will direct, the best servant minds will serve and the one will be as contented and happy as the other. This condition already exists within the individual organism. I never heard of the hand rebelling against the head and demanding to be set upon the shoulders. It knows its own place and is content. It knows its apointed work and does it. All life, all organization, points to this necessary condition of mastery and servitude from the infinite rulership of the universe down to the brain and muscles of man and brute.

II.

Why then is there so often discord between capital and labor in common life? Why does capital often seek to oppress labor and to compensate it for its work not according to actual values, but on purely selfish principles? If labor had no power of resistence it would often be starved to death. This is seen where a man overworks and underfeeds his dumb servant, the horse, or where any human worker is forced by an employer to render more than an equivolent for money paid.

Whoever bargains for labor or for any product of labor is, in the true sense of the word, a capitalist, and he who makes the sharpest bargain he can, independent of actual values, has no right to complain of the same treatment imposed upon him by some capitalist more powerful than himself. If his own conduct toward the helpless one beneath him is right, then the similar conduct of the tyrant above him is also right. In fact neither is right. Both are on a low plane of life, both await a higher grade of moral perception, a keener sense of justice.

I rode once in the country with a man who continually denounced the "greedy capitalist," saying that there ought to be a great social revolution and a new order of things that would give to every man full pay for his labor. While he was talking thus we came to a steep hill up which his horses could hardly draw the load. He applied the whip and when I proposed that we should both get down and walk up the hill he said the horses were lazy and only needed the whip and then when I observed that the animals were underfed and overworked and insisted on getting down he was angry with me, but as I parted company with him I felt that he was not a fit man to sit in judgment in the great suit of Labor versus Capital. I felt that he would decide it with no higher sense of justice than he had shown as capitalist, in dealing with his dumb servants of the harness. I drank back from the thought of placing him over a vast number of human beings as supreme tendent of one of the "Capital trusts" [illegible]

[illegible] to me a very remote [illegible] free country and the working men have a right to form just such a brotherhood, but what I don't understand is why it is right and fair for the laborers to combine for mutual defense, but wrong for employers or capitalists to combine for the same purpose. Yet when the capitalists do combine they are denounced as tyrants who want to oppress the people. Now why is it any worse for them to combine than it is for the workingmen to combine? That is what I want some one to explain.

V.

One thing is certain, that the constant effort to unite labor in vast unions which come into conflict with capital must influence capital to unite [illegible] country [illegible] protected relations from dealing with labor free to unite. United labor is right and necessary is the union of capital a crime? I should say let each and every organization be free to act and hold to be criminal only when it has done a specific wrong. Both capital and labor may, it seems to me, combine either for good or for evil. All efforts at social reform, the only way to do any good is to seek out particular evils and correct them in detail, but wholesale denunciation, while cheap and easy, does not harm. It is like the preaching that exhausts itself in general reproof of sin, but never dares to touch a sinner.

PUBLIC HEALTH HINTS

PREVENTION OF TYPHOID FEVER

IT has been said that "FOR EVERY DEATH FROM TYPHOID FEVER SOME ONE SHOULD BE HANGED." It has been more wisely said that "for every death from typhoid fever some one should be educated."

It is certain that typhoid is one of the most easily preventable diseases. There were 656 deaths from typhoid fever among the 5,000,000 people of New York state outside of New York city in 1913 against 362 deaths among the 5,000,000 people in New York city itself simply because of IGNORANCE or CARELESSNESS in regard to simple sanitary laws.

Every case of typhoid fever comes from swallowing the germs of the poison, and disease germs come from just one source—from the bodies of human beings. The people who sow these dangerous seeds may be sick with typhoid fever themselves, or they may be coming down with it, or they may be getting over it. Sometimes we find human "CARRIERS," as they are called, who have had typhoid years before or, so far as can be discovered, have never had the disease at all, and yet are still CULTIVATING TYPHOID GERMS IN THEIR BODIES AND DISTRIBUTING THEM TO INFECT OTHERS.

The disease germs are accustomed to the warm, rich fluids of the body and do not live long away from it. The great danger lies in a rather DIRECT TRANSFER OF INFECTED MATERIAL FROM ONE PERSON TO ANOTHER. There are three principal agents by which this transfer is brought about and by which such diseases as typhoid are commonly spread.

They are called the three F's of sanitation:

FOOD. FINGERS. FLIES.

Since every case of typhoid fever is caused by the transfer of infection from one person to another, THE DISEASE CAN BE PREVENTED BY CARE IN THE DISPOSAL OF HUMAN WASTES and at the other end of the chain by PROTECTING THE PURITY OF ALL THAT GOES INTO THE MOUTH.

On the one hand, the waste of all human beings must be disposed of so that wells and food supplies may not become polluted and so that flies may not have access to them.

On the other hand, the food and utensils that go into the mouth must be carefully guarded so that typhoid germs from unknown sources may be kept out.

Foods are best protected by cookery. Ordinary cooking destroys typhoid germs, and it is usually raw foods, like water and milk and oysters, which spread this disease. Do not drink water unless you know that it is pure and never drink uncooked milk. BOIL ALL WATER OF DOUBTFUL QUALITY AND PASTEURIZE (or scald) ALL MILK.

Fingers should always be thoroughly cleaned with the nail brush before sitting down to table and before preparing food for others.

Flies should be shut out of the house and kitchen by careful screening. [illegible] THREE HUNDRED [illegible]

PROGRESSIVE PARTY AIDS THE WORKMEN

Its Compensation Policy Benefit to All Concerned.

Under modern industrial conditions the relations of employer and employee are vastly different from the ancient obligations which are the basis of the common law of "master and servant." The Progressive party has undertaken to solve the problems in the joint interest of employer and employee. The very nomenclature indicates the personal dealings of the bootmaker and the stagecoach owner with his wage earners. The shoe factory with its regiment of employees and the transcontinental railroad with its army give rise to new problems.

The United States bureau of labor estimates that there are annually 30,000 persons killed and over 1,000,000 victims of nonfatal accidents in industrial establishments.

Manifestly some one must pay for this economic loss. A humanitarian social order will not tolerate community indifference to the sufferings of the maimed and diseased or to the helpless misery of their dependents, nor should the inevitable burdens of a self respecting community be carried by private charity. To suggest that the workman insure is simply to lay the burden on the class engaged in the industry least able to bear it. The owner of the business, not the employee, should bear all the costs of production, reimbursing himself for his expenditures in the price of the product. The losses to workmen due to trade accidents and trade diseases are part of the necessary cost of production. Workmen's compensation laws, which in effect carry to the consumer the cost of injuries to the workmen, as a fixed charge upon the industry, are now generally accepted as the best solution of the problem.

Safety appliance laws may be difficult to pass and to enforce, but a law whereby a dangerous machine is certain to be an expensive machine is itself a safety appliance law of great efficiency. The cost of wire netting over a whirring wheel or of boxing around a swift belt is a trifle compared to the cost of paying reasonable and sure compensation for injury by neglect.

Of course employer's liability exists prior to the passage of compensation laws, but employer's liability has offered the employer a gamble instead of a certainty. The fellow servant rule, the doctrine of assumed risk, the various technical difficulties in proving negligence, to say nothing of the expense and delay in legal proceeding, have all encouraged the employer to "take a chance," or when the employer resorted to liability insurance have permitted the insurance companies to fix rates for profits on the absurdities and partialities of the law. This consideration leads naturally to the second great service of compensation laws, the practical elimination of middleman profits in the adjustment of a loss.

Progressive legislation in Washington and in state legislatures will if enacted prove of great benefit to all.

ROOSEVELT SAYS:

"Our Effort is to Make This Country a Genuine Democracy."

Theodore Roosevelt earnestly recommends the recently published book, "The Progressive Movement," by S. J. Duncan-Clarke, and in the introduction which he wrote for it and which is published as a part of the book he condenses the fundamental principle of Progressivism in a sentence: "Our effort is to make this country economically as well as politically a genuine democracy."

Now, whether or not the Progressive party survives—and careful analyses have shown pretty forcefully that it is going to survive—there can be no doubt of the genuine vitality of the Progressive spirit. Says Roosevelt, "The Progressive movement is greater than the Progressive party, yet the Progressive party is at present the only instrument through which that movement can be advanced."

"There is nothing tentative or apologetic in this statement. But to also say, 'This movement is not to be in any sense a one man movement'."

PINCHOT IS MAKING A VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN.

Progressive Senatorial Candidate in Pennsylvania Welcomed by Workmen.

Gifford Pinchot, Washington party (Progressive) nominee for United States senator, was greeted with enthusiasm at the four industrial plants he visited on a recent day in Philadelphia. At noon he addressed a meeting attended by several hundreds. This was the only speech made during the day.

The candidate was up with the sun. Before 7 o'clock he had shaken hands with several hundred men as they went to their work at the Midvale steel plant, Bishop street and Hunting Park avenue. Standing on the bridge over which the men passed, Mr. Pinchot met the first worker at 6:10, and for the next forty-five minutes he was kept busy shaking hands as the men came to work.

The same friendly spirit which has marked every one of Mr. Pinchot's visits to industrial centers was evident. The men, seemingly surprised that a candidate for United States senator would be anxious to meet them, sometimes hesitated as Mr. Pinchot's companions called "Shake hands with Mr. Pinchot." But when they saw the tall man with hand outstretched and heard him ask, "Help me to beat Penrose," the uniform response was a hearty "Sure we will."

At the noon meeting, held at the Schobel hat factory, Tenth and Oxford streets, Mr. Pinchot described Penrose as "one man of education and money who has turned his power against the people of Pennsylvania that he might serve the big interests."

"I want you men to understand that I am against Penrose now and all the time," he said. "Not because he counts for anything, for as a man he interests me not at all. It is the evil system which he represents. How can you trust such a man—a man who, with his bipartisan helpers in the legislature, has refused to give you a workingmen's compensation law and permits harsh, life taking child labor by refusing to enact a child labor law?

"If you want to vote for the interests of the people of Pennsylvania vote the Washington party ticket this fall, and you will stop this handing out of good things to the monopolies and special interests by Penrose and his men."

Later Mr. Pinchot met the homecoming workers at two plants in the northern part of the city. At the Moore & White machine shops, Fifteenth street and Lehigh avenue, he shook hands with the workmen.

DESERT TO PROGRESSIVES.

Louisiana Democratic Committee Loses Six of Its Members.

When the Third congressional district Democratic central committee of Louisiana met a majority of the members present or represented by proxy resigned to join the Progressive party. This action had been expected for several days, although the case is by itself in Louisiana history.

The committee, which is to fix the date for a primary election, consists of fourteen members. Four were not represented. Of the four several are said to have moose leanings. Six of those present, including the chairman, resigned—W. H. Price, L. C. Roger, Edwin Broussard, John Marks, Sam Leblanc and W. T. Peterman.

The third district was one of the sections of Louisiana hit hardest by the removal of the duty on sugar.

INFECTION AND INSECT BITES DANGEROUS

Mosquitoes, flies and other insects, which breed quickly in garbage pails, ponds of stagnant water, barns, musty places, etc., are carriers of disease. Every time they bite you, they inject poison into your system from which some dread disease may result. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment. It is antiseptic and a few drops will neutralize the infection caused by insect bites or rusty nails. Sloan's Liniment disinfects Cuts, Bruises and Sores. You cannot afford to be without it in your home. Money back if not satisfied. Only 25c at your Druggist.
