Sign Boards on the Up-road

By Hamilton B. Williams

There is the song of a vitalized heart that will keep our worship of God the Day. A beautiful song that needs to be twined into memory garland. I am not able to say the name of the man who wrote it, but he is a beautiful soul, I'm sure.

We're living in a marvelous world. Beyond the hills there's a garden outside the sweep of dreams. We'll see that some day

While we're passing thru this world let us be the planters and keepers of the good, and the true and the beautiful.

"A fire-mist and a planet,
A crinkle and a shell,
A jellyfish and a saurian,
And caves where cavemen dwell.
There's a source of law and beauty,
And a face turned from the clod—
Some call it Evolution,
And others call it — God.

A haze on the far horizon,
The infinite blue sky,
The ripe, rich tints of the corn field,
And the wild geese soaring by;
And over the upland and lowland,
The charm of the golden rod,—
Some of us call it Autumn,
And others call it — God.

Like tides on a crescent sea-beach
When the moon is new and then,
Into our hearts high yearning,
Comes welling and surging in,
Comes from the mystic ocean,
Whose never foot has trod;
Some of us call it Longing,
And others call it — God.

A picket frozen on duty,
A mother starved for her brood;
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the rood;
And millions who humble and nameless,
The straight hard path have trod;
Some call it Consecration,
And others call it — God."

WAR FRIGHTFULNESS TAUGHT BY GERMANY

Described in Important War Booklet Just Issued by U. S. Government

Washington, D. C.—It is permissable to destroy private property, to devastate systematically evacuated regions, to terrorize the civil population of invaded districts, to deport people for compulsory service in the enemy country, thereby releasing its own men for the army, to compel them to aid the enemy in the construction of fortifications, to dig trenches, to serve as guides, and even to furnish information regarding their own army."

The teaching of the official German War Manual is thus summarized in a booklet issued to-day by the Government thru the Committee on Public Information, Washington, D. C. The title of this booklet is "The German War Code." It is one of a series of war information booklets, and a copy will be sent free to anyone who will address the Department of Distribution, 8, Jackson Place, Washington, D. C.

The authors of "The German War Code" are professors G. W. Scott, formerly of Columbia University, and J. W. Garner of the University of Illinois. In interesting fashion they analyze the official German War Manual, with its sneers at the "sickly sentimentality" of all rules of war dictated by chivalry, honor and generosity to the enemy, and they contrast it with the war manuals of Great Britain, France and United States, which are declared to be "the very opposite of the German in the law which their governments have laid down for their armies to observe in their dealings with the enemy."

The German War Manual was prepared by the German General Staff and was first issued in 1912. "It would seem," says Professors Scott and Garner, "from the way in which most of the Hague provisions are denounced, ridiculed and sneered at, that the real reason for issuing revised instructions was to counteract any influence which these provisions might have been expected to have upon German military officers, thru Germany's having ratified the Hague treaties." The German War Manual is shown to be the text book of that philosophy which has expressed itself in the form of "frightfulness" in Belgium, Poland, Servia, Armenia and wherever German officers have held sway." This booklet shows that the brutality, ruthlessness, terrorism and violence of the German forces have been cold-bloodedly planned for years by the German military authorities. It shows that it was the wholesale violation by Germany of the most sacred standards of human society that caused our Government to enter the war.

What the effect of such teachings and such practices must be upon the rest of the world is indicated by the authors of this pamphlet as follows: "Made in Germany (Germany) ambition to win, and to business with the other nations seem to have forgotten that the German nation must live peoples of the world after this war is over. The International Law lacks the administrative means to judge and punish violations of its better established rules, it is, like all laws and customs, supported by a public opinion which never fails to manifest in numerous ways its detestation and horror for those who flagrantly misconduct themselves. For years the German Government and individual Germans in their intercourse with foreign people will be made to feel the suspicion and distrust in which they are held. This is bound to be a tremendous handicap. It is the penalty which mankind will inevitably exact from those who, while sneering at chivalry and characterizing the humanitarian tendencies of modern times as "flabby emotions," have carried on a system of terrorism that knows no bound."

ALLEGANY'S GREAT WORK

In Two Weeks Jumps From Nineteenth to Sixth Place in Sale of War-Savings Stamps

Chairman Harry E. Keller, of Cuba, is in receipt of a letter of congratulation from the state committee in charge of the sale of War Savings Stamps and Thrift Stamps in New York, as a result of the fine showing made by Allegany County, constituting Mr. Keller's district. Allegany County now stands sixth in the list among the counties of the state in the per capita sale of stamps, having disposed of $2.34 worth for each inhabitant of the county. The five which are ahead of us are Schuyler, with $5.63 per capita; Wyoming, with $3.88 per capita; Ontario, with $3.18; Genesee, with $2.70, and Cattaraugus, with $2.38.

Allegany receives special credit for the reason that she made such great progress in the last two weeks of March, jumping from nineteenth place on March 16 to sixth place on April 1. In commenting on Allegany's showing, State Chairman William J. Tully, of Syracuse, has this to say:

"Allegany County, now in sixth place (having jumped from the nineteenth), is under the direction of Harry E. Keller, of Cuba, N. Y. It should be a matter of pride that with the weather and many other conditions against him he has reached a per capita of $2.34."

That is a good showing, and one of which old Allegany can justly be proud. But Mr. Keller feels that she can do better, and that she will. It's just a question of everybody helping some, and those who can, helping a lot.

STATE SOLONS HAVE ADJOURNED

PROHIBITION IS COUNTED OUT

Steps Have Been Taken by Federal Government to Utilize Barge Canal. Registration Day for Women is Changed to May 25—Sunday Movie Bill Killed—German-American Alliance Legislated Out of Existence.

(Special Correspondence.)

Albany.—The legislature of 1918 ended its official life Saturday with a record for non-accomplishment not rivalled by any legislature in recent years.

Practically every measure of importance has been either sandbagged or amended so as to be innocuous. Bills to increase salaries, provide pensions and otherwise help the boys at home, have been railroaded through and are now stacked up in the governor's office, seemingly destined to be vetoed.

Prohibition is dead. So are the public service commission reorganization bills. Practically every measure contemplated in the program of Mayor Hylan has been slaughtered. Some form of legislation to bring about a relocation of the New York Central Railroad's west side tracks yet may get through, but the chances are dwindling daily.

The corporations have been given what the politicians term a "50-50" break." Practically every measure desired by them has been killed. At the same time, however, bills opposed by them and their legislative agents have been held either in committee or maneuvered into unfavorable positions on the calendars of both houses, where they are expected to expire.

Through the efforts of the Woman Suffrage party, the bill to place women on an equal footing with men voters, and provide for personal registration in all communities of 5,000 population or more, has been passed by both houses.

U. S. to Control Barge Canal.

The federal government will take over the supervision of New York state barge canal.

Already steps have been taken toward this end. Brigadier General Charles A. Keller, who was in Albany in the interest of the Thompson bill, consolidating the hydraulic power companies at Niagara Falls, with G. A. Tomlinson of Duluth and Calvin Tompkins of New York, conferred with members of the state canal board and Governor Whitman. General Keller is chairman of the interior waterways committee of the federal administration.

They came to Albany, at direction of Director General of Railroads McAdoo, to ascertain how the state felt on the railroad administration taking over the supervision of commerce on the canals. It is understood that the suggestion of Director McAdoo met with approval from the canal board and also the governor.

The question of whether the state or the federal government would maintain the canal came up, but it is provided under the state constitution that the state must look after the maintenance of its waterways. There is, however, some federal aid for increasing commerce on the state canals, and the federal authorities, it is believed are prepared to build barges and operate them on the canals.

It is planned to move coal from the Cayuga and Seneca lake regions, if the scheme goes through.

To Act on Fare Increase.

Immediate steps will be taken for the disposal of the 2 six-cent fare cases now pending before the upstate public service commission, it was announced. This decision was reached because of the decision by the court of appeals in the Rochester electric railway case, which held that the commission did not have power to increase trolley fares when existing franchise agreements or municipal charter provisions limit the rate to be charged.

In the case of several roads where increased rates have been authorized, orders will be issued for the companies to show cause why the increases should not be revoked. It was announced that the Waverly, Sayre & Athens Traction company had withdrawn voluntarily its increased rate schedule. Increased rates authorized to be charged by the Hornell Traction company, Ithaca Traction corporation and Orange Traction company apparently are not affected by the court's decision, a public service commission statement declared.

End German-American Alliance.

With only one vote in opposition, the senate passed Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson's bill intended to end the corporate existence of the German-American alliance of the state of New York. A few moments before this action was taken, officers of the organization announced that they would dissolve for the sake of simplicity, changing the name in the meantime and eliminating from its title and from the platform of principles and purposes all allusion to Germany.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of Manhattan, who cast the only Socialist ballot, said he believed that in view of the action of the alliance the legislation was not necessary. Senator Henry M. Sage of Albany declared that it was fitting for the state to enunciate a policy respecting such organizations. "In these days," he said, "there should be nothing that is not wholly American."

Must Have Lights on Autos.

The Louis H. Wells bill, regulating lights on motor vehicles, was passed in the assembly. One of the provisions is that the front lights on autos must be visible at least 200 feet and of sufficient strength to reveal a person or object 200 feet away. Motor trucks of two tons or more capacity which cannot exceed 15 miles an hour only require lights visible 300 feet and strong enough to reveal a person or object 25 feet away. Motor vehicles must display when standing two lights in front, and a red light in the rear, visible at least 100 feet except where the end is against a curb, in which case no light is required.

Will Censor Text Books.

The Slater bill, prohibiting the use in public schools of any text books containing matter seditious in character, disloyal to the United States or favorably to the cause of any foreign country with which the United States is at war, was sent to the governor. The bill creates a commission to consist of the state education commissioner and two persons to be designated by the state board of regents. They will be required to examine all text books and if it is found that any contain unlawful matter the commission will disapprove of its use. Prohibited books in use in the schools may be contained until Sept 1 next.

Sunday Movie Bill Killed.

The Welsh bill to permit movie pictures on Sunday in such municipalities as might not by ordinance declare them illegal struck a snag in the senate. The measure passed the assembly last week by a bare majority and when transmitted to the senate was referred to the committee on codes. When the committee reported the measure favorably, Senators Gilchrist of Kings and Whitney of Saratoga objected to its advancement to the order of final passage and it was consigned to the legislative cemetery of general orders.

Senate Confirms Ottinger.

The nomination of Nathan Ottinger of New York as a justice of the supreme court, to fill the vacancy resulting from the resignation of Francis M. Scott, was sent to the senate by Governor Whitman. On motion of Chairman Henry M. Sage of the finance committee to which appointments ordinarily are referred, the nomination was confirmed immediately as a courtesy to Senator Albert Ottinger, brother of the nominee.

Women Register May 25.

The Walters bill providing for the registration of women voters on May 18 was amended in the senate under an emergency message from the governor, so as to change the registration day to May 25. The change was desired, the message said, because a Jewish holiday falls on the date originally set.

Bill to Punish Disloyalty Killed.

The McElligott bill designed to prevent and punish disloyal utterances was killed in the assembly by a vote of 65 to 48. The motion to kill was made by Republican Leader Adler who contended that the measure was so loosely drawn that, if enacted, it might restrict honest criticism.

Legislative Items.

The amended Robinson bill to permit the shooting of cats found hunting birds protected by law passed the assembly.

Under the terms of the Mahan bill which passed the assembly, the same restrictions against selling intoxicants to federal soldiers and sailors in uniform would be extended to the members of the New York state guard. The measure now goes to the governor.

The Slater bill to make a state reservation out of the property originally purchased for the Mohansic state hospital and the Yorktown Training school, passed the assembly. It now goes to the governor.

Governor Whitman signed the Sage-Welsh bill, to prevent the erection by the New York Central railroad of a bridge with midstream piers in the Hudson river near Carleton. Supporters of the bill argued that the piers would be a menace to navigation and would aggravate ice gorge and flood conditions.

The Argetsinger bill to facilitate the taking of the soldier vote has passed the assembly and now goes to the governor. Among other things the measure provides that fall primary day shall be on the ninth, instead of the seventh Tuesday before election, reduces the time for filing independent certificates of nomination and extends the time in which soldiers may vote.

The Cowee bill to provide for the conscription of the unemployed during the war passed the assembly with the Socialists casting the only negative votes. The Robinson bill with the same objective in view, but different in form, passed the senate. It is the plan of the leaders to [illegible] choke with it Conrad Wirsel.

MILK EXHIBITS ATTRACT ATTENTION

Food Value and Cheapness of Milk Shown in Forceful Manner

A series of milk exhibits showing the comparative cheapness of milk and its great food value is being given in several of the large cities of the state under the direction of H. E. Babcock, director of the Bureau of Food Conservation of the New York State Food Commission.

These exhibits are the best of anything that has ever been done to show the food value of milk. They are simple, do not try to teach too much and bring out so clearly that which is taught that it will be remembered.

One part of the exhibit shows by actual comparison the value of milk and various other foods. Another part shows prepared meals containing a large per centage of milk in various forms.

The exhibit in the Grand Central Depot in New York had a constant stream of visitors who took much interest. Many visitors copied the menus and recipes which were suggested on the use of milk.

Work of this kind will do much to help the present milk situation

WORLD'S LEGIT. SUGAR MANUFACTURE

Washington, D. C., April 8.—Senator Champ Clark, in an address before the Colorado society of Washington, D. C., advocated the arbitrary limitation of the House of Representatives to 300 members. "With fewer men we could do the business in shorter time than at present. Formerly we had a nine months vacation every year," he said. "Now we are in session practically all the time."

The House has grown, and grown, until it has become unwieldy. Following the census of 1910 there was an increase of about seventy members, and the Congress that put thru the reapportionment of districts knew very well that it was laying up trouble for all future times; but political expediency came first. When another census is taken the House will doubtless be made still larger in size notwithstanding the protests of statesmen like Speaker Clark who recognizes the evil of the situation, and who know that Congress would not be with us all the time in the House was smaller, and could therefore work faster.

Reconciliation of the Ex-Presidents

Little thinks like the personal differences of men do not count for much in these busy days; yet in 1912 the whole Republican party went to "bat" and to defeat over the quarrel between Messrs. Taft and Roosevelt. When the latter was seriously sick in a New York hospital recently, Mr. Taft went to see him, and the hatchet was buried "good and deep." And now they write to one another, and correct each other's speeches before they are delivered.

Did Leadership Fumble?

There are interesting stories regarding the Wisconsin Senatorial campaign floating about Washington. Mr. Davies, the Democratic candidate, made a remarkable showing, considering that he was running in a rock-ribbed Republican state. And now it is claimed that Mr. Davies was defeated by leaders within his own party. The letter of the President attacking the loyalty of Mr. Lenroot, by inference; and the speech of Vice President Marshall, telling the people of the Badger State that they were suspected of "disloyalty," are held to have defeated Davies. Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, the Democratic Senator from Illinois, was sent to Wisconsin, to campaign for Mr. Davies, but returned to Washington without making any speeches. The Republican campaign committee even went to the length of issuing and circulating the Vice President's speech; and used it to show that the people of the state were being unjustly condemned, and held up as pro-Germans. The returns indicate that Wisconsin resented having a few of the Democratic leaders and the press point to it and its people with suspicion. The National Democratic management that operated its long-distance guns from Washington to Wisconsin, is roundly censured for its poor methods; and Mr. Davies' defeat is regarded as largely due to poor tactics on the part of some of his friends, notably Mr. Marshall, which his great popularity was unable to overcome.

On the other hand the Republicans are proud of their victory, and Mr. Lenroot will change over from the Lower House to the Senate as easily as tho he were simply moving from one hotel to another. Mr. Lenroot has been in Washington a good many years and has considerable personal popularity. The Senatorship is a logical promotion that has been well earned.

Henry Ford and the War

There was a time when Henry Ford was a Democrat, and he voted for Woodrow Wilson. Now he is a Republican and I didn't want war. We have a Democrat for President and we have War, and I'm for both. Why? Mr. Wilson has proved himself to be an able leader and the war was forced on us. Now that we are faced with the hideousness of warfare, let us see it thru to the bitter end."

"The farmers are up against it, and the Government should take steps immediately to pit skilled labor behind the food producers. Just now the man with the plow is as necessary as the man with the rifle; in fact, the food grower is the big man behind the gun. I strongly advocate that the Government put into the fields without delay, some of the trained men who have been drafted and to inquire minutely into what thousands of men between the ages of 35 and 50 are doing.

"I believe also that all factories turning out products not essential to the conduct of the war should release many men for farm work during the harvest season. You have no idea how many good farmers are to be found in the big factories." Mr. Ford stated that he was preparing to release a large group of young workers for farm work in Michigan this spring.

Farm Workers

Belief that a shortage of farm labor exists is largely imaginary, according to Louis F. Post, Assistant Secretary of Labor, says: "What we need is less agitation about putting women on the farms, less talk about the importation of Chinese and more teamwork and mutual confidence. There are plenty of able-bodied men in America to farm American farms, and the Department of Labor will see that they get there."

"A careful survey," he added, "shows that the South is the only section experiencing a shortage of farm help. One reason is that some farmers pay good wages and afford poor working conditions. With products bringing twice the sums of two years ago, the farmer is well able to pay more money for help."

The Packers and the War

There appears to be a very wide difference of opinion between some members of the Government and the packers as to whether the latter are carrying their end of the war burdens. Senator Thompson, of Kansas, is the author of a resolution providing for the Government to take over and operate the packing houses for the period of the war. The Federal Trade Commission has been going after the packers with "hammer and tongs." On the other side we find that the packers have entered upon a campaign of publicity, and they are carrying advertisements in the newspapers of the country, attempting to prove that they have not made undue profits, and that they are "doing their bit." Upon these points the American public may be called upon to pass opinion, as the facts pro and con are likely to become widely circulated.

Get your mem together,
Pick up your princely son
And start right back for Berlin—
Don't try to walk, but run.

You thought the U. S. bluffing,
Laughed and shook your head,
Remember when you called your son?
Remember what you said!

Ach, Gott, but dots so funny,
I could laughit until I die.
Well, do your laughing now, old top,
For pretty soon you'll cry.

You stabbed and shot the Belgians,
Like a true, God-fearing Hun,
But you'll pay for every Belgian
Before the Yanks are done.

Yes, Mister Kaiser Wilhelm,
Yes, and your iron cross,
Are just about to realize
That Uncle Sam is boss.

I guess your days are numbered,
It's not so hard to tell,
And the only wish I have is that
You'll shovel coal in h——l.
