Editorial

"Education cannot be put on like three coats of quick-drying enamel." So writes Gov. Hambridge, who has some renown as a reporter of research.

Then, high school students, pause from your studies and think for a few moments. Are you gaining true education from your work here, or a glossy surface that readily reflects the significance of the Battle of Hastings, the physical principle that keeps us on the ground, or the most desirable method of table setting?

If, at the end of your senior year, you feel that now you are truly educated, that your Regents diploma marks you as one who can competently face the problems of life, as one who can discuss and remedy world difficulties effectively, think again!

The wisest man is humble before what he does not know; arrogance, impatience, and intolerance are not characteristics of the truly learned.

There are two ways of judging a person's education, and one seems rather superficial. If you can glibly prate about radioactivity, Gertrude Lawrence's writing Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina," the Ritz brothers in their latest picture, what America is reading, and now France is buying, then you may some what [illegible] yourself educated.

But the leaders of the day say that education lives as life's growth and adjustment, and that it can not stop with graduation. Education is not something that you can buy off the shelf and say, "Now I am educated."

Do you see your school as an opportunity to help you to live more satisfyingly than you would either wise? Do you aim to interpret your school learnings so that they have significance and meaning in your everyday living? From your school activities do you gain a gradual feeling of growth in living? Answer these questions honestly, and if need be, modify your attitude and school program to gain these values.

A Mere Suggestion To Seniors

Seniors—we hear that you are selling candy on Friday, and we merely want to suggest a recipe for some delicious fudge. Of course, it can be made by students other than Seniors on one of these nights that you think are boring. The following is a good recipe for chocolate fudge:

Two squares bitter chocolate; 2 cups granulated sugar; 2 teaspoons corn syrup; ¾ cup of milk; 2 tablespoons butter, and ½ teaspoon of vanilla.

Melt the chocolate and blend with the sugar. Stir in the corn syrup, milk and butter. Heat the mixture slowly, stirring frequently, and boil it to the soft-ball stage. Remove from the fire and allow it to cool slightly before adding the vanilla. Beat until creamy and turn it into a platter. Mark the candy in squares and cut it when it is cool.

Andover Downs Almond

Playing its second game of the year against the red Almond team, the Andover soccer team tallied a 2-0 victory.

The teams were evenly matched for the first quarter of the game, but Andover, being superior in speed, soon scored its first goal of the year. Clever kicking and skillful handling of the ball by the purple and white kept the game centered in Almond's half of the field.

Dugan and Saunders showed themselves to be very capable of handling the fullback position. The halfbacks, Hardy, Prue and Gath, gave the Almond team good competition thruout the game. Dodge, the player who holds down the capable position of goalie on the purple and white team, did not once leave an opening at the goal for the Almond team to score. Rice and Spicer shone on the offense, each accounting for one of the Andover scores.

Another game will be played on the local athletic field very soon. Soccer is a fine sport and more people should attend. There is no admission charge. Watch for the announcement of the next game and plan to attend.

Attention! French Students!

A new program entitled "Parlez-vous francais?" can be obtained by turning the dial to station WHDL, Olean, at 11 a. m., and 4:45 p. m., daily except Saturday afternoons and Sunday.

The editor is in receipt of a communication from James Crowley, director of publicity at the St. Bonaventure College, which has given him the above information.

In brief, he states that the authorities at the college realize that high school students often listen to their programs. They feel that this type of program will give pupils practice in the rudiments of French. It is to be conducted by a professor of modern languages and a native of Belgium.

Five Students Make First Honors

Mary Greenan, Doris Honegger, Betty Jo Ludden, John Dean and Audrey Glover are to be congratulated on making first honors! To gain this distinction, they must have had an average of 90 per cent in three major subjects with none below 85.

Those winning second honors (having maintained an average of 85 per cent in three major subjects with none below 80) are: Charlotte Coryell, Gerald Dolan, Leo Nobles, Pearl Goodridge, Betty Greene, Lyle Ordway, Eleanor Northrup, and Stanley Ruger.

That means, students, that 13 of you have been consistent in doing your lessons! Probably there are more who just missed it. By all means, work just a little harder and make your name go down in the hall of Andover High School fame.

—A-H-S—

Around A. H. S. With C. Coryell

Aren't flies a nuisance, when they hover around your face at the Hi Herald meeting, Bethel?

Five weeks' tests were hard for some and easy for others. Which reminds me, did you see Johnny Lynch's face when he heard he had passed Latin II?

Candy sales are in full blast now. The Senior girls like to be excused early from study hall to prepare for the sale. Here's hoping the boys don't get sick after sampling the assortment!

Anna and Merilyn Hardy and Elaine Pope can really "go to town" while playing "Chopsticks," and "Ten Pretty Girls, after only a few practice. Did you hear them last week?

Some one in the first grade caught a "whale" rather than a minnow, but probably grown large when he or she it will come to the [illegible] entry and nip fingers?

I hope the new school has enough halls so that they will not be crowded between classes. It would also be nice to have lockers under which it will be impossible to lose pencils and pens, don't you think?

I hope that everyone read "Gold Star Mother" in last week's issue of the Hi Herald. It was an excellent story, with real meaning, Betty Jo. It seemed to be hard for the judges of the Junior play cast to pick the players. All the Juniors must be good actors.

I've heard some of the teachers whose home rooms are on the west side of the school, complaining about the view from their windows. The view from the office, science room and Room C is so very colorful and beautiful.

I've noticed that Miss Barrett has one lone plant in her home room. I'll bet she'd like some more. How about it, Sophomores?

Bets were flying thick and fast during the World series games. Those who bet on the Yanks are cheering.

Yum! Yum! Wouldn't I like some of those pies that the Homemaking girls are baking! Or some of the delicious salads that the eighth grade homemaking girls are making to fit in with lunches and dinners?

Most of the boys and Mr. Holmes seem happier than usual. It couldn't be because they won the first soccer game, could it? And did you see the number in the cheering section that night?

I noticed that there were four times that Jim Wentworth didn't take or bring the usual bus load. It's unusual to have "Jim" sick. Here's hoping he is entirely recovered.

Seemingly the P. G.'s got enough cars to take them to the roller-skating rink. Miss Cappuccilli, Miss Wood, Katherine Barber, George Joyce, Carl Will, Doris Honegger, Don Hardy and Mary Greenan are among the list of unfortunates who found themselves on the floor. Also heard that Miss Barrett and Vivian Conners went on a "sit-down strike" together. However, all the above-mentioned unfortunates had no bones broken.

I hear that Sophia Kohut is to be congratulated this Saturday. Happy birthday, Sophia!

One of the bulletin boards in the library wouldn't be very interesting to the boys, but it brings a few pointers to the girls on dress for school or anytime.

I always thought dirndle skirts would be hard to make, but seemingly they aren't, for several A. H. S. girls wear ones that they have made themselves.

"George In a Jam"

Rehearsals for the Junior play are in full swing. The tryouts were held Thursday and Friday of last week. The play selected is "George in a Jam," by Lillian Mortimer. It is a three-act comedy. The following were selected as characters:

Jim Gray -- A Youthful Guardian Leslie Brundage
Missy Brown -------- His Ward Betty Greene
George Forbes, another Ward of His Robert Perry
Odessa ------- The Colored Cook Veronica Lynch
Nellie Carson ---- George's Bosom Friend ---- Bernadine Briggs
Sara Jane Larkins, A Rustic Heiress Vivian Conners
Ma Larkins ------- Her Mother Kalliopy Karcanes
Pop Larkins -------- Sara's Father William Dugan
Zeke Stebbins -- A Rural Detective Richard Baker

The play will be produced under the direction of Miss Josephine Cappuccilli and will be presented to the public on November 17 and 18.

Carol Walton's Team Wins Contest

Carol Walton's side, which had the most people standing when the bell rang, won the contest.

Dolores Farwell Sells Book on Belgium

The English IV students have been assuming the role of book agents, and have endeavored to sell books which have been recently read, to their classmates. Dolores Farwell, acting as clerk, wrote her interview with a customer in the following manner:

Customer: "Is this Belgium by Foster worth reading?"

Clerk: "Yes. As its name implies, it is about the country and people of Belgium."

Customer: "Don't you tell me something about the content of the book?"

Clerk: "Yes. I read the book a short while ago, and it is a very interesting piece of literature. People seem to think that the name 'Belgium' is only a geographical expression, but it has really been famous for apes, but people weren't conscious of the fact. People are surprised to find so much honor and patriotism in the country. It has been visited by many Americans since Longfellow's time because they find it the most accessible country on that continent. It is a nation, even tho it has no national language. The political union in West Belgium was the Flemings and of Flanders and the union in East Belgium was the Walloons. These existed around the eleventh thru the fourteenth centuries. Thru prosperity and adversity, all Belgians have been united under the same government for nearly five hundred years. There are not many European nations who can claim as much."

Customer: "Can you tell me something about the most important chapters?"

Clerk: "The first chapter deals with the influence of geography on the character and destinies of the people. The second chapter describes some of the more general characteristics of the people themselves, particularly those of rare and long-inherited people, traditions and ways of early life. The third chapter deals with the history of the Low countries with which every educated Belgian is familiar. Fourthly, the author traces the story of the evil centuries when Belgium was the 'Cockpit of Europe.' The fifth chapter deals with the establishment of Belgian independence in 1830-1839. What I especially noted there was that the Belgian nation, and no one else, was responsible for the formation of its own national state. The rest of the chapters deal with their constitution, political parties, social conditions and agencies, art and literature.

Customer: "Did this book teach you anything that you didn't already know?"

Clerk: "I didn't realize that they had so much national character and I didn't think their achievements were so good as they really are.

Customer: "Do you think that a student of seventeen should be interested in this type of book?"

Clerk: "Yes, if he wants to learn anything about Belgium, I would recommend this one."

Customer: "I'll buy it. Wrap it in a gift box and send it to Jane Widmer, 35 MacBeth Street, Rochester, New York."

Bits of Knowledge From Exams

The teachers of Andover High seem to have acquired bits of knowledge from the five weeks test papers that are worth noting.

Miss Wood found out that sometimes one of her Homemaking D students turns cannibalistic and eats smaller children. A choice piece of news was expounded by one who said that these are the stages of life: infancy, pre-school age, school age, addlescence, and old age (people of 20 and over).

"Good manners should be used every where, even in the home," said one of the Freshmen.

Miss Cappuccilli learned that "an essay is a short life or dairy of some belief"; also that "the feudal system is a person who is a high-toned individual who has a castle and slaves and surfs run it and do his work."

Some unusual figures of speech were brought to light:

Personification: "The tree walked with her head high."

Hyperbole: "Her shoes were large submarines."

Apostrophes: "Floor, why must you be so hard to walk upon?"

"O Moon, come out and shine tonight!"

O Paper, how much I have to put on you!"

Second Graders Become Scientists

The pupils of the second grade took a trip to the high school science room. Using a Bunsen burner to melt paraffin they waxed some leaves for future study. They have been studying the various kinds of leaves in the past few weeks.

The fifth grade finished its arithmetic contest last week. The competing teams were headed by Janice Walton, score 2,305 and William Dougherty, score 1,995. Miss Jordan has suggested a party for her class.

The seventh grade has a new member, Irene Trowbridge from Wellsville. Other new members in the grades are Hilda Trowbridge (fourth grade) and Harold Allen, first.

Guess Who

This Sophomore lad is a newcomer to the Andover high. This has not stopped his popularity, however. He is the president of the Sophomore class, and is very interested in mechanical engineering. If I said his interest often centers in the eighth grade room, I might give him away, so I won't. Come now, whom have we here?

Last week's answer: Eleanor Northrup.

New Restaurant Starts up Business

On Tuesday, the Quadruplet Musketeers restaurant started in business under the leadership of Rose Yannie, ,who also acted as head waitress and hostess. She welcomed and seated the guests and furnished them with menus. The guests had a wide choice of food.

The cook who arranged the dishes needed, the waitress who took orders and served, and the guests all were members of the Home Economics nine class.

The object of this was to give practice to this class in setting tables, selecting foods economically, planning menus, and serving.

A Night of Horror

The Hi Herald staff, having heard so many students tell of their enjoyment of the essay, "A Night of Horror," by Kaliopy Karcanes, for the reader's entertainment, the following story written by [illegible]

Terror At Its Height

Two weeks ago I unexpectedly chanced to meet terror at its height. I was drowsily awaiting the arrival of my roommate, Jocelyn Wise, when the experience occurred.

It was nearly eleven thirty and I was expecting her any time. As I call her, she came in her door and would be home soon, I had said.

The half-hour struck, at which time I heard a small tap at the window. I looked, only to see two hands on the window pane.

"Hm-m," I mused, "up to your old tricks again, aren't you, Jackie?"

I snapped off the light and tiptoed to the hall door. I opened it softly and stole quietly to a place where I could scare her.

Instead of seeing Jackie, I saw a short, thick-set man with a red handana across his mouth. I nearly screamed, but knowing there was no one from whom to summon aid, I thought it best to keep quiet. I went inside, only to find two more of his kind in the room I had previously occupied.

This time I screamed only to bring the fourth man to my back. This despotic imposter put a gun to me while the others bound and gagged me and offered their pungent remarks as to my destiny.

Next I found myself poignantly lying in a cold, hard place. All was chaos to me when I began to realize that I was lying implicated in ropes and still gagged.

Spasmodically I tried to collect my thoughts. Pains rigidly shot thru my head which hindered my thinking.

I twisted and pulled and finally freed my right arm from the entanglement. I gently rubbed my forehead and found I had been hit with a club or the end of a gun. Faint visions of my experience were returning. My screams must have been muffled only by the savage blow of some weapon.

I could realize no more. I was steadily becoming weaker and faint. I turned slightly to my right and met the glaring eyes of my feigning prosecutors. They laughed in a confident manner which showed they didn't believe I could get loose.

I felt water from whose source I couldn't detect. It had shown no signs of rain. I wondered in surprise at its peculiarity.

I sensed enough to see the plot of the whole scheme. A tank of water had been placed there before hand. Perpetual drips of water were coming from it.

I heaved a sigh, tho unaware of my strength. The ropes broke. I heard voices. It was Jocelyn. "Merciful Heavens," she was saying, "Aren't you ever going to wake up?"

I stirred breathlessly in response to her question. I was wet with the so-called rain which actually came from a glass thrown by Jackie.
