ELECTRICITY CHEAP IN MANY PLACES

Story of How a Small California City Has Made Money by Use of Municipal Electricity—We Can Do Same.

Andover people, just having completed a municipal electric lighting plant will be interested in the following account of the work a similar plant is doing business out West."

The following is from correspondence from the New York Evening World:

"I am in recent receipt of the annual report of the City of Glendale, Cal. Glendale is a suburb of Los Angeles of 20 to 6000 people, who became dissatisfied with irregular and inefficient service in lighting and pumping like six or seven years ago bought in a private plant in Tropica and started in for municipal ownership. The result has been more than satisfactory. Within two years they have also taken over their own water privileges.

The Tropico private plant charged 7 cents per kilowatt hour; Glendale began with 6 cents and 400 subscribers. In six weeks the price was dropped to 4 cents. Last year this rate was but 2 cents per kilowatt hour. My friends wrote that their little plant was called the "best run and most economical plant of its kind in the West;" also that the rate charged was at that time proposed to be the smallest called for by any company in the United States.

However, opening this last report I read the following:

"For the past six months it has been apparent that the rates charged needed revision . . . The surplus shown has been larger than necessary for the extension of this system and retiring the debt, and for 1917 to 1918 present rates it would be considerably over $25,000, or almost one-half the income. The following rate for electricity is recommended to take effect in October 1st: For single-phase current, a service charge of 50 cents per month, plus 2 cents per kilowatt hour for the first 100 hours; after the first 100 hours 1 cent per kilowatt hour.

These new rates are exceedingly low, but both the water and the electric rates recommended are sufficient to pay all operating and maintenance cost, to allow for all depreciation, to retire bond issues as they mature and to make all reasonable extensions.

In addition to this low rate, during the coal famine of last winter a friends, wrote me: We are using electricity only for all our cooking and heating; we can't afford to burn coal." This is the direct result of a municipal electric business man's luncheon of one two years ago.

Glendale can buy bonds because its citizens are not ridden to death to provide heat, light and power. Glendale has bought more bonds than any other town of its size (I was told) in the country, every one subscribed approximately a bond apiece for its inhabitants.

CHOOSING SUCCESSOR TO SENATOR STONE

Long May Be New Senator From Missouri. Efficient Officer of State Department May Don Senatorial Toga.

By Manton M. Wyvell

The death of Senator Stone of Missouri, Chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate, may lead to many changes in the Government machinery at Washington dealing with our foreign affairs. It is probable that Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska will be made chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, as he was the ranking member under Senator Stone's chairmanship.

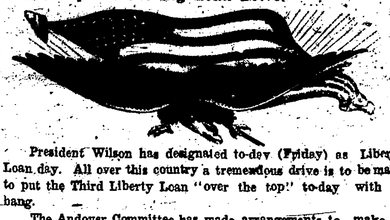
The name most prominently mentioned to succeed Senator Stone as senator from Missouri is the Honorable Breckenridge Long, of St. Louis, Missouri, Third Assistant Secretary of State. Mr. Long is only thirty-seven years of age, but is a man of striking personality, great charm of manner and of great ability and industry.

Altho he has held the office of Third Assistant Secretary of State only a year, his work has been characterized by great devotion to duty and his achievements have been many. It is safe to say that Mr. Long has met intimately more world public men who are leaders in statesmanship and in political thot than any other living man. The duty fell upon Mr. Long of entertaining and providing the business and personal appointments for the great European missions which have officially visited the United States since our country entered the war. Among those men were Balfour, former Premier and now the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain; Joffre, the great French General, popular idol and hero of the battle of the Marne; Amundson and Hanson, the great explorers who came to this country as the heads of commercial missions from Norway; Ishii, the distinguished Japanese statesman who has recently returned to the United States as ambassador. The smaller countries of Belgium, Roumania, and Serbia also sent their most distinguished men to the United States on special missions whose work was likewise provided for by Mr. Long.

It is a distinguished honor to be senator from the great state of Missouri, but it is doubtful whether Mr. Long could render services any more valuable than those he is now performing as Third Assistant Secretary of State, and it is questionable whether Mr. Lansing would consent to any change in Mr. Long's official position with the Government.

Today is Liberty Day!

Buy Liberty Bonds, Display Old Glory and Work Like Mad in Your Effort to Put Andover "Over the Top" in the Big Loan Drive.



President Wilson has designated to-day (Friday) as Liberty Loan day. All over this country a tremendous drive is to be made to put the Third Liberty Loan "over the top" to-day with a bang.

The Andover Committee has made arrangements to make a House to house canvass to-day. You may expect them. Open the door wide and receive them gladly. They are working for you and in your interest just as much as tho you were employing them. Then open your heart and your pocketbook and subscribe for bonds till it hurts. Andover has forty or more young men who have offered their very life if necessary to their country in order to make this world a fit place for you to live in and in order to protect you and your money. If a man can possibly get the money even tho he has to borrow it for a time, he ought to be willing to buy Liberty Loan Bonds which are to be used in defending his money and his country. And if he is not willing the money should be taken from him—just as the life of a soldier is taken from him by conscription, without asking his consent.

The remarkable thing in this glorious Republic is that when human life is concerned it is taken for granted that the Government has the right to take what it wants, and the nation conscripts life with a cheer.

But when it comes to money, Arthur Brisbane dopes it out about right when he says "it is almost anarchy to suggest that the nation should take money as it takes life."

Yes, that seems to be the feeling in spite of the fact that the money, should it be taken, will be used to protect the money that is left, and will be returned to the owner dollar for dollar plus four and a quarter per cent. interest annually.

Isn't there something the matter with a nation developing such a reverence for money and so little reverence for a man's life?

The Government will take a man and send him to the trenches without any by-your-leave, as a farmer takes a chicken off the roost and to the chopping block. Yet this very nation gets down on its knees and humbly begs for money to be invested in bonds, prints patriotic posters, writes patriotic poetry, implores school children to save their pennies and buy the bonds—when it knows all the time where the money is and needs only say "bring it here" and it must come.

This, gentlemen of finance, is what will happen to you if you do not volunteer your cash. They will have to conscript your wealth. The Government must and will have the money. Better come across now while the coming brings with it a patriotic honor

BUY TILL IT HURTS

You will surely be seen to-day by the local committee if you have not already purchased bonds.

LETTERS FROM OUR SOLDIER BOYS

Levi Dodge Writes Interesting Letter From Camp Dix. Hard to Tell Sundayy From Other Days in Camp.

Camp Dix, N. J.
April 15, 1918.

Dear Father and all:

I am getting my duds ready to ship to night, probably can't get over to the Y until to-morrow night, for I want to use this ink all I can before I return it.

I can't see as one day is much different down here than another, for on Sunday you can see the men play ball and drill, and on week days you can see them drill and play ball.

Last night we went over to the Y and the services were as follows: Song service, prayer, and the scripture which was taken from Hebrews, 2nd chapter and the 1st verse. The speaker was from New York City and every men who went said it was a great speech.

It has been about like hot June weather here to-day, and they kept us out there on the drill field about seven hours and believe me it is some job for 200 men to do a drill that we used to do with something like (32).

Tell Mildred that I got her letter to-night and will try to answer it before I get "old and grey-headed." I only have about one half dozen letters that I ought to write before bed time, and that is one hour away.

Will be so glad when we get out from under quarantine. Gordon Howe came down sick to-day. He looked like measles, and if he did, good-night, only three weeks more at least.

Must close now. Tell everybody I am well and happy, the only way to be.

Good bye and answer soon.

Your loving son,
LEVI S. DODGE.

ALLEGANY SENDS 24 MORE BOYS TO CAMP

Only One, Lynn Hammond, Called From Andover This Time. Will Leave for Camp Dix Tuesday From Belmont.

The local Draft Board, at Belmont received a call last week Thursday morning for 24 more men from Allegany County to entrain at that section April 30th, for Camp Dix.

It is said no farmers are on the list, as they will not be called until fall because of their needed work on the farms.

Lynn Hammond of this village is the only one from Andover called at this time.

The special train will arrive at Belmont just before noon, if on time.

CLEAN UP DAY

The Village Board think it about time for Andover's annual house cleaning, and have designated next Tuesday, May 30th, as the day to dig out the back yard.

Teams will be provided as usual to carry away all the old rubbish placed at the curb in convenient boxes. Better get the stuff ready Monday evening so there will be no waiting Tuesday.

REFUSE TO PAY THE MAY PRICES

Commission Takes Surplus in Consideration in Setting Price. Bordens Have Served Notice to Withdraw From Agreement

At the meeting of the Federal Milk Commission on Monday, Apr. 22nd notice was read showing that the Bordens Farm Products and Condensed Milk Companies together with a few other smaller dealers have previously served notice that they would not bind themselves to pay the prices fixed by the Commission for May. This was the first intimation the League had received that such notice had been served.

The Borden Companies claim the reason for this repudiation of the findings of the Commission is caused by the serious market condition which makes it impossible for them to continue to pay the Commission's prices. It is difficult to accept this explanation, however, when by the conditions of agreement under which the Commission sets the prices all market conditions including surplus must be taken into consideration.

It looks now as if there would be serious trouble with certain of the dealers May 1st. The Dairymen's League has wished to avoid trouble because the country is at war and because market conditions are bad. For this reason every effort has been made to allow the Federal Milk Commission to fix prices. The League went so far as to accept the price set by the Commission for April milk which is below the cost of production. It is willing to accept the Commission's prices for May but, of course, cannot do so if the dealers will not also.

As the situation now stands responsibility for trouble rests squarely on the shoulders of certain dealers, and if the League is obliged to withhold the milk from any of the dealers may 1st, it is likely to have the sympathy of the Federal Food Administration which appointed the Federal Milk Commission for this district.

The milk situation will be the chief topic of discussion at every one of the nine hundred meetings of League Branches to be held this week Saturday, and it is expected that definite action will be taken at these meetings.

FRENCH REGARD U.S. ARMY AS MIRACLE

English Writer Tells How French Peasants are Amazed by America's Military Works. Number Troops up to Expectation.

London, April — Lawrence Jerrold, who has just returned from a visit with the American forces in France, has this article in the London Telegraph:

The old towns and villages of Central France look upon the American Army in their midst as the greatest miracle they have ever known. One motors thru scores of little towns and villages where the American soldiers swarms. The villagers put up bunting, calico signs, flags, and have stocks of American canned goods in their shop windows. The children, when bold, play with the American soldiers, and, when shy, venture to go up and touch an American soldier's leg. Old peasant ladies put on their Sunday black and go out walking and talking with American soldiers. The village Mayor turns out and makes a speech utterly incomprehensible to the American soldier whenever a fresh contingent arrives. The 1919 class, just called up, plays bugles and shouts, "Good morning!" when an American car goes by.

Vice versa, Central France is perhaps even more of a miracle to the American troops. To watch the American trooper being shown over a castle which was in its prime under Louis XII., and dates back to a Roman fortress, now beneath it, it is a wonderful sight. There is nothing of the "innocents Abroad" about him. I heard scarcely anything of any American brag of modernism. On the contrary, the soldier is learning all these wonders of the past. The officer too, even the educated officer, is beautifully astonished at all this past.

The American officers who speak French are, of course, heroes in every town, and sought after by every French officer and man. Those who do not know French are learning it.

A great French preacher in a sermon in a Paris church said that this coming to France of millions of British troops and future millions of American troops may mean eventually one of the greatest changes in Continental Europe the world has ever known. His words never seemed to me so full of meaning as they did when I was among the Americans. There, of course, the contrast is infinitely greater than it can be in the France which British troops are occupying and defending. These Americans, building up numerous works of all kinds to prepare for defending France, have brought with them Chinese and Negro labor, and Chinese and Negro and German and Austrian prisoners all work in these Ameri-
