GUN-SHY

Vivien Leigh Admits Hardest Job in "Gone With the Wind" Was Pulling a Trigger.

A girl with a heart-shaped face stood near the head of a flight of stairs, her green eyes wide with horror.

Up the steps, one by one, climbed a burly ruffian with a pistol in his belt, his yellow teeth bared in a menacing leer.

The girl raised from the folds of her dress a heavy old-fashioned cap-and-ball revolver. She pointed it at the intruder, her finger tightened on the trigger—

"And that was the hardest thing I ever did in my life!"

Clark Gable and Vivien Leigh in "Gone with the Wind"

Selznick's technicolor production starring Clark Gable, Miss Leigh, Leslie Howard and Olivia de Havilland, and opening Friday, Feb. 16th at 10 a. m., at the Steuben theatre, Hornell.

Those who watched the filming of "Gone with the Wind" remarked on the intensity with which Miss Leigh seemed to feel the part she was playing.

"I was suddenly afraid the gun might be loaded," Miss Leigh said afterward. "I know now how it must feel to be a killer. There was a soldier coming upstairs—I realized it was Mr. Paul Hurst. But when I pointed my pistol at him, and pulled the trigger, the idea burst in my mind like a balloon—maybe there was a bullet in it!

"It took every ounce of will power I had to pull the trigger, and when the blank went off harmlessly, my knees went so weak I almost sat down."

A Tough Role

A few days previously, Miss Leigh had run between two careening gun carriages, pulled by galloping horses. The heavy caissons missed her by inches, and the work of running thru deep dust, with hoopskirts impeding her, greatly fatigued the 103-pound tar.

Yet she says she was more exhausted from the mental strain of pointing her pistol at Hurst and pulling the trigger than by running up and down the streets of the big Atlanta set.

"I was only able to do it because I fixed my eyes on the pistol in his belt, and imagined him pointing it at me," she said.

Time Marches On

The minutes flew by at a great speed last Wednesday afternoon when the clocks in the high school, after a temporary "stand still" strike were started again by electric encouragement.

The library was occupied with students who were browsing thru the magazines when, all of a sudden the clock hands began to click. Sometime earlier in the afternoon they had stopped and were being "wound up" by some invisible hand.
