cannot exist without them.

The only success worth having is that which is earned, thru genuine attributes of character and the development of whatever talents or abilities one may possess.

Rules of etiquette are like the red and green traffic lights. Without rules to go by we would all crash into one another's feelings.

Actually, each rule of etiquette comes into being because it is found to be the best way to meet a certain situation.

When we don't know what to do next, we become awkward and self conscious, because we are fearful of what others may be thinking of us.

The directions contained in the following answers include those for the many everyday situations which we sooner or later come up against. By putting these rules into constant practice we will soon be following them instinctively. That is when they will really start paying us for our efforts.

Introductions:

1—What is the proper way to introduce a man to a girl?

The most useful introduction on informal as well as formal everyday occasions is the mere pronouncing of two names, "Miss Smith—Mr. Jones." (The man's name should be said last, even if he is the older).

2—A young man to an older man?

"Mr. Elder—John Young."

3—What mistakes in wording are often made in introductions?

Do not say "Mr. Jones shake hands with (or I want to make you acquainted with, or meet) Mr. Brown."

4—What should one say when introduced?

"How do you do" is the accepted reply. When you meet someone whom you have heard much about and have long wanted to meet, it would be natural to say: "I am so glad to meet you." Do not say: "Charmed" or "Pleased to meet you."

Dating:

5—Should a man tell a girl his plans for the evening when he asks her for a date?

He consults her, of course.

6—When she is expecting him, is it permissible for him to stay in the car and honk the horn?

Definitely not.

7—Should a girl ask the man to come in the house when they return?

If her family is up, it is polite to ask: "Don't you want to come in for a little while?" If no one is up she says: "Good night. Thank you for a lovely evening."

Parties:

8—What should a man say in asking a girl to dance? What is her reply?

He asks: "May I have this dance?" She replies: "I'm sorry, this one is taken." Or "Certainly" or "With pleasure."

9—What does one say when leaving a party? What is the proper response for the hostess or the host?

"Thank you for asking me," or "Thank you, I've had a wonderful time" or something else that is appreciative. The hostess (or host) says: "Thank you for coming" or "Thank you, I'm so glad you could come."

Restaurants and Theatres:

10—Who orders the meal?

The simplest way is for each to give his own order to the waiter, the girl first.

11—Is it proper for a girl to apply make-up or comb her hair at a restaurant table or soda counter?

Nothing could be worse than combing her hair where food is being served. It is offensive to almost everyone.

12—In leaving the theatre, who goes first?

They leave seats as they come. However, each gentleman naturally stands in the aisle a moment so that the girl fellowing him can walk with, or out ahead of him.
