THE FORUM

A REQUISITE IN BUSINESS

By Rev. V. L. Eggleston

Ambition to attain a commanding position in the business world has oftimes resulted in breaking the spirit of the young adventurer; as it is not possible for all to occupy a position at the head. There must necessarily be some one to attend to the minor details and carry out the wishes of those who hold the power to direct the affairs of a large business enterprise.

Too often the man who has failed gives up the battle and drifts thru life with no particular aim in view, never stopping to analyze his failure and endeavor to ascertain the cause. Perhaps he possesses a strain of egotism in his make-up and refuses to acknowledge that his method is faulty in handling the details incident to the position he occupies. If this be the case, then it is almost a hopeless task to lift him out of the rut and give him a fresh start, for wounded vanity is slow to heal and always leaves a scar.

In most instances, however, where failure has occurred it has been caused by misdirected effort, or an attempt to succeed in a line of business for which one is not adapted. On every hand is to be found the parent preparing his son to be a salesman, a lawyer, a minister, or an accountant, when in fact the youth has absolutely no desire to follow any one of these particular times, but rather has a secret ambition to be a doctor or a merchant. Not wishing to disappoint the parent, the son struggles along thru life working at a task for which he has no heart. It is small wonder, then, there are so many wrecks strewn along the pathway in the business world.

Implanted in the heart of every red-blooded man is the desire to succeed. At the start every indication points to a quick, successful journey. The road seems to be brightly illuminated by the beacon lights radiating from the torch held by success, who sits serene at the top of the mountain. Enthusiasm runs rampant in the young man's spirit, and he dashes forward with an eager desire to scale the heights and be crowned a successful man. But the way seems longer than he expected. Where he had expected a smooth, straight pathway to the top, he is disappointed to find that the trail winds in and about in a tortuous manner. The light does not seem to illumine the trail so brightly as at the outset. Deep shoots, commonly known in the business world as the temptation to gamble, to forge or to embezzle, have to be crossed. The wayfarer awakens to the realization that the task is an arduous one. His ardor becomes less intense, and he turns hither and thither in an attempt to find a quicker and easier pathway to the goal—a fatal mistake that is made by the large majority of failures.

Overestimating one's ability is not a desirable trait. Too often it results in one refusing to heed the advice of others, or to profit by their experience. Confidence should be strongly cultivated, but not to that extent where it precludes receiving counsel from those who are in position to aid one. Many young men have rushed blindly forward, believing that they possessed every qualification for attaining success, only to meet with bitter disappointment. Had they been more conservative and stopped at times to seek the advice of those who had completed the journey they would undoubtedly have acquired knowledge that would insure their ultimate success.

Among the list of failures in the fight for supremacy are to be found those who have selected some successful man of the past as an example, and have endeavored to utilize the same methods in achieving success that he employed. They evidently neglected however, to stop and consider that the means used to gain an end a decade or two ago cannot be relied upon to accomplish the same result in this day. Methods of doing business are constantly undergoing a change and it is necessary to possess a large amount of initiative, coupled with a thoro knowledge of present and past ways of handling business affairs, to succeed now-a-days.

Using a successful business man as an example is perfectly right in a way, but one must not permit himself to get into a rut and fail to devise new methods. He must keep abreast of the times or he will be doomed to certain failure.

Ambition is the potent force that has developed the world's industries to their present status. Without it here would be a stagnation that would cause a general feeling of nothing-worthwhile in this life. It is a laudable quality, but it must be held in check. The young man just starting out in life should first of all firmly resolve to make haste slowly in the upward climb; always to be in a receptive mood when advice is offered by those competent to give it, to go thru life with an irreproachable character, repulsing every advance made by temptations along the way, and lastly to develop a strong, resolute spirit that will conquer every difficulty he may meet in his search for success.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Advice of This Andover Woman is of Certain Value

Many a woman's back has many aches and pains.

Of times 'tis the kidneys' fault. That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Many Andover women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs R. Engle, Maple St., says: "The first symptoms of kidney complaint in my case was backache. When I washed or ironed twinges of pain caught me in my kidneys, nearly driving me wild. I felt more tired mornings than when I went to bed. My feet and hands swelled badly and there were other distressing kidney disorders. Four boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I got at Brundage Drug Co., cured me of the attack and I felt like a different woman."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills — the same that Mrs. Engle had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgrs., Buffalo, N.Y

When somebody's urgent need to sell is the "reason" for a for sale ad, that ad is apt to be interesting to you.

Remember that the fuel situation next winter can be immensely helped by odd jobs with saw and axe between now and then.

* * *

There are two reasons for not forcing the sale of hens. The first is that heavy sales may make a market glut and low prices; the second is that the eggs laid now are produced at a comparatively low feed cost.

* * *

Some persons seem to think that all the exhortations to make war gardens are aimed at the amateur city gardeners. The State College of Agriculture points out that not enough folks who live right out in the open country are feeding themselves with the aid of a home garden. "The home garden," says the Otsego County Farm Bureau, "is a thing which is practically unknown to most farmers."

From the New York State School of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y.

Every smutted grain and every diseased potato is a potent ally of the enemy. Treat all seed to prevent disease and assure production of sound crops.

When it comes to results, there is not so much difference as one would suppose between the soldier spraying liquid fire on Germans, and the farmer spraying liquid fungicides on germs.

* * *

To have vegetables in cans on your pantry shelves is likely to mean that you must first have vegetables in your garden. Uncle Sam says, first, all the commercially canned stuff to feed our soldiers.

No dog law is worth the paper it is printed on unless public opinion backs it to the limit. One of the causes of the lack of growth in the sheep industry of New York is the vagrant dog.

* * *

According to some milk production cost surveys that have been made in New York it has almost seemed that some farmers have tried to see how many cows they could support, instead of how many cows are doing the supporting.

* * *

It takes less time, labor, and seed to make a test than it does to replant. And almost any corn planted this spring without foreknowledge of germination will have to be replanted at a time when there will be a greater scarcity of seed and less assurance that it will sprout.

WEATHER

Summary of Weather and Crop Conditions in New York State for the Week Ending May 7, 1918.

Normal warmth with an abundance of sunshine prevailed generally in all sections of the state. The rainfall was light to moderate, except in the southeastern and Hudson Valley sections where heavy showers prevailed. The season appears to be a little backward in the Upper Hudson Valley counties. Ideal weather conditions for seasonable farm operations obtained, and soil preparations, seeding, and planting progressed rapidly. Early seeded oats and spring wheat are germinating well; the acreage for these, and even for barley will be greatly increased as compared with former years. Grains and grasses still continue to improve slowly, altho reports indicate that the growth is still somewhat short for this time of year. Early fruits are in general bloom in all sections. The first commercial pea crop seeding for this season is in progress. Many vacant city lots and suburban gardens are being planted. Reports from Long Island districts indicate that the asparagus cuttings are excellent; the strawberry crop is very promising; market gardens and alfalfa are in excellent condition; and corn planting began in that section on the 6th. Warm rains are needed in all parts of the state to promote the rapid advance of vegetation.
