The profiteer hiding under a cloak of blatant loyalty.

Nineteen hundred years ago the MAN OF SORROWS definitely remarked to a company of friends and followers that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." At the time it made little impression upon his hearers, and in the centuries since that day men have grasped it merely as a theoretical truth, with no real thought of making it a life principle.

But the present world cataclasm has put people to thinking seriously of this statement of the great Teacher. People with no claims to religious convictions are waking up to the fact that underlying the statement is found the true secret of life. We are coming to see more clearly every day that the selfish life is the miserable life, stunting and dwarfing all the finer qualities of our nature that have elevated us as a race so immeasurably above the human brutes with whom we now do battle.

When the final history of the war is written, those whose names will go down at the head of the honor list will not be the profiteers who grasped millions from a suffering world; but those who gave, and gave, and gave, till they could give no more — who stripped themselves of earthly possessions to gain a crown that all earth and hell can never deprive them of—

The proud consciousness that they have "done what they could" for humanity and the RIGHT.

"IN THE PERFORMANCE OF DUTY"

How many homes in this country have already become sadly familiar with this phrase. It seems to be hurled at them in a cold and unfeeling manner by the military authorities. It is the set phrase used in announcing the death, on the field of battle, of a brave American boy who has sailed three thousand miles at the call of "duty."

"Your son died in the performance of his duty!"

Mothers, fathers, do you get only sorrow from the message? Do you not rather gather the sadly sweet conviction that all is well with the brave soul who saw his duty and went bravely to meet it—played the MAN to the end of the glorious, if brief chapter?

And what shall we say of ourselves, we who were not called to go "over there," yet were called to an equally honored task here at home? Have we not "died"—but LIVED "in the performance of duty?" The boy gave all he had—his life. He gave it like the hero that he was. Are we giving LIFE?

Think soberly for a moment. What does it mean to give life for country? It doesn't mean a dollar or two to the Red Cross and an auto for daughter. It doesn't mean five dollars to Y. M. C. A. and a sealskin coat or a diamond for mother. It doesn't mean a fifty dollar Liberty Bond, while we buy another farm. What does it mean?

Think!

"He DIED in the performance of duty."

—WSS—

In the present drive for War Savings Stamps the Government puts it up to us all to make small economies toward a great cause. The Liberty Bond issues call upon us to look ahead and balance the difference between income and outgo, and figuring carefully, to devote the utmost we can toward the purchase of bonds. After we have done this, the small sacrifices we can make from time to time can be turned toward thrift and war savings stamps. It has been suggested that the interest on the first issue of Liberty bonds, falling due this month, should be put into War Savings Stamps. As this interest is an amount beyond the ordinary income, applying it to this purpose will not be felt as a deprivation, and the aggregate amount, if so applied will be of great assistance to the Government.

The letter W takes prominent place in our alphabet. Without it we would have no WAR, no WOE, no WAILING, no WANTS, no WEALTH, no WISDOM, no WIT, no WINNING, no WOOD, no WOOL, no WHEAT, no WORK, no WORLD, no WAR SAVINGS STAMPS, no WAR.

Conservation of food means a war for freedom and democracy, and a war against autocracy, and autocrats and autocracy are synonymous with the kaiser and his government. The kaiser grew up by degrees as king of his country, first extensions and consolidations of power, the feudal system. This was autocratic, opposed to individual freedom, and any advance in liberty for the body of the people had to be wrung from them by bitter conflict. The United States government, on the contrary, came into being as a guarantee of the liberty of the people.

The first statement in the Declaration of Independence acknowledges man's right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and the formation of a new country is based upon the offenses of the king against this right.

The men who signed the Declaration did so as a protest against arbitrary power. They had little to gain and much to lose by the separation from the mother country. American troops were few and undisciplined, American resources undeveloped. The outcome of the struggle for independence seemed at the time more than doubtful. Yet these men, with hundreds of their followers, chose to hazard their property, their homes and families and their very lives in defence of the principles of human liberty.

America was victorious in the war, and came to a position where she could develop her power and resources. The United States became one of the great and prosperous nations of the world. But the circumstances of her inception have laid a peculiar obligation upon her. She must stand as the champion of freedom or be recreant to her own traditions.

Our entrance into the war with Germany is the logical outcome of this position. We were predestined to it. The United States could not watch unmoved the spectacle of a great arbitrary power, utterly unscrupulous as to means, using its mighty resources and its strong military system toward the enslavement of Europe.

Our national holiday this year will be both a celebration and a solemnity. We are giving our money, power and our man power toward the prosecution of a great war, in order to ensure to the free of this country and the oppressed of Europe the right to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," not only for to-day, but for generations to come. On this anniversary of the birth of our nation let us feel more than ever that in such a cause no sacrifice can be too great,—that the love of country and the love of humanity are not mere phrases, but a living reality to us all.

—WSS—

The Food Administration has issued an interesting statement in which we can see the result of the food economies effected by our wheatless and meatless days.

July 1st, 1917 the wheat available for export was estimated at 20,000,000 bushels. In the period from that date to June 1st, 1918, our shipments of wheat to the Allies amounted to 120,000,000 bushels.

The largest shipment of beef products in any one month during this period has been 87,000,000 pounds, against the ordinary export of 1,000,000 to 2,000,000 pounds a month. The largest export of pork in one month reached 308,000,000 pounds.

These supplies have been used to help feed the armies of France, Belgium, England, and to some extent Italy. Some of these foodstuffs have also been used for the civilian population of these countries.

It is a splendid record and shows that the care and self-sacrifice of its people has made the United States equal to its great task.

How much of this have YOU saved?

—WSS—

Government officials at the head of the wool and woolen department admonish that during the period of the war conservation of both men's and women's woolen apparel will be absolutely necessary. They predict that in 1919 we will be glad if we can get "rags" to make "reclaimed wool." Clothing, however, will not be scarce.

Editorial Correspondence

Paris Island,
Thursday, June 20, 1918.

I suppose you are right in the midst of printing the Andover News right now. Wish I was there too. I have just finished supper and go on guard duty at 8:20 so will only have time for a few lines.

Guard duty sounds easy but we find carrying a ten-pound gun on your shoulder steady for two hours gets to weigh about fifty pounds.

We moved from the manouver grounds to the main training camp Tuesday; that was a five-mile hike. We carried a marching order pack, weighing forty pounds and a ten-pound rifle, and made it in an hour and three quarters. When we reached here we worked up to taps getting our bunk house fixed up. We were in tents on the manouver grounds, but have bunk houses here. I like the tents better; you have more room and more privacy.

This island is about fifteen minutes ride from Port Royal, and contains about twenty-two square miles. The soil seems fairly productive. The trees look about the same as up there with the exception of numerous palm trees, these grow about twelve to fourteen feet high and about two feet in diameter. The camp streets are white sand filled with oyster shells. It looks as if it might some time have been all shells, which have been ground into sand by the constant travel on them. The mess is good enough, but the water is simply awful, luke warm and salty. It has cost me a few nickels for grape juice to quench my thirst.

They certainly give us an examination when we arrive here. They had me trotting around from 4:30 until 11:45, and what they don't know about a fellow when they finish isn't worth telling.

The Y. M. C. A. has a motion picture show here. It is free, in fact it is out-of-doors, the screen sets up all alone like a bill-board and the machine is covered just enough to protect it from the weather. The pictures are not new but in fair shape and furnish considerable amusement.

The Y. M. C. A. man was thru the camp yesterday organizing each company into a sort of oranch with its own officers. They elected me vice president for this company. I didn't know I appeared so saintly as all that, but must be I do.

According to rules we are supposed to have Sundays entirely off, but they rung in two inspections and a school in guard duty last Sunday. They certainly are shoving us some. The training is far ahead of the draft army. I am dead tired but there is a lot of kick left in me yet.

I am writing this sitting on my cot with a cigar-box across my knees for a desk.

Save millions, more than little me
From cruel fates or ruthless blast—
And bring him safely home at last.

When the Silk Mill was established in Andover Miss Parker began work there as a weaver, remaining until August 1917, when ill health made it necessary for her to give up work. Those who have been in daily contact with her testify to the wonderful patience with which she has borne her illness with seldom a word of complaint. A great lover of children she found her greatest enjoyment in their society. Sympathetic by nature she was willing and pleased to aid any in time of trouble and numerous kindly acts from her are mentioned by those whom she has assisted. She was a member of the Baptist Church with which she united some twenty years ago.

Of her immediate family there survive her mother, three sisters and one brother, namely, Mrs. Sarah C. Parker, of Andover; Mrs. Josie E. Baker and Mrs. Agnes R. Hammel, also of Andover; Mrs. Maude S. Baldwin, of Elmira, and Frederick J. Parker, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Funeral service was conducted at her late home at 2 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, by Rev. Chas. Collins, pastor of the M. E. Church, and burial made in Valley Brook Cemetery.
