The Tide Has Turned

Study the war map carefully. Compare what the German armies have given up, with the territory that still separates them from the Rhine.

The tide has turned, but there is every reason to believe that American soldiers will be fighting in Europe one year from now,—twice as many and fighting twice as hard.

Your country needs your support now more than ever before. Do your part in the Fourth Liberty Loan as well as the boys are doing theirs.

AUTO LIGHT

See That Your Lights are Right or the State Police Will Get You

Albany, Oct.—New York State's new automobile headlight law will be enforced from October 15 on, State Troopers and others in authority having been requested to see that the law is complied with and that the dangerous glare and dazzle from headlights becomes a thing of the past. Over a month has now elapsed since Secretary of State Hugo announced the results of scientific tests of a half hundred or more lenses and light controlling devices that had been submitted to him in his official capacity for approval.

While improved conditions on the highways at night reveal that thousands of motorists have lost no time in seeing that their cars are properly equipped, it is also evident that many others are making no move towards living up to the law and by so doing are not only jeopardizing themselves but other motorists as well.

It is this type of automobilist which will now receive the attention of the authorities.

Many other states, as well as the Province of Ontario, have been watching New York State's efforts toward controlling the motor vehicle headlight situation with keen interest. Judging from letters which have reached Mr. Hugo, several of the states will now attempt to pass headlight laws similar to the one which will soon be operative in this state and which is expected to bring about a decided change from the situation which has characterized night driving the past summer.

There seems to be a clearly defined desire on the part of the majority of motorists to comply with the headlight law in its fullest sense, serving to indicate that with a general observance of the law in the near future that the glare and dazle of the automobile headlight will soon become a thing of the past, at least in this state. In protection of the automobilists of this state, motorists from other states visiting New York, will be expected to have their cars equipped to meet with the requirements of this section of the law.

EDWARD DEAN WOUNDED IN FRANCE

Recovering in Hospital in France. Has Been Cited for Bravery. Member of Sanitary Section Unit 577.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Dean, who formerly lived at North Washington Avenue and Electric Street, but who at present are at Marlborough-Blenheim at Atlantic City, have received a letter from their son, Edward, who was in a French hospital, recovering from a wound received in action. The young man, who will not be seventeen years old until October 12, has been cited for bravery by General Savatier, commander of a French division.

Young Dean is a member of American Sanitary Section Unit 577, which did heroic service in bringing in wounded soldiers. Of the work of this unit the report of the French general commander says:

"They showed a courage and devotion above all praise. Not satisfied with driving their car, they helped in gathering up the wounded. Their endurance was extreme and several went twenty-four hours without an instant's rest and without the slightest nourishment. Some had to abandon their cars rendered useless by the shell and come back on foot under bombardment.

"Out of twenty cars, thirteen were struck by projectiles and six of seven which remained were so much damaged by the bad condition of the road and will not be able to give service until after repairs. I wish to mention also that the section, being of recent formation, had not yet had experience in the war and was placed under dangerous and perilous conditions for the first time. We cannot help admiring the courage which they showed and which their compatriots have a right to be proud."

The letter from young Dean to his father and mother follows:

"My dear Father and Mother: How are you all to-day? I trust in the best of health. I'm feeling fine. I am going to have a month's rest. I got a slight gas wound in my right arm and one in the right side of my head. The doctors all say that it is nothing serious. It is a French hospital I am in, but there are some American nurses and the majority of French nurses here speak English so I'm all right. There are three or four other American wounded here besides me. Please don't get frightened over me because I would not consider myself a soldier if I did not get wounded. Think of those poor fellows in the infantry and cavalry who while making a charge or fighting in the trenches, are under fire all the time. This work that I am doing is nothing compared to theirs.

"I arrived in the hospital July 24 and it is only the 31st and I am up and walking already. The doctor says that it is nothing, and that the wound isn't at all bad. He is going to take the stitches out when he dresses it again. It sure is coming along fine.

"I am now in one of the steamer chairs and writing to you. It is a wonderful spot. You can see for miles around and the air is fine. It was the funniest thing to-day when I asked one of the nurses if she would loan me a mirror so that I could look at my wounded head my hair is shaved off and it is absolutely funny how I look. The lieutenant and one of the boys have been down to see me and brought me my clothes and some cigarettes.

"Have you gotten over your illness yet, mother? Will you please do me one favor, and that one favor is not to worry over this wound of mine. You remember when I dove in Lake Lincoln, several years ago, and struck bottom and cut my head. Well, this is not a bit more serious. Give my regards to all that I know, that is whom you see and tell them that with the help of God we will all be back by next Decoration day. Don't you think so? With lots of love from your loving son

Edward.

REV. CHARLES COLLINS
Returned as Pastor of Andover M. E. Church for the Fourth Year

ARE YOU REGISTERED?

You Should Call at the Polls and Be Sure, or You May Be in the Wrong District

It is up to every man and woman who intends to vote this fall to personally visit the polls next Saturday, October 19th, and see that his or her name is registered in the right district.

In ordinary times much of this work is done by those who look after the politics of the village, each party looking after its own voters.

But this year the conditions are peculiar, in that the districts have been changed so that a person may be registered, but their name be enrolled in the wrong district.

Then comes in the fact that many women who are voting for the first time, may find too late that they are not registered in the right district, and thus they will be deprived of their right of franchise.

Saturday is the last day for attending to this matter, and it behooves every voter to make a personal visit to what they think is their proper district, and be sure their name is registered where it belongs. It may save much disappointment on election day.

SURPRISE VISIT

Despite a thunder storm and much rain about thirty friends and neighbors quietly gathered at the home of Mr. Orange Smith, Saturday evening, Oct. 5th, 1918, to help him celebrate his 76th birthday. It was a complete surprise for him.

The evening was pleasantly spent in visiting and much merriment followed by a feast of good things after which Mr. Smith was presented with several lovely presents, tokens of love and esteem from his many friends.

At a late hour the company departed wishing Mr. Smith many more happy birthdays.

BELMONT DISPATCH OFFICE DAMAGED BY FIRE

Sunday morning the Hunt meat market at Belmont was discovered in flames. The building and contents were consumed by the flames which spread to the building of the Belmont Dispatch. The upper story was damaged to considerable extent by the fire and paper and printing material on the first floor was also damaged by the water.

MEETING POSTPONED

Belmont, N. Y.
Oct. 14, 1918.

The annual convention of the Allegany County Federation of Women's Clubs, which was to have been held this week at Almond, has been postponed until further notice.

Annie M. Hatch,
President.

SMITH OUTLINES HIS POLICY

Democratic Candidate for Governor Gives Plans for Better Schools, Fixed Working Hours For Women in State.

With women voting every home will be represented at the polls this year. If the home prospers the state will prosper. If the influence of the home can be exerted as it should be we will have a better state, a more progressive state, and a more enlightened state. And if I am elected Governor I am going to do everything I can to make the influence of the home count."

Outlines Policy

Thus Alfred E. Smith, Democratic candidate for Governor for New York, outlined his policy.

"I believe in municipal and public ownership, because that will give to the people what in the nature of things belongs, to them, the control of their most important necessities.

"I believe it is the business of the state to educate, and care for its boys and girls because they will be better citizens if they are educated.

Wants Hours Fixed

"I believe that working hours and wages should be fixed for women, because the future of the state is dependent on the welfare of the future mothers.

"I believe that the schools should be the best possible, and that the pay of teachers should be adequate to the high character of their services. It falls far short of that now.

"I have been a poor boy and have lived among poor people. I know their needs and their aspirations. And I know it is the duty of a state to give them that equal opportunity which many people seem to think went out of existence immediately after the Declaration of Independence was written.

Keeps His Promise

Mr. Smith is not a man to make promises he cannot keep. He knows politics and he knows legislation. He was twelve years in the Assembly, speaker one year, majority leader two years and minority leader one year. He has served on every important legislative committee.

And he knows perhaps better than any other man in the state how easy it is to propose progressive legislation and how hard it is to pass it.

He has consistently stood for progress and honesty in his legislative career, one of his greatest services to the state being his invaluable assistance in the passage of the Widowed Mother's pension bill.

Mr. Smith said:

"I should like to say a few things about the more human side of legislation, to tell of some of the things which ought to be done, and which I believe I can do.

"Law in a democracy is not principle, but expression of that thing which best meets the present day needs of society, which does the most good for the greatest number.

Problem for State

"I believe the state should approach solution of the problems affecting men, women and children, not as they have been approached in the past, as a matter of favor to individuals or groups of individuals, but from the standpoint of the benefit of the state itself.

"When the state prescribes the number of hours per week that a woman can work in factories or mercantile establishments, it is not that the state favors this class or extends a privilege to this class, but that the state as a matter of policy recognizes in men, women and children that produce in industry, an asset to the state, which it is the duty of the state itself to conserve.

"In the Constitutional Convention proposals were made curtailing the power of the Legislature to extend privileges to classes not extended to all citizens alike. That clearly set forth the viewpoint of a great many people that legislation regulating hours of employment and conditions under which people work is a privilege or a favor.

"I regard these as conservation measures for the protection of the life, health and strength of the people, for after all is said and done the state is not wealthy because of its mountains, its green fields and its great cities. A healthy race of men, women and children is essential to a healthy condition of the state itself.

If it can be bought for less, wouldn't you like to know where, and all about it—as advertisers do?

CASH IN ADVANCE

In accordance with the order of the War Industries Board, the News will, beginning November 1, 1918, send out of this office only papers that have been previously paid for. This week our business office has issued statement to each subscriber who is not already paid in advance for the News beyond Nov. 1, 1918.

There are left but two weeks to send in the money so your name will not have to be taken from our subscription list. Please act quickly.

THE INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC

While prophecies regarding the possible course of an epidemic are usually valueless, previous experience warrants the belief that a marked recession in the number of cases of influenza may be looked for within a few weeks, said Dr. Hermann M. Biggs, State Commissioner of Health, last evening.

No serum "protecting against" influenza has yet been discovered, despite reports to the contrary, but vaccines from killed influenza organisms are now being prepared in the State Department of Health Laboratory and will be ready in a few days for a thorough trial as a means of prevention. Vaccines against the organisms of complicating pneumonia are being used in some places, particularly in the contonments, and there is reason to suppose that they may prove of value.

For the treatment of secondary pneumonia, caused by type 1 pneumococcus, a serum is available and of value said the commissioner.

Calls for additional physicians and nurses are still being received from all parts of the state and are being responded to as rapidly as possible.

If you can do a certain work as well as anybody else can do it and can advertise as well—you can earn as much money, too.

NOW PUSH IT "OVER THE TOP"

Wonderful Work Has Been Already Accomplished, But We Have Yet $10,000 to Sell Before To-morrow Night.

Over 25 percent of the inhabitants of Andover have already subscribed for the Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds. That is a fine record. Over five hundred individual bond subscribers is the record for this town. That means that on an average every family in the town of Andover has signed up for the purchase of a bond.

Andover has raised 90 percent of its full quota of $90,800.00 for the Fourth Liberty Loan Bond, and we have but to-day and to-morrow to put it over the top. Lets get busy and push.

This town has never yet failed to do all asked of it by the Government, and we must not fail this time, and we will not fail if all do their share.

The canvass by the different committees has been most complete. It is doubtful if there is a person in the town who has not been solicited, so it is up to some who have already subscribed to come across again.

We will be found at the top when the final count is made, as our civic pride will not allow Andover to fall short of its allotment.

Wellsville, Bolivar, Hornell, Canisteo and Greenwood have reached their quotas.
