GREENWOOD LOCAL BRIEFS

We are to have peace, but what kind of peace?

A peace that recompenses the world for what it has endured and what it will have to endure for a long time to come should be something more than the cessation of hostilities. It should be peace that is founded upon justice and which will secure to all the inhabitants of earth the fundamental rights that belong to humanity and to members thereto. It should be upon the principal to be recognized by all that the citizens of each country are entitled to be protected by the united support of all in the exercise of their rights.

The exploiting of one nation by another must cease if a durable peace is to follow a settlement.

Secret alliances whereby a combination of a few seek to monopolize the common heritage of all, would in the end bring about a renewal of hostilities, but a compact that will stand against the criticism of all will endure.

The brazen effrontery with which Germany asks for favors of her captors and conquerors is surprising especially since she announced when her prospects pointed toward her success.

Then she openly avowed her purposed treatment of her to-be-defeated enemies, but now justice is of another color. The world execrates her policies and feel to say, to hell with the Hohenzollern and Hapburg dynasties and to hell center with military autocracy and despotism, yet we should have mercy with justice.

But this does not mean that she should preside at the coming peace banquet and appropriate all the choicest parts of veal.

She is making big claims hoping thereby to secure greater allowances. Let us look after our Allies first, for neutrals next, and then the huns.

The people, who have been so long indifferent about buying a three million dollar railroad for about one-tenth that sum, now that the rails are being torn up, begin to stir themselves in a final effort to save it. They are buying it for less than junk prices and the bonds at the price look like a good money investment besides the indirect profits that a railroad would bring us which would be many times its cost.

A committee from Canisteo was in town to-day taking subscriptions for bonds.

The following named gentlemen are working about here for the general good: Hugh Slawson, Harry Walker, Leon Crandall, Arthur Taylor and Mr. Larue of the Electric Light Company.

Yesterday a local committee secured upwards of $5,000.00 in West Union. Canisteo is ready to do her equitable share, but Hornell has not awakened to the importance that the road would be to that town seemingly thinking that they can get along as well without as with the trade of the south country. If all do their bit, the road will go, if not it will go down. In any event let the people remember their friends in the matter.

Calvin Dennison, of Rexville, was in our city Saturday.

A meeting of united war workers was held at the hall, Friday evening, but owing to an accident to the automobile bringing the speakers, they did not arrive until late and many had departed for home. The meeting was addressed by Att'y. Francis Cameron and Clyde E. Shults whose addresses were very fine. The Hornell Glee Club rendered some fine music.

Low Osmin, of West Union, was in our city on business Saturday.

John Swarts, of West Greenwood, was greeting friends in town Tuesday.

Michael Caffrey was in town Monday on business.

Frank Short, of Young Hickory, was a Greenwood caller Thursday.

Mrs. J. E. Schneck was among the village visitors Tuesday.

James McCormick, of West Greenwood, was a city visitor Tuesday.

Merritt Osmin acted as temporary mail carrier this week.

Leonard Dennis is moving into the Mrs. Wm. Scott house on North Main Sttect.

L. G. Burton, of Waverly, was in town Wednesday greeting former neighbors and friends.

The influenza is on the decline so far as the number of new cases is concerned, but still the fatalities are heavy and no efforts to combat the scourge should be neglected.

Troops are ordered back from Europe, but knowing the trickery of the enemy it would be well to keep an ample force there until a peace treaty is signed, first, for safety, and second, their presence there will cause our demands to be thoroly respected by the huns. It will take a vast amount of labor to make the war worn countries self supporting.

Mrs. Charles Bothrich has received intelligence that her husband, Charles Bothrich, who is very sick with pneumonia, is getting better.

Fred Lewis, of Saunders, was a business visitor in Greenwood, Friday.

Alexander Conkey, for many years a resident of Greenwood, died at his home in Elmira aged 77 years, and was brought here for burial at Highup Cemetery. He was a brother of George Conkey, of this place. He leaves of his immediate family two children, a son and a daughter.

Elmer Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Swan Johnson, died at Canisteo on Sunday and was buried yesterday at Bennetts.

He was a son of the late Elmer Henry, who died in this place several years ago. He leaves his aged mother, a wife and five children to mourn his loss.

We publish in this issue a letter from Lieut. George Davis Webster, son of Mrs. M. D. Webster of this place. Lieutenant Webster was severely wounded while leading his company at the Battle of Fismes, fought near Sergy, France, July 31st. There were five pieces of shell embedded in his flesh. The explosion of the shell that wounded him killed two other lieutenants near him. Mr. Webster was confined at the hospital until October and was then promoted to first lieutenant and appointed to an important position in the judge advocates department. Lieutenant Webster still has two pieces of shell in his side which he will carry thru life as mementos of the great battle in which he was engaged.

It is very good for the world. I only hope that Wilson will remain firm in his statement to the Germans for an unconditional surrender.

Hope everything there at the old home is O. K. and that you are all well. I haven't heard from Clarence in quite a while—not since he had his first "crash," but look for a letter every day. Hear from dad often and mother is well and working for the good of the Red Cross.

Must close now and write to him. Keep well and don't worry. Fond love to all.

Harold.

Oct. 10, 1918.

Dear Mother and Brother:

While I am giving the above as my address I am no longer there, but am at the local army post in the same town. Day before yesterday I went before the Medical Classification Board and secured an "A" classification which certifies me as eligible for line duty, and yesterday I expected to receive orders to go to some distribution camp for assignment to duty.

Instead of getting such an order, I got one sending me here, and after reporting I learned that telegraphic instructions had been received from headquarters asking that I be detained here until further orders. Think it must be the result of George's recommendation that I wrote you about and it may mean that I get my promotion now and be assigned as his assistant. Of course nothing may come of it after being advised that I am in "A" class. Probably will get something on it in a day or so, and in the meantime all I have to do is to loaf around. Will let you know just as soon as anything developes. If I get that appointment all your worries will cease, and while I feel like a piker to make the change, I hate to turn down such a chance if it is offered me.

Yesterday I received yours and Mary's long letters written during the time you were awaiting word from me as to where to send my mail. These two letters made a young book, which, needless to say, was much enjoyed.

Since leaving the old company I have never received any newspapers—either N. Y. Times or the Chautauquans and undoubtedly no attempt was made to forward them, even assuming they got to their first destination. Should have enjoyed them but could hardly expect second class mail to get much attention over here at a time like this.

Am certainly glad that you went to Chautauqua and had such a fine program. There is certainly more need for a thing of this character this year than there ever was before.

I often wonder if the people at home realize what a struggle this is, and what it is costing. It must be coming home to them pretty forcibly now and the way the people at home are taking it is certainly a great help and inspiration to the boys over here.

This is a wonderful lesson to all and is going to be worth all it has cost. Everyone feels that he has got to die sometime and while it is natural to hope that the war will be survived no one is afraid to die now if called upon to make that sacrifice, and they are few who do not feel that they could not die for a greater cause.

It is a wonderful thing and if the people at home could only feel the same way it would be such a help to them in time of loss.

The war has, I think, been the spiritual making of millions, and when the boys go into action it is not for themselves they give a hang but only for those at home, who they think cannot understand how easy it is for them to stand up and go to their death. It is simply a service which few could equal in ordinary life.

The war situation is fine and many prophesy that the actual fighting will be over this year. We must not be two optimistic about this, but the end is certainly in sight.

Wilson's reply to the last peace offer meets with unanimous approval and few there are over here who do not want to see the Central Powers so crushed that there can be no come-back and no quibbling over terms.

Am feeling fine and everything is fine.

Love to all,
D.
