WHO'S WHO WITH RIFLE

Rifle Club Hold Preliminary School, Record Breakers Budding

A very enjoyable afternoon was had by a bunch of "old sports," at a new rifle range on the Stearns farm about a mile from Andover on tthe Wellsville road, Monday.

A lot of loose talk has been going the rounds in Anflover this spring concerning rifle shooting and who was the best shot. In order to find out "who's who" with the rifle a range with a 200-yard target was sought and finally located in the Stearns run.

It is no part of the editor's idea to give away all the fine records made at this preliminary gathering, but later attempts will be given the publicity deserving. Our own blunderbus didn't act satisfactorily.

The gentlemen mixed up with the deal last Monday were T. N. Boyd, Rev. H. B. Williams, C. H. Watson, F. S. Potter, F. C. Vars, Trustee E. C. Langworthy, Kenneth Greene, Thomas Williams and the writer.

The most enjoyable feature of the afternoon was to see an old time record-breaker get back his eye in only three shots and set a pattern that could well be envied by many younger men. We refer to Comrade T. N. Boyd.

CADETS SMASHING RECORDS

Two more members of the local unit of the Cadet Corps, State of New York, have qualified as marksmen. First Sergeant Rodney Robinson and Charles Ruger are the latest to enter the charmed circle, qualifying last Monday, the scores follow: Robinson; prone 41, sitting 45, standing 41, rapid fire 40, total 165 out of a possible 200. Ruger; prone 43, sitting 38, standing 40, rapid fire 40, total 161. Robinson equalled the record held by Donald Smith, and turned in the best individual string, 45, yet shot on the local range.

Warrants have just been received by the commanding officer from headquarters in New York for the following new non-commissioned officers; Sergeant Denzel Baker, Corporal Everett Clair.

MINISTERS GET SCHOLARSHIPS

Three ministers on Corning district of the Methodist Church have been chosen to take a three weeks' course of instruction at Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J., and left for that place Monday. They are: Rev. M. J. Hill of Canisteo, Rev. Guy Overshire of Greenwood and Rev. Homer Evans of Whitesville.

HOME FROM FRANCE

Since the last issue of the News two more Andover boys have returned home from overseas with the A. E. F.

Mortimer Driscoll came home Friday morning and Daniel Mulcahy Wednesday morning. Both saw active service in France for many months.

—Two men and a woman hired a car at Olean with a driver. The went for a ride. When in East Bolivar, the driver was ordered t stop. He was assaulted and tied to a tree and left while the trio proceeded with the car. They were located later and arrested at Belmont after a regular wild west shooting scrape had been pulled off. The driver loosened himself and gave the alarm.

—Road Superintendent P. M. Swink and gang of men have been busy this week clearing the stone from the highways, following the flood. It costs the state about $200 every time a brisk shower comes up to clear the stone from the road on Chestnut Street, when $500 spent for proper sluices would put the road in shape so it would never cause trouble.

Another Mystery Rises and The Coast of France Also

The Government Lifts the Ban and Allows Me to Reveal a Dark Secret--3, On French Soil.

By R. E. King

I have more than ever respect for my father's old fashioned horse sense. He would frequently say to us: "Boys, never throw anything away. Lay it up where you can get it when needed and the time will come when it will save you money. You never can tell when you will want to use it. I have on a number of subsequent occasions put the spirit level as it were, on his head, and in every case I have found it to be exactly level. He was not an educated man but he had common sense.

It is better to have a head only partly full but always level than to have a head crammed full and always tiped wrong.

Education is silver but common sense is golden.—Job.

I never saw as happy a lot of dukes and duchesses as the bunch that debarked from the Caleveras except the same crowd when it embarked. You couldn't have kept them on the shore in New York with a mortgage. You would have thought from their elbow and shoulder jam that the only necessary thing on earth or heaven was to get on that old transport and that more than that they knew down deep in their hearts that every one in New York had the yellow fever; but, for a fact, they went off that ship in the same way. "On again, off agin." Twice glad. Great ship. Yo ho, lads. Any man who wants to sail the ragin' sea can do so. Give me a jitney. "That's better, dear, than a transport for me." I was the last man ashore because I was putting the polish on a sea poem I had written. Too much poetry is "thrown off in a moment of inspiration." Mine isn't; it is dug up with a pick. This one is the best thing I have dug out of my mental lumber-room in a long, long time; but it revives a dark chapter in the history of these travels (Chapter 1.) Here it is:

"Since so soon my trip was done for, I wonder what it was begun for."

La Belle France

He is a hard hearted wretch who can draw near the shores of France without emotion. Some one says, "Every man loves two lands; his own and — France!" That is certainly true of Americans. We cannot forget. No wonder Pershing said as he laid a wreath on the tomb of LaFayette, we are here." Yes, thank God, we went to France!

We cannot forget that when our whole military equipment consisted of 18 old cannon, 15,000 soldiers and less than a pound of powder per soldier, France sent to us LaFayette with 8 ships loaded to the guards with complete equipment of clothing and munitions for 25,000 men. It was France that in the darkest day of our colonial existence turned the tide and gave us being as a nation Had it not been for France there never would have been any United States of America.

"That God, our liberating lance
Went flaming on the road to France,
To France, with every race and breed
That hates Oppression's brutal creed."

And youdse rose the fair, green shores of France.

Now I can tell you a secret we were forbidden to divulge even to our wives—we were to land at Bordeaux.

Bordeaux

It may interest you to know just what you will find when you cross the pond for Bordeaux one of these fine days which we are now coming to so rapidly and delightfully. In the first place you will not be there when you get there. You will get all fussed up over "lovely France" and "There she is" and then you will find out that you have to sail 60 miles inland before you reach Bordeaux. But it is a delightful sail; sixty miles up the big wide Gironde River which in America would be called a bay or estuary; in Norway with its great cliffs it would be a fjord; in Switzerland it would be a lake; in France it is a great, broad, lovely river with Bordeaux, the finest commercial harbor in France, at its head, the confluence of the Dordogne and Garonne rivers

Brest is the great military harbor where troops are landed; Bordeaux is the great peace harbor where the boys embark for home.

The harbor is mammoth in its anchorage, easily accommodating 1200 ships; it sweeps in a nearly perfect half circle 3½ miles across to the south and is lined by great quays and hotels and every conceivable "attraction" for sailors and visitors. The peace and quiet of the harbor was at one time shattered by the happy and excited yells of "Eat 'em alive! Eat 'em alive!" from a detachment of Americans who found on exhibition confined in a pen a small tribile of stunted and naked savages called "Indiens Galibis;" they were the original "Boscoes" and the boys allowed they were almost home as soon as they saw them.

But the city with its 300,000 inhabitants has other and splendid provision for you. There is the luxurious Hotel de la Marine, 290 feet long, 154 feet wide and 62 feet high; the great public jardin and superb musee and fine gares (excuse the French but I can't help it.) Possibly some people do not know that a gare is nothing but a railroad depot. Then there is the magnificent bridge of seventeen arches costing $1,300,000; and the Grand Treatre, one of the most magnificent in Europe. If you are bookish and literaryish, why you are in clover. Bordeaux has libraries, and a great university. And it has the old palace of Galineus; it was the site of the Court of the Black Prince; here Queen Elenora, after an up-to-date matrimonial divorce from Louis VII of France hoisted the signal to Henry Plantagenet and in six weeks from the divorce became Queen of England (nothing slow about Elenora); here in 1789 were the headquarters of the Girondists in the Reign of Terror with its beheading and quartering; here in 1870 was be seat of government when the Germans (where have we heard that word?) drove the French from Paris and dictated terms of peace that make the present peace terms look like 30 cents. Oh, Bordeaux is a real interesting little village.

And, oh yes,—Bordeaux is wet. In fact it is the center of the wine business of France. You may unless guarded, get the idea from Bordeaux that there is no other business but the wine business in France. You will certainly be satisfied that the wets who are in the jim-jams of hysteria in America will be all right if you can only get them to Bordeaux. It is surrounded by vineyards, is the focus of distribution of fine wines for the world and dedicated to Bacchus in the most discreet form. It is the birthplace, the home, the heaven of claret, the generic name of all Bordeaux wines, although they are both red, (the Medoc) and white, (the Graves.)

Don't worry over my familiar

Tidbits from Our School

The High School English classes have been having a "soft snap" because of the absence of Miss StrieRland from school, Thursday and Friday last.

There was no school Monday because of the Physical Training Conference held at the High School.

Friday being Memorial Day the students are to enjoy a holiday.

Since there are only ten days remaining before Regents the students are practicing the old adage, "Make hay while the sun shines."

The Cadet Corps took advantage of the vacation Monday to prove their skill in marksmanship at the rifle range.

The fine weather prevalent the past few days has enabled the students to carry on their home project work.

Mr. Lantman of the State Department of Education inspected the school on Wednesday.

MORE ABOUT THE ROCHESTER TRIP

All details are complete for the Chamber of Commerce annual auto excursion to Rochester, N. Y., on Tuesday, June 10th, 1919.

No tickets will be sold to any one after Monday noon, June 9th, as all autos will be filled by that time. The autoes will leave promptly at 7 o'clock on Tuesday morning. On the return, first cars out of Rochester at 8 p. m. All those wishing to do so will be home at 12 o'clock.

A merchant can "afford" to print any advertisement which has in it one or more friend-winning facts about his store.

CIVIC LEAGUE ELECTS OFFICERS

Mrs. Margaret Bettinger New Head of Womans Organization in Andover. Annual Meeting Plans Were for Big Year.

At the annual meeting of the Civic Club, held in the Free Library building, Tuesday evening, occurred the regular election of officers which resulted in the choice of the following officers for the coming year.

President, Mrs. Margaret Bettinger
1st Vice President, Mrs. Inez Common
2nd Vice President, Mrs. H. B. Williams
Secretary, Miss Hazel Strickland
Treasurer, Mrs. Mary Driscoll

The meeting was well attended and was enthusiastic thruout. It is the purpose of the Civic League to do needed community work in Andover, and with the efficient corps of officers and the spirit of its membership there can be little doubt of its success.

FARMERS TO RECEIVE $2.89 FOR JUNE MILK

League milk for June has been sold for $2.89 per hundred pounds this price is for milk testing three per cent. butter fat and at the 200 mile zone from New York. The much agitated milk business is becoming quiet all along the line. The market for dairy products is good and the new price plan agreement by which the milk is sold each month does away with uncertainty by both farmers and dealers and with a large amount of friction which arose nearly every month during the past year.

MISS WEST SPEAKS AT S. D. BAPTIST CHURCH

Miss Anna West, returned missionary from China, spoke at the S. D. Baptist Church at the regular service last week. Miss West gave a very interesting description of Chinese life and costumes. She had with her a large assortment of clothing and pictures together with a collection of miniature models of implements of industry used by the Chinese. The meeting was very entertaining as well as instructive.
