BERT TROWBRIDGE IS COACHING BASE BALL

Fine Record of Games Won by Pulaski High School Base Ball Team of Which Former Andover Man is Professor.

Pulaski, June 30. — The Pulaski High School base ball team defeated the Seymours of Syracuse by a score of 13 to 6 in a game played Saturday afternoon at Athletic Park here. Gallagher of the home nine again repeated the old-time custom of putting out fifteen men, which was a feature of the game. A large crowd was present.

Recently the Pulaski ball tossers completed a series of games, which started last month, winning thirteen of the fourteen played. Its only losing game was at Fulton in a seven-inning game played in a drizzling rain, when the score was 5 to 7. It was one of the strongest teams turned out by the high school in a long time and now claims the championship of Oswego County as well as Northern New York. Block letters were awarded the players following the last game of the series. O. Bert Trowbridge vice-principal of the school, coached the team, which also has had the valuable aid of Dr. F. E. MacCallum, an oldtime ball tosser. The home nine in 1914 lost two out of fourteen games, the championship having been won by Adams.

The thirteen games of the season's series won by Pulaski and the scores follow: Belleville at Pulaski, 7-1; Sandy Creek at Pulaski, 6-1; Pulaski at Mexico, 6-3; Pulaski at Sandy Creek, 5-0; Pulaski at Central Square, 30-0; Mexico at Pulaski, 6-3; Phoenix at Pulaski, 10-9; Fulton at Pulaski, 7-6; Central Square at Pulaski, 14-6; Pulaski at Belleville, 7-5; Pulaski at Adams, 10-0; Pulaski at Phoenix, 9-3; Camden at Pulaski 3-0.

BEE KEEPING DEMONSTRATIONS

The Allegany County Bee Keepers Association thru the assistance of the present organization—the Farm Bureau Association—has arranged for three Bee Keeping Demonstrations. On Tuesday, July 15th at 2:00 p. m., demonstration will be given in the apiary of Mr. H. R. Smith at Houghton, N. Y. On Wednesday morning at 10:00 a. m., at the apiary of Mr. D. L. Voorhees at Nile and at 2:00 p. m. in the apiary of Prof. Chas. Binns, at Alfred. Individual apiaries will also be visited.

Dr. Geo. H. Rea, bee specialist for the State of New York, will be present and assist with the demonstrations. Mr. Chas. Stewart, state apiary inspector, will also be present. Bee keepers should take advantage of these meetings to learn present practices that are being followed in operating successful apiaries to find out about disease control and other problems of interest.

A worth reading ad of a store in a newspaper like this will be read by most of the worth-reaching folks in a town like this.

WHITESVILLE MAN FOUND DEAD

The body of Byron Bassett, of Whitesville was found last Tuesday in the barn of Lynn Chase of that village, where he had evidently met death by being drowned in the watering trough. Whether the affair was accidents or premeditated is not known. But as he was subject to dizzy spells it is possible he may have suffered such an attack and in an attempt to bathe his head fell into the trough. Deceased was a man past middle life and lived alone.

How I Went to France

It is Work to Work This Idea of Work—But Those Who Will be the Men of the Future Eat it up.

By R. E. King

It is interesting to watch an idea work down or up into a man's appreciation. The work germ is loved just about as devotedly as we are attached to the Flu; and you can see that half your audience is doing its little best to get away from the idea. They pass from scorn to suspicion, then to doubt, then to an armistice on the situation, then to consideration; and the moment you get them where they think your job is done; any path from that point leads home.

It is enough to make any man thank God for the chance to talk to people to see the change that comes into many a man's face and the evident determination that is taking hold of his heart and the resolve to be something, do something, get somewhere, amount to something and "pay the price" in good old fashioned elbow grease, and be what he can just as well be. Work? Why, work to a right minded man is the greatest pleasure, highest privilege and most valuable asset he possesses. So I said my last word to the boys about like this.

Look Out!

"Now don't let anyone put anything over on you. When any one tries to pin on you the idea that a man needs to really work to reach his best, just brush it lightly off and say, "shoo, fly!" but remember that the men who have risen most quickly and gone highest are the men who have done more worked longer, studied harder, than they were expected to do or compelled to do in order to hold their jobs. It is the superfluous labor which qualifies a man for advancement. The man who is trying to see how little he can do without being discharged is digging the ground from under his own feet.

"Let Yourselves Go"

Ex-Mayor Scherm says he never sees a large body of workmen but he is always regretably impressed by the evident fact that too large a proportion of them are laboring under the strong impression, that unless they are careful they are going to make a mistake and do too much. He says there is a niggardliness of behaviour about many men which shows itself in the way they lay out their strength; they lay it out as if they were half dead. They use their minds as if they are afraid that thought will wreck their thinking machinery. They go about their employment as if they are in fear of apoplexy from over exertion. They act as if convinced that the one great danger in life is paralysis from over-work. He says it would do him good to see some of these smug, complacent fellows break a collar button or rip a seam. These are the fellows who work harder keeping the creases in their trousers when they sit down than they work in their employers' business when they stand up. And these are the very men who never will reach [illegible] even their best wages, much less their best manhood or best influence, until they cut loose from all restraint, determine to do and be their best and let themselves go.

* * *

At a dinner given Supt. Garrett when he went from the Reading to the Queen and Crescent route, he said, in accounting for his rapid rise. "When I first went into business one of the older clerks said, "Garrett, let me put you wise. Always keep your desk all littered up. Then when the old man comes around he won't put any more work on you." I concluded, after thinking it over, that I would see what effect it would have on the old man to always keep my desk cleaned up. And I am here. The man who gave me that "good" advice is working to-day in the same room at the same wages.

* * *

The exact trouble with many a man is that he keeps one eye on the clock and one eye on the boss when he ought to keep both eyes on his job.

Schwab

Charles M. Schwab is another of the countless illustrations of all these hard things I have been saying. His first wages were two and a half — and that was not half bad for a ten-year-old boy,—only it was two and a half a week — 46 cents a day. But he worked for that until he could get more. Will you notice. He worked. His first raise gave him a dollar a day. Possibly you know some one who would not work for a dollar a day Schwab would. That is one of the most important differences between Schwab and some fellows. Schwab would work for a dollar a day until he could get more. And whether his wages were big or little—whether he was treated right or wrong —whether his hours were long or short. He would work. The one thing he absolutely refused to do was to quit work. You couldn't stop him with 45 cents a day. You couldn't stop him with a club. He would work. And I am told that eventually, he found a job that paid him even better than a dollar a day.

* * *

Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the N. Y. Life Ins. Co., says the difference between the $1,000 and $5,000 man is pulch, faithfulness, capacity for work and an inclination for it. These, he says, make up the yard stick that measures most differences in salary. Such a man is too busy to watch the clock. He is likely to be quicker at his work than the man at the next desk and he is always looking for more things to do. In a roomful of clerks the man who is always halloing fro more things to do does not have to ask for promotion.

* * *

Charles M. Schwab says there is not a leader in the Bethlehem Steel Works who did not begin at the bottom and work his way up. They won their advancement by using their brains to think beyond their manifest daily duty. Eight years before Eugene Grace was made president of the corporation he was switching engines. His ability to out-think his job fitted him, coupled with his sterling integrity, to the highest place in the great corporation. And the 15 men in charge of the plants day in and day out were every one of them thinking beyond their jobs.

* * *

Dig down to the root of most failures and a refusal to do persistent, consistent, hard work will be found at the root of the failure.

* * *

There are more I. W. W's. than belong to the I. W. W.

* * *

The most dangerous and fundamentally destructive characteristic of the day is the evident belief of all classes that the one all important necessity is to work less. It is eternally true that we reap what we sow. We are sowing lest and less industry and are reaping more and more expense, perplexity, trouble, and, I fear, calamity. I ask your most patriotic and honest efforts to restore that basis of industry which is as vitally necessary to the nation as it is to the individual.

Blame the Clock

Well, the clock has stopped and so must I. We must not be one sided in our attitude toward these things. I have talked as if nothing is of any importance except

PARKER GARAGE

Splendid New Industry Open for Business. C. L. Donaldson, Here

The new Parker Garage is now nearly completed and ready to doctor up your automobile whether it is afflicted with a mild case of chicken-pox or some one of the chronic diseases.

Thursday morning Mr. C. L. Donaldson, an experienced and capable automobile expect, came to take charge of the mechanical department. Mr. Donaldson comes with the very best recommendation. The Hudson Motor Car Company says of him

"In regard to a first class mechanic, we are pleased to say that we can recommend to you an excellent man. Would you please get in touch with Mr. C. L. Donaldson, 48 S. Anderson St., Aurora, Illinois? Mr. Donaldson has been with one of our largest Hudson dealers in the State of Illinois for the last six years. He has had charge of the repair department employing fifteen men. He is familiar with all standard makes of cars and well up in ignition, starting and lighting system. ODD FELLOWS ENJOY PICNIC

One of the Most Pleasantt Events of the Summer Was the Picnic in the Park July Fourth by the Three Link Fraternity.

Over 150 Odd Fellows, including their families, enjoyed one of the most pleasant days ever on their first annual picnic party in Andover, July 4th. There was not a cloud to obscure the day not a frown upon the brow of any. Every one attending pronounced it the best ever.

At 12:30 the orders sat down to a common dinner table laden with all their hearts might desire in the way of eats. There was, as is always the case when these people prepare the meal, an abundant supply. If any one went away hungry from that Odd Fellows picnic it was their own fault.

After dinner a program had been arranged by the Rebekah Lodge and was nicely rendered, as follows:

Music	I. O. O. F. Band
Recitation	Mrs. Mabel Rogers
Song	Miss Radah Scott
Recitation	Lillian Halsey
Song	Carl Childs
Recitation	Mabel Wagner
Recitation	Francis Vickers
Selection	I. O. O. F. Band
Recitation	Anna Cronk
Song	Paul Childs
Recitation	Mrs. Laura Witter
Chorus	by the Young Men
Cornet Solo	Fay Bloss
Selection	I. O. O. F. Band

After the program the gentlemen chose sides, Fay Boyd and Archie Bloss acting as captains, and a seven inning game of base ball was indulged in, Archie Bloss' side winning by one score.

Then the real event of the day was announced. A base ball game between the gentlemen and a team chosen from among the ladies present, the latter winning by a score of 8 to 0.

This first Fourth of July picnic has sharpened the appetite of the fraternity for more just like it, and all are loud in their demand that the 4th of July 1920 shall be observed in a similar manner.

TRIED TO SWIPE CHEESE

A few nights ago, says the Cuba Patriot, some folks with a fondness for cheese entered the Ackerly-Renwick warehouse by prying open a window and rolled out some 21 fine cheese onto the shipping platform. Apparently they had been piled up ready to load onto some conveyance, and one of the piles toppled over. Whether it was the noise of the fall, the appearance of Policeman Williams in that neighborhood about 3 o'clock a. m., or something else that frightened the thieves is not known. But they lit out, leaving the cheese behind. All the cheese they got was what they scooped out of one of the boxes.
