AUDITORIUM SATURDAY EVE.

Seldom is such a continuous display of luxurious settings and furnishings, evidenced on the screen in one photoplay as is seen in Mary Pickford's newest Artcraft Picture, "A Poor Little Rich Girl."

In keeping with the story which tells of the extravagant display of wealth, many costly scenes were built for this subject, including a beautiful conservatory, with its lily pond, playing fountains, rare birds and immense botanical display. This set alone occupied the entire length of the immense stage at the big Mary Pickford studio in Fort Lee. Enhanced by artistic lighting and new effects in motion photography these scenes present a fitting background for the beautiful little star.

SPECIAL TOWN ELECTION CALLED

Taxpayers Will Vote upon Proposition to Raise Funds to Construct New Concrete Bridge over Dyke Creek Sept. 4th

In another column of this issue of the News will be found a notice of a special Town Meeting called for the purpose of voting upon the proposition of expending $5,000 for the construction of a bridge across Dyke Creek on south Main Street in the Village of Andover.

Several years ago this proposition was brought before the taxpayers of the town and voted down. But at that time it was an altogether different matter Then the proposition was to raise $7,500. Now but $5,000 is asked for.

For nearly three years this unsightly and dangerous structure has been an eyesore and blot upon our otherwise well appearing town, and such a menace to the travelling public that complaints galore have been filed with the State Highway Department authorities, who are insistent that a safe bridge be built.

The Town of Andover is taking great risk in allowing this unsafe bridge to longer remain. If an accident should occur the Town would be held responsible for all the expense and it is liable to cost as many times the price of the bridge in damage suits. Should some one get injured thru the carelessness or negligence of the Town of Andover in not providing a safe bridge for the use of the public.

The State Higway is constructed to carry a load of fifteen tons. A heavy truck has as much right to the road as has the pleasure vehicle. The present temporary bridge would not hold a third of that weight.

The action of the Town Board in calling this Special Town Election to vote upon this proposition is not the idea of the board alone. They called a special election on this matter two years or more since and it was defeated. In that they felt that they had done their duty, but a petition to them signed by about thirty taxpayers was filed with the Town Clerk the first of the week, asking them to call a special election to again vote upon the proposition. The law requires them to call a meeting under such circumstances, and they have set Thursday, Sept 4th as the date for such special election.

Under the existing circumstances there should not be an adverse vote on the question. There is going to be a new bridge built, this cannot be avoided only for a limited time, and the taxpayers of the Town of Andover will have to pay for. Why not build it at once and get the matter off our hands and stop for all time our liability to heavy damages that are just as sure to come as we postpone the building of the bridge much longer.

The State Engineer has drafted and sent us plans for a fine bridge which he estimates will not cost over $5000. Let's get busy and do this work ourselves, as other towns in the county have done and are doing.

The Town Board deems it unnecessary to issue bonds at present in order to pay for the bridge so the old bugaboo against voting to bond the town has been removed from this matter altogether.

The assessed valuation of the Town of Andover is nine and a quarter millions of dollars, so the tax necessary to raise $5,000 will be about 40 cents a hundred. We cannot afford to run the risk for such a small amount.

Death Calls Estimable Little Genesee Resident

Little Genesee, Aug. 9.—George Harris Crandall, a veteran of the civil war, died at his home in this place Sunday morning, August 3, from infirmities of old age.

Deceased was born in Little Genesee November 22, 1836, and was the second son of Darius and Julia Wells Crandall.

During the civil war he enlisted in Co. A, 136th regiment, New York volunteers and served three years. He was one of five brothers who served in the civil war.

He was engaged in farming at Little Genesee for many years where he lived all his life, excepting nine years when he resided at Richburg. He united with the Seventh Day Baptist church in 1851, and had been a deacon of the church since 1905.

He was united in marriage to Caroline E. Bristol of Cuba on August 8, 1866, who died several years ago. He is survived by two sons, George Rollin, of Plainfield N. J., and Albert J. Crandall of Little Genesee; also one brother, Prof. Albert R. Crandall of Milton Wis.

The funeral was held at the church Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. E. F. Loofboro officiating. The interment was made in the Wells cemetery.

RECOMMENDS FEEDS ON BASIS OF PRICES

On the basis of current prices in relation to feed value and manurial value the college of agriculture at Ithaca suggests the following mixtures. Since the high protein feeds have proportionately high manurial value, as much of them should be used as costs and the health of the animals will permit.

For dairy cows the Cornell workers suggest for an August ration: 200 pounds of ground oats or hominy, or ground barley; 100 pounds of wheat bran or wheat mixed feed or dried brewers grains; 200 pounds of gluten feed. For Calves, feed: 300 pounds of ground oats; 300pounds of hominy or ground barley; 300 pounds of wheat bran; 100 pounds of oil meal.

President Wilson Takes Hand in H. C. of L.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—Not in a long time has President Wilson delivered a message to Congress which brought forth such demonstrations of approval as the document which he read to-day.

His declaration that there could be no settled conditions here or elsewhere until the treaty of peace was out of the way and the work of liquidating the war has become the chief concern of our Government and of the other governments of the world called forth a great demonstration from the Democrats.

Both Sides Pleased.

His handling of the labor situation pleased both Republicans and Democrats alike, both sides joining heartily in the applause.

When he said, "Passion and disregard for the rights of others have no place in the councils of a free people" there was very general and hearty applause from both sides of the chamber. And when he added, "There must be no threats." the applause was renewed with increased vigor until it swelled into a climax of cheers.

When the President entered the House, at exactly 4 o'clock all of the galleries were packed except the Presidents own gallery and the diplomatic gallery Mrs. Wilson with a party of friends was in the President's gallery. Tere were not more than half a dozen persons in the diplomatic gallery.

The President was greeted with a very generous ovation on his enterance, but the applause was confined absolutely to the Democratic Senators and Representatives.

The Presidents address was innarked contrast with those he has delivered on the peace treaty in that it was specific. He set forth not only comprehensively, but in full detail the facts of present production of all foodstuffs; the extortions in prices and the methods by which the law of supply and demand was being set aside by profiteers.

Specific Recommendations

He stated what could be don under existing law by way of remedying unjustifiable and complained of conditions, and made specific recommendations for further legislation to make certain the results desired.

It was this specific character of the President's address which seemed to make it so much more satisfactory to the members of Congress than any of the addresses which he has made upon the peace treaty.

The big surprise of the message was the President's assertion that failure to ratify the peace treaty was largely responsible for the unsatisfactory conditions of living.

His seizing upon the existing unrest as a new argument in favor of hastening action on the treaty pleased the Democratic senators and representatives immensely. The political cleverness of the President compelled their admiration, and they made it manifest. As they applauded, their countenances were wreathed with broad smiles.

In addition to the sentiments of the President above quoted there were demonstrations of applause for these declarations.

"While there is any possibility that the peace terms may be changed, or even held long in abeyance, or may not be enforced because of divisions of opinion among the powers associated against Germany, it is idle to look for permanent relief."

"The world has just destroyed the arbitrary force of a military junta. It will live under no other."

"Fortunately under the terms of the Food Control Act the hoarding of foodstuffs can be checked with the greatest energy."

"It is in this supreme crisis—the crisis for all mankind—that America must prove her mettle. In the presence of a world confused, distracted, she must show herself self-possessed, self-contained, capable of sober and effective action. She saved Europe by her action in arms; she must now save it by her action in peace."

The President's remedies for the existing distressful conditions of living were:

First:—The passage of the Peace Treaty.

Second:—The sale of surplus stocks of both food and clothing in the hands of the government.

Third:—The drawing out of storage and putting again on the market certain stocks in private hands.

Fourth:—The extension of the present Food Control act, both as to the peroid of time during which it is to remain in operation and as to the commodities to which it shall apply

Fifth:—The passage of a statute providing a penalty for profiteering.

Sixth:—The passage of a law regulating cold storage as it is regulated by the laws of the State of New Jersey, which limits the time during which goods may be kept in storage, prescribes the method of disposing of them if kept beyond the permitted period, and requires that the goods released from storage shall bear the date of their receipt.

Seventh:—Passage of a law providing that all goods released from storage for interstate shipment should have plainly marked on each package the selling or market price at which they went into storage.

Eigth:—Provision of law providing that all goods destined for interstate commerce should in every case where package makes it possible be marked with the price at which they left the hands of the purchaser.

Ninth:—Formulation of a law requiring a Federal license of all corporations engaged in interstate commerce and embodying in the license or in the conditions under which it is to be issued specific regulations designed to secure competitive selling and prevent unconscionable profit in the method of market.

Tenth:—Passage of a bill now pending before Congress, proposed by the Capital Issue Committee, for the control of security issues.

TO CLOSE OLEAN ROAD

The engineers in charge announce that the Olean road will be closed from the P.R.R. station, the Cattaraugus county line while the repair work is in progress, a period of a couple of weeks or more, depending on the weather. Travel will detour by way of the Erie station, coming onto the state road at the schoolhouse.

Last Tuesday afternoon a company of neighbors assembled at Mrs. W. B. Hall's to help her pass her 80th birthday. Ice cream and cake were the refreshments. Little tokens were left her as mementos of the day, at the close of the party each one extended to the estimable lady some attribute of her useful life and many more returns of the day.

GREATER EFFICIENCY IN LIVE STOCK

It is the Department of Agriculture's Goal in a Campaign to Start October First to Improve Quality of Stock.

"Better Sires, better stock" is the slogan for a campaign to be conducted by the Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with State agencies, to improve the country's standard in live stock and poultry.

Looking ahead to the future food needs of the country, the campaign has been planned after many conferences between Department of Agriculture officials State authorities and livestock breeders. The plan is to hasten the replacement of scrub domestic animals in the United States with pure-bred or high grade stock and also to improve the quality of the pure-bred heards themselves.

The campaign will be launched October 1st, and will be the first organized crusade in any large country to improve all livestock simultaneously. It will be supervised from the Department of Agriculture in Washington and in each State by the State agricultural college. County agents and other field workers of the department and of the State colleges will handle the campaign locally, and it is planned to reach every county. The goal is greater efficiency in production.

Through the activities of the present officials of the Department of Agriculture, there have been constant efforts during the last several years to influence farmers and stock raisers to improve the standard of their stock but until now it has not been considered possible to conduct a country-wide campaign because of the lack of sufficient blooded sires. But gradually the number of blooded animals has been increased until there is now probably not a county in the country in which there is not blooded bread animals and the time is regarded as opportune for the campaign which it is hoped will not only enlist the cooperation of every stock raiser and farmer on a large scale, but every rural or town resident who owns one or more porkers or a few chickens, ducks or turkeys.

More Meat, Bettter Meat

Better stock means more meat and better meat. Thus the improvement of the class of live stock and poultry is one way of solving the cost-of-living problem. Department of Agriculture officials believe the campaign will mean millions of dollars to the farmers and stock raisers of the country. In fact what has already been accomplished has meant millions to them for during the past decade the class of live stock in every State has been greatly improved.

Mississippi is the most notable example. Ten years ago shipments of live stock from that State amounted to nothing; now they amount to millions annually both for commercial and breeding purposes. The improvement in the class of live stock in that State has been the most notable the past decade of that anywhere in the world, not even excepting Denmark.

The campaign, it is hoped, will mean the passing of the old "razor back" hog and the "scrub" bull and their replacement with blooded sires.

SAYS THAT CONCRETE ROADS ARE BEST

State Superintendent of Highways Green Decides Concrete Roads are Best and Will Stand Up Better Than Macadam

Albany Aug 4—That the state of New York has wasted money for years in building roads other than concrete was the statement today of Highway Commissioner Frederick S. Green, who showed by records of his department that 81 miles of highway built in 81 different counties cost $955,878.76 He states that during seven years since their completion in 1912, $702,872.99 has been spent in maintaining them for traffic. In Wayne County a road 3.87 miles long cost $26,515 while the charge for maintenance in seven years was $37,062.18

In discussing this condition of affairs, Commissioner Green said:

"The waterbound macadam road is a thing of the past and the penetration road is but a little better. The construction of cardbord roads is bound to lead the state into serious financial embarrassment. During my term of office I will build only roads of the most inproved type in the art of engineering. Concrete roads are the best and are the cheapest in the long run. During the last four years 208 first class concrete roads cost $125 a year per mile for maintenance. During the same years 2,451 miles of waterbound macadam roads cost $971 a mile a year to maintain.

"New York state proposes to get the greatest mileage of roads for the least cost. Concrete roads do away with excessive maintenance charges and will stand the tremendous amount of motor traffic."
