Everybody is handling coal at Cost a Week except the fellow who gets the dough.

* * *

In modern parlance a successful business man is one who gets his other fellows money and hangs on to it.

* * *

No, sister, profiteering smooth lovers does not come under the ban. Take as many as he will give you.

* * *

Many great men of Europe are evincing a secret desire to come to America and see a nation of greater men.

* * *

Uncle Sam has received a good many jolts in his day but he generally manages to land on his feet with his head up.

* * *

We still have the price of a pair of shoes due us in delinquent subscriptions. And gentlemen, winter looms perilously near.

* * *

Newspaper subscription rates are about the only things in the U. S. up to date that haven't punched a hole in the sky.

* * *

No, we have no objection to price-fixing by the government provided the prices are such as to meet our individual approval.

* * *

The soap issue on the President and the Square is progressing so sweetly it reminds one of the old days when lad boys tied the tails of two cats together and slung them over the clothes line.

* * *

No, Willie don't invest in a new map of Europe for a few days at least. Uncle Sam may have to eventually smooth the whole blooming territory in order to effect a peaceful settlement.

PERFECTLY SIMPLE

There is a constantly growing feeling among our fellow citizens that the government ought to run most of our staple industries if necessary at a loss and make up the deficit out of taxation. And when invited to reveal who is to be taxed to pay the deficit they always say the same thing "The rich."

Just exactly what constituted the rich is a thing vaguely understood. They are generally supposed to be people with tons of currency hidden somewhere. It is surprising how few people there are whose mental processes surpass those of a little six-year-old. There are far more people in this grade than you think.

A man is rich if he has credits by virtue of which he draws large revenues from certain industries. Very often he does not own the industries, but is one of the bondholders, as a rule he has very little currency. There is no sense in having much.

When the government has confiscated all the large industries, the rich man's source of revenue will be gone. Then they will be poor. We shall start this scheme with not any rich people—and therefore there will be no one to pay the tax.

Small industry will run at a loss, like the railroads, without being one making up the deficit.

Lenin actually worked this scheme out in Hungary, and approximately the incomes which the government had members of the country were to draw—finding out after words that the aggregate of the incomes was four times the total revenuing power of the country. The chap who had burned down his house to roast a pig was almost intelligent compared with some of us.

"But," you say, "why should governments always run industry at a loss?" Oh, why indeed! But then, governments are composed of politicians, rhetoricians, monopolists, lawyers and pamphleteers and theorists or shysters or demagogues.

Well, let us have enough rich people in existence to pay the taxes. How rich shall we let them be? Oh, just rich enough to dig up the money for taxation. But we don't want them to be rich enough to vote, lest they would have the power of making up tax form.

Our job is to make that job will want to do that job.

FOR THE DEVIL OF IT

As production diminishes, scarcity grows. And then the law of supply and demand gets to working. When supply diminishes demand grows so prices rise.

When over a body of workmen disike the prices of commodities they strike for more pay and production diminishes, so prices rise still higher. The grievances which the strike was to cure is only intensified by the strike. The medicine makes the patient worse. It seems hard but the patient is partly to blame.

A carpenter's local in a middle west city struck for $1.00 an hour. They were offered 92 1-2 cents an hour but refused it. The strike dragged on, and finally a large number of the carpenters went to the chief town of the adjoining state where the union scale was 80 cents an hour and worked for a dollar a day less than they were offered at home, although it cost them more to live in their new surroundings. They had struck for the devil of it. They said and were losing money all the way.

As long as strikes are organized for the "devil of it" and not to cure a grievance, production will languish, commodities will be scarce and prices rise.

I.t is fervently hope that the farmers will not take a notion to strike for the devil of it.

WHY GO BROKE?

When conditions are not to our liking, we are apt to expect a central authority to put everything right. We ask why they don't enact laws to mitigate our woes. "Why don't they?"

Why don't we? is surely the question. Yet half the cure is in our own hands. The circuit managers announce that the American theatre was never so prosperous as now. So the H. C. of L. is not preventing an unprecedented indulgence in theatregoing. Labor unionists, already better paid than many executives, go on a strike about once a month, which indicates that they have money enough for vacations.

Perhaps, national extravagance is partly to blame for our maintenance problems.

Yes, we are a law-abiding peace-loving, God-fearing nation. We only have profiteering, strikes, riots, race wars, Bolshevism, and a few other mild forms of amusement too numerous to mention.

Now the popular star of "One Week of Life," her new Goldwyn, Pauline Frederick has not forgotten her first professional appearance. It was in Boston at a vaudeville house and she warbled "Mavourneen" twice a day. Those old-tin favorites the Nichols sisters taught her how to make-up. Who could teach her nowadays? She plays two roles in "One week of Life" and the only change in the widely different characters is the expression that comes from within. Auditorium Saturday evening August 30.
