Claud Simmons, of Phillips Creek, aged 19 years, was drowned in the creek near his home, August 1st. Simmons, accompanied by two young friends, Charles Stark and Harry Swift, went to the swimming pool about two o'clock, where he was to teach the latter to swim. Simmons disrobed and dived into the water and disappeared. The boys saw nothing more of him and became alarmed, as none of them could swim and summoned help. Vasser Lowe, who was driving by in an automobile, responded to the call and after several attempts brought the body to the surface. Physicians worked on the body for more than an hour but were unable to revive him.

TALKING CIVIC MATTERS OVER

The following Conversation Was Overheard on Main Street, Andover, Recently

"Hello, Bill. I've just been down to take a look at the new bridge. It begins to look as if some day soon we would have a bridge that our town needn't be ashamed of."

"Huh, but just see what it is costing. I tell you, Jim, there wan't no need for all that fuss and money. The old bridge looked good enough to me—plenty good enough for these hard times."

"But, you see, the old one had been condemned. I suppose the Town Board thot it would be cheaper to build a new bridge before they had some big damage suit to pay. They say that a heavy load might have broken thru any time," said Jim.

"Well, I say, wait just as long as you can before throwing away good money for any fool improvements. I've drove over that bridge hundreds of times and nothing ever give way."

"But, just suppose, Bill, they had left up the old bridge till somebody had broken thru and been killed."

"Huh, Guess a damage suit would n't cost as much as this new bridge."

"But, Bill, Just suppose the one that got killed was you!"

"Now, see here, Jim, me and my family has looked out for itself for a good long while and we expect to keep right on doing the same. I don't believe in any of this bothering with what ain't happened. I don't spent one red cent for fire insurance, nor tornado insurance nor any such useless things. Always have got along jest as well as the next fellow, too."

"You surely have some life insurance, Bill?"

"No sir-ee, not me. I don't waste good money that way. When I am gone if Melinda and the kids can't get along on the tidy sum I've "put by" in the Bank, five hundred dollars, than Melinda hasn't learned as much of my way of doing business in all these 32 years as I give her credit for. No such fool things for me."

"I was kind o' sorry the other day that they voted down the Community Nurse proposition, weren't you, Bill?"

"Me, sorry! I should say not. The very idea of those folks with a bunch of kids thinking I want to pay their doctor bills for them! Thot you knew me better than that, Jim!"

"Oh, but that isn't the idea. Just one of the important needs for a town nurse is to prevent another epidemic, such as we had this Spring or a worse one. You see, no matter how well you take care of your children, they are not safe unless every one lese are free from disease, or are carefully quarantined when they show the first symptoms."

"Now, see here, Jim—"

No more of this conversation was heard as the writer passed on to work. But since then the query has constantly been in his mind: Is it possible there are as many "Bills" in Andover as the recent election recorded, or have they simply not thot it out?"

FEET INJURED BY MOWING MACHINE

Kathleen Ford, the ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ford, of Freedom, met with a serious accident last week by stepping in front of a mowing machine which her brother was running. The boy did not see her in time to stop the team before the section knives struck both her feet.

ANDOVER MAN AT THE RIFLE MATCH

R. S. Tubbs Writes Interestingly of Conditions at Camp Perry. Is With the Michigan Team

Camp Perry, O.
Aug. 9, 1920.

One week of beautiful weather has been used to the best advantage by the contestants in the National Rifle Matches which commence here Wednesday, August 11th, and every indication points toward keen competition and close scores in all matches. Not until next week, however, when the first eight matches will have been completed will the relative merits of fourteen hundred individual firers be known and nothing definite can be determined about the teams for at least two weeks tho the Marine Corps and Army Infanry Teams seem to be favored for first place.

An atmosphere of study was prevalent here last week and regularly organized classes were given instruction in every phase of firing. Practice firing is also being continued to-day and to-morrow.

The small bore range is getting to be quite popular and the country's leading enthusiasts in handling the 22 calibre rifle, are putting on the finishing touches for the National Small Bore Match and the International Match with England.

Trap-shooting is also gaining in popularity and opportunity is given for practice with the clay pigeons.

A group of aeroplanes furnishes entertainment for the camp and the hundreds of visitors during the evenings and on Sunday. There are nine planes here, among them a German fokker, captured by Eddie Rickenbacker, and a Curtis which has been accredited with bringing down seven of the enemy's machines during its short term of service at the front.

Captain Hardy, representative of the Peters Cartridge Company and one of the world's best fancy shots, gave a short practice demonstration yesterday afternoon. Among other things he made an outline of an Indian's head on a sheet of tin with a .22 rifle using no guiding lines. He cut a piece of paper edge-wise which was held at about ten feet by a man. Incidentally, the bullet passed about two inches from the fingers of the gentleman who was holding the paper. He thinks nothing of shooting small clay pigeons with a .22 rifle, and pasting paper over the hole of an iron washer, he would toss it in the air, shoot one shot thru the hole, then send the washer spinning with another shot before it hit the ground. This he did repeatedly. Five clay pigeons tossed into the air simultaneously were also easily hit by him with a pump action shotgun. He did many other difficult stunts using revolvers and rifles of a high calibre as 250-3000 and in his demonstration some time this week he is going to do some aerial work with the Springfield, service model, rifle.

It rained here this morning for the first time since firing began a week ago, but the sun is beginning to shine again now and the crack, crack of hundreds of rifles is going on incessantly along the half mile of firing lines.
