Time Has Changed Methods IN Money Matters

Not so many years ago, men carried long wallets and in many instances considerable cash, or kept money hidden in their homes at much risk of loss. Styles in pocket books have changed.

To-day, men careful with their money, keep their working capital and surplus funds in the bank, subject to their personal check, so that it will be safe and at the same time instantly available for use. They carry a bank check book in place of the long wallet, which plan has decided advantages in addition to safeguarding their funds.

POPPIES OF FLANDERS ENDANGER FARMS HERE

Boston, July 11. — The poppies that grow in Flanders' fields, dear to thousands of mothers, sisters, fathers and wives whose loved ones sleep beneath them, are a source of danger in so far as agriculture is concerned, according to Dr. Arthur W. Gilbert, Massachusetts commissioner of agriculture, who "views with alarm" the practice of importing seeds and plants here for sentimental reasons.

The only reason the poppies were ever allowed to grow in Flanders' fields, according to Gilbert, is because their growth got beyond the control of the authorities there. The plant is not cultivated for its beauty or merits for its sentiment, he said. He fears losses in the agricultural sections will result if the importation of the poppy goes on.

WOMAN NEARLY LOSES HER LIFE

Canaseraga, July 18.—Mrs. Archie Gemmel, a very heroic woman, lost her life while learning to swim at the electric light plant. She was holding on to a log when she slipped off into the water, the log holding her up in the tide water. Mr. Swart who runs the plant and who is an expert swimmer, rescued her after making two attempts at diving. The water is over forty feet deep at the point where she fell in and it was a narrow escape from drowning.

Sounds and Sights.

"That motion picture theater has beautiful music."

"Yes," rejoined Miss Cayenne. "At present, we listen to the picture and look at the musical score."

There was a lady in Paris named Pop who did well by her. Pop died and left her a fortune.

IN THOSE GOOD OLD TIMES!

One Will No Longer Wonder Why Our Forefathers Gladly Entered Into Bonds of Matrimony.

I have lately been shown (writes a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian) the first account by some couple who set up housekeeping nearly fifty years ago. Many of the entries are fascinating reading now, and certain items especially are warranted to make the modern housekeeper's mouth water. The first servant's wages for instance, were £8 ($40) a year—a servant, too, I was given to understand, who did all the washing, plain cooking and evidently had none of her successors' objection to children, for in due course she added to her duties that of pushing the baby carriage out every afternoon. It is worthy of note that the bedroom for this treasure was furnished entirely for £2 10s ($12.50). Food prices, unfortunately, cannot be readily compared with those of today, as provisions were entered simply as "meat, butter, butcher, etc." I should we feel now, I wonder, on receiving a (winter) quarter's gas bill amounting to 9s 4d ($2.33). It is interesting to note that butchers' meat bulked far more largely in proportion than it would in household books today, after the frugal years of war. Meat and tea were the items the young couple considered food of another sort worth paying for is shown by the entry: "Two tickets for concert (Patti and Sims Reeves), £1 10s ($7.50).

ALMOST GAVE AWAY SECRET

Little Girl Would Have Had Sweet Revenge If She Had Reached That Toupee.

A prominent Vigo county business man wears a toupee. Only his family and closest friends know. But recently it almost became a public fact. He was dining with his wife and some friends at a large hotel, when he walked another French toupee his four-year-old daughter. The business man likes to tease children, so he immediately began on this one. He called her a little boy, and persisted in addressing her in that way.

It was evident she was not enjoying the incident, and the Vigo county man's wife came to the child's rescue. "If he doesn't stop calling you names I'd pull his hair if I were you," she advised.

The little girl started to follow that advice, and then fun did begin. The way that man ducked and begged the youngster to desist where entertaining to the other diners. But the people who knew about the toupee and who knew the man well enough to kidding him about it, were not the ones who laughed most heartily.
