ERIE, STEUBEN ENTER STATE PLAY CONTEST

District Winners Go to Ithaca During Farm and Home Week to Compete For New York Championship.

Steuben county won the central district championship in the state dramatic contest at Keuka College in Penn Yan, Nov. 17, and Erie county won the championship of the western district at Bethany, Nov. 16. The group which won for Steuben county was the Prattsburg Home Bureau which presented "The Teeth of the Gift Horse." The Cheshire Grange from Ontario county was second in this central district contest with its presentation of "One Hundred Dollars," and the Moreland Home Bureau from Schuyler county placed third with "Sparkling Lucia." The judges of the contest were Miss May Baker of Keuka college, Penn Yan; Miss Dorothy DeLaney of the state college of home economics; and H. C. Hoffsommer of the state college of agriculture.

In the western district contest, Williamsville community from Erie county presented the winning play, "Between the Soup and the Savory." Pike community from Wyoming county was second with its presentation of "The Neighbors," by Zona Gale. The other counties which competed were Genesee and Chautauqua. Professor G. Eric Peabody of the extension teaching department at the state college of agriculture was the Cornell member of the judging team.

The winning groups from Erie and Steuben counties will go to Ithaca during Farm and Home Week to enter the finals of the state dramatic contest. These annual contests of which this is the second, are sponsored by the state college of agriculture. The winning group will receive a prize of $50 and each of the other four groups competing will receive a prize of $20 each. The American Agriculturist will provide four of these five prizes and an anonymous donor will give the fifth. The money will be expended for some community interest betterment in the home towns of the competing groups of players.

HOME TREATMENT MAY RUIN LINENS

Cuts, Holes, Tears, Art Not All Due to Laundry, Says New York State College of Home Economics.

Home treatment, not the laundry, may ruin household linens, says the New York state college of home economics at Cornell University. Textiles may be harmed in many ways unnoticed at the time. The evidence appears only after the linen has come back from the laundry.

Frequently, bread knives and carving knives used without a bread board cut the table cloth. Razor blades also injure linen. No matter how carefully a man may dry a razor blade, he may easily cut a thread or two in the towel. This is almost as injurious as a clean cut, for the weakened thread will wear thin shortly and leave a small hole. This towel damage is so common that many hotels furnish their patrons with special cloths for their razor blades. Pins are likely to tear thin fabrics. Uncovered bedsprings and protruding nails, tacks, or screws may injure sheets.

Mend even slight tears in household linen before sending it to the laundry and thus make your linen last longer and save money.

Around Our House

Child's Outdoor Garments Warm, Light, But Not Clumsy.

Suitable outdoor winter garments for the little child are light, warm, and permit free movement, according to Miss Ruth Scott of the department of textiles and clothing at the New York state college of home economics at Cornell University.

If the child is to benefit from his outside play, he must not be burdened with heavy clothes. Not the weight of the fabric but its fiber, weave and finish determine its warmth. A light-weight outdoor play garment recommended by Miss Scott has an inside layer of fluffy, light wool fabric and an outside layer of cravenetted twill. Such a combination gives the greatest warmth because the air space between the two layers holds the warmth of the body, and the closely woven outside material keeps out the cold air. This garment is of light weight, is not clumsy, and does not hamper the child's movements.

Miss Scott recommends two-piece play suits—leggings with loose legs and knitted ankles, which pull on easily over the shoes, and a blouse cut like a lumberman's jacket with knitted material at the neck, cuffs, and waist to make it fit closely. The blouse should open part way down the front and should be fastened with buttons or zipper fastenings. Inch-wide elastic at the waist should be used to hold up the leggings.

Serve sauerkraut with crisp bacon, boiled ham, or corned beef.

RETAIL PRICES RISE, SAYS CORNELL MAN

Professor G. F. Warren Surveys Business and Farm Conditions —Says Cotton, Potatoes, Hay Sell at Less Than Pre-War

Prices paid to farmers for food are only slightly higher than last year, altho retail prices for food have risen, says Professor G. F. Warren at the state college of agriculture, commenting on business conditions and prices of farm commodities in the United States and New York State.

Feed crops are much more abundant this year than last both in the United States and in the world, says Professor Warren. Since feed is relatively cheap, and cattle and sheep and their products are high in price, the situation for producers of cattle products is good.

The low prices of cotton have lowered the index for all farm products as compared with the index number of last year's prices, says Prof. Warren.

Potatoes and hay are selling at less than they brought before the war, he says, but prices of grains are a little above pre-war prices.

Altho feeds rose last month, they are generally low compared with the price of milk. The September farm price of milk in New York State was 78 per cent. above pre-war prices. The dairy ration in October was 49 per cent. above pre-war prices.

The production and distribution of urban products continues to improve, says Prof. Warren. The steel automobile and textile industries have been unusually active. Retail sales are larger than a year ago. Industrial stocks are 273 per cent. above pre-war prices. Brokers' loans have risen to new high levels. Freight car loadings are large. Employment conditions are improving.

The index number of all commodities has risen six points since last March, according to the United States bureau of labor, Professor Warren says. Since this index includes prices of 550 commodities, an average advance of this amount is important.

STATE BANKERS TO HELP FARMERS

County Delegates From New York Association Will Assist Local Organization in Agricultural Programs.

Each county of New York State will be assigned a farm-minded banker who will officially represent the New York State Bankers' Association, according to a decision made at a recent meeting of the agricultural committee of the State Bankers' Association and members of the staff of the state college of agriculture. These bankers, who have been appointed by the agricultural committee, will be known as "key bankers," and will assist the local farm and home bureaus and junior project workers in their agricultural programs. They will receive each a month from the state bankers association a farm-economic letter which will contain timely farm-economic information. The state bankers association will write these letters with the aid of the department of agricultural economics and farm management.

The key-banker plan, which is one of several adopted by the association to further agricultural interests, was suggested by Mr. W. K. Payne, president of the Cayuga National Bank of Auburn.

In addition to adopting this plan, the committee indorsed the farm-inventory campaign which will be conducted by the extension service of the state college of agriculture and promised its support and cooperation.

Members of the agricultural committee of the state bankers association are: A. G. Stone, chairman, vice president of Tompkins county national bank, Ithaca; C. J. Armstrong, president, Milford national bank; F. A. Clough, cashier, State Exchange bank, Holley; Leo M. Allen, manager, farm department of Livingston county trust company, Geneseo; and P. H. Salmon, assistant cashier, second national bank, Elmira. Mr. Payne represented the New York State section of the American Bankers' Association. The delegates from the state college of agriculture were Dr. C. E. Ladd, director of extension; Dr. W. I. Myers, professor of agricultural economics and farm management, and Dr. V. B. Hart, extension professor of farm management.

Just Like 'Em

After slaving away for years the inventor had produced a machine that was a success. He opened a bank account, and went home to tell his wife of his success.

"At last, my dear," he cried, "you'll be able to buy some decent clothes!"

"I'll do nothing of the sort," came the sharp reply. "I'll get the same kind that other women are wearing!"

Uncle Ab says that regardless of whether we believe in a next world, we owe it to the future to make this one better.

Sunday School Lesson

Group hatred strengthens every participant. More than 40 in Jerusalem vowed they would never eat until Paul had been killed. This plot was discovered by a lad who gave the information to Paul and the authorities. Then the prisoner was sent northward to Caesarea under a heavy guard. The governor there was fair and said the case would have due attention when the accusers arrived. Ananias, the high priest, came with Tertullus the lawyer. Felix soon discerned that it was a question of isms and not of lawlessness against the constituted authorities. Paul would have been acquitted except that there was a fine possibility of obtaining a bribe for his release, for the man was well related in friendships as well as personality. Freedom of approach was granted, among whom must have been Philip the evangelist who resided at Caesarea (Acts 21:8-9). Read Acts 24-27 for all the details covering these two years.

It was a formal occasion when Felix, with his wife, Drusilla, invited Paul to present his case. The Drusilla was the daughter of the Herod who killed James the brother of John and later put Peter in prison there was no fear as the most was made of the opportunity to tell "concerning the faith in Jesus Christ." Both the governor and his wife needed all that was said about "righteousness, self-control and the judgment to come." Tho Felix trembled he merely said: "Go thy way for this time."

Porcious Festus went to Jerusalem within three days after he succeeded Felix. At once the accusers of Paul urged that the prisoner be sent back to Jerusalem for trial; their purpose being to kill him en route, according to the old plot. "No," said Festus, "the case must be continue at Caesarea." Bribes had doubtless been offered and shortly after the case had started Festus proposed that there be an adjournment to Jerusalem. Paul fully sensed the situation and knew the sure outcome. Then he exercised his right as a Roman citizen and declared "Caesarem apello." Fastus, tho he took up the matter with the council, had no alternative and said "Thou hast appealed unto Caesar and unto Caesar thou shalt go."

But what was he to write in transferring the case to Nero? He had nothing to declare against Paul that would be the basis of a case in Rome; in fact, he felt that the whole matter should be dismissed at once. A way out came in his quandry when company arrived in the persons of king Agrippa and Bernice, his sister tho living with him as wife. It was with much pomp that the company of titled men and women assembled the next day. Paul was not disturbed when the call came to present his argument of defence. This was just another fine opportunity of exercising his office of Evangelist which had been denied him in recent months.

The situation became intense when Paul said "Agrippa, believest thou the prophets?" The reply was in sarcasm: "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian," and is the way that many seek to dismiss a matter when under conviction. The conclusion announced by Agrippa was that Paul might have been freed if he had not appealed unto Caesar.

Rude Rural Rhymes

REQUESCAT

We're hoodooed on the dogs, I fear; that's three we've had within five year. Pat had red mange and had it tough, an auto hit the lively Buff, and now poor little Reddy's left pup-loving Jim and me bereft. Paralysis had made him blind, with wobbly legs before, behind, a strange disease of dog and cat, the vets they have no name for that. Forlorn he wandered to and fro we could not let him linger so. To give him death was but to bless in all good love and tenderness. By chloroform relief I planned, who loves a dog can understand what Rudyard Kipling says somewhere, "You have given your heart to a dog to tear." Full fed he slept relaxing wholly, I brought the lethal gas in slowly. Once, half awake, he started up, I spoke and reassured the pup. I stroked his side and said, "All right." He trusted me as well he might and closed blind eyes in deeper night. May I have equal confidence in Him who guides our life events. Like one who said when light grew dim, "Tho He slay me, yet will I trust in Him."—BOB ADAMS.

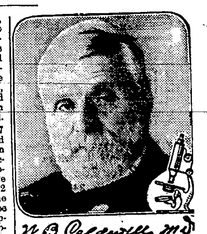
Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men



W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 65

"As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick.—But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1881), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

This preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, it is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. It is mild and gentle in its action and does not cause griping and strain. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly.

Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home,—where many live someone is sure to need it quickly.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.
