

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 11, 1870.
 The time has come when the people of this town are beginning to feel the effects of the fair dealing of our merchants. The town has been undergoing extensive improvements in the line of sidewalks, yard fences, repairing over of old buildings, repaving streets and lately building new buildings. The large block erected by Christopher Jennings for the purpose of a drug and book store, and which contains G. O. Crandall's hotel and the post-office building, is now complete in all its parts, and rapidly being filled with things necessary to constitute a first-class drug establishment. I understand that Eugene Grames, M. D., is to be chief druggist. This insurance man, for although Dr. Grames is a young man lately from medical college, his readiness to do his capability of doing and his gentlemanly conduct have won him high merits for him in this place within the last year. May he be equally successful in the future. Immediately on Main street from Jennings' new block is a new building newly fitted up by A. J. Lewis for a general store, house and office. Directly across the way is D. D. Nye's new store and shoe establishment. And by the way, "Dad" makes a very close fitting boot. All desirous of getting married, and many have had that desire fulfilled here this fall, and more so we would like to, delight in calling on him for a pair of close fitting boots.

The Belfast Cheese Factory is doing a large business for its first season, and will do much better another year. But unless kind Providence interposes for the owners and patrons in general, its life is short, for the Grantee River is constantly active in washing the quick sand from beneath the bank, and dropping it down. It has of late dropped down a large amount of dirt in front of the cheese factory, and has eroded the bank nearly across the road directly in front of the factory building. Surely, it seems as if the river has a mortgage on the factory, and is about to foreclose.

During Thursday and Friday last, Main street was busy with teams going to the fair at Cuba. A general feeling of satisfaction was written on every countenance as they came home—very different from their looks after the Annapolis Fair.

But the school is the life and soul of Belfast. The primary department has been set out, which adds greatly to the character of the school. Over one hundred and thirty pupils are in attendance now, many of whom are Academics or Collegians, and if once judges from appearance some of them are destined to fill high stations in life, for they are workers. The school has connected with it two libraries which are in a flourishing condition, and afford excellent opportunity for students to prepare themselves for an active part on the stage of life's grand drama.
