ALLEGANY TO PAY $129,910 GAS TAX

If Law Is Passed For Two Cent Gas Tax. Estimated County Has 12,991 Cars.

Albany, Jan. 21.—Prospective revenues for New York State from a tax on gasoline—now that such a levy is certain—are now being compiled by statisticians for the guidance of Republican legislative leaders as well as Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt in a determination as to just what legislation is required.

Conservative estimates place the yearly return on a tax of two cents a gallon at $21,572,200 while a tax of one cent a gallon would yield one-half of this amount—these estimates being based on an average consumption of 500 gallons per car, with an estimate of 2,157,220 automobiles being operated.

Taking California, Connecticut, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Michigan as a group the average consumption per car in 1927 was 472 gallons while the average for Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania as a group was 468 gallons per car.

On figures placing the average in this state at 500 gallons per car a gasoline tax would mean that the average automobile owner would pay $5 a year under a one-cent tax in addition to the present license fee.

There is a possibility of a slight reduction in license fees, but only a possibility, for while legislative leaders intend to insist on the abolition of the direct state tax on property thru gasoline revenues there have been intimations that Governor Roosevelt might suggest a cut in present automobile taxes.

In compiling estimates, experts have figured the prospective revenues from gasoline by counties, adding ten per cent to the automobile registrations of 1927.

A table of such an estimate, showing what return is anticipated from counties in southwestern New York are:

	Automobiles	Return One-cent Tax	Return Two cent Tax
Allegany	12,991	64,953	$129,910
Cattaraugus	21,124	105,620	211,240
Chautauqua	35,157	175,785	351,570

HEARST OFFERS A WET PRIZE

Millionaire Newspaper Publisher Offers Award for Those Who Tell How to Get Rid of Prohibition.

The millionaire newspaper publisher, W. R. Hearst, an aggressive and eager wet, takes a cue from W. C. Durant of the Durant Motors Company, a dry, and offers a $25,000 prize for the best plan to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment and substitute "a more liberal and more American policy."

Mr. Hearst made his announcement in a telegram which was an answer to a man formerly connected with the Hearst papers but now connected with the Durant Motors Company. In his telegram, Hearst said he does not believe that prohibition ever will be, or ever can be enforced. He believes that if a violent effort is made to enforce the dry law during the next four years by the Republican administration, the next President of the United States will be a Democrat.

Hearst declared the people do not want to be ruled by the liquor interests nor by the "bone dry fanatics." He says prohibition has been repudiated by every country which has tried it and that he considers the Eighteenth Amendment not only the most flagrant violation of the basic American principles of personal liberty, but the most complete failure as a temperance measure that has ever been conceived.

Got Heads Mixed

Nothing could have caused more pleasantry and real fun than the error in last weeks' News, whereby two heads got transposed during the make-up of the paper. There was one fine thing about the mistake—everyone reading knew it was an error.

Cuba Hotel Sold

The St. James Hotel was sold last week by Mrs. Nell M. Bredel to M. Kessler of Covington, Kentucky, possession to be given as quickly as the new proprietor can remove his effects here from his Kentucky home, says the Patriot. He came to Cuba last Tuesday. The sale was consummated in Buffalo where a real estate firm has been assisting Mrs. Bredel and Peter Bredel of East Aurora to secure a buyer. Two other buyers were in Cuba Tuesday, to look over the property.

Frederick N. Bredel bought the hotel Oct. 1, last, but died suddenly from heart disease Nov. 22, and Mrs. Bredel has carried on the hostelery successfully since then. She and Frederick, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bredel plan to leave for Miami, Florida, where she has two brothers, as soon as Mr. Kessler takes over the conduct of the St. James.

DRINKING PLACES ARE NUISANCES

So Declares Court of Appeals of New York State. A Big Aid to Enforcing Prohibition.

New York State has a law under which the Court of Appeals of that state holds that speakeasies and places where illicit liquor is sold may be prosecuted as public nuisances. New York State does not have a dry enforcement code, but the Court of Appeals says the state is not relieved from the authority to control abuses resulting from violations of the laws of the land. The Court in the decision says:

"Our conclusion that an illicit drinking place, from its nature, is a public nuisance, which entices and induces men to break the law of the land and which tends to injure the . . . . . morals of the community is founded upon manifest conditions.

"It is the disorderly character of the illicit drinking place which constitutes the offense to the public decency."

The District Attorney of New York City looks for the labors of his office to be greatly increased because of the action, and Grover Whalen, the new police commissioner for New York City, who is running undesirable characters out of the city, hails the decision as a distinct advantage to the authorities in their efforts to stamp out blind pigs and speakeasies. He says he will use it in cleaning up New York City.

Mrs. Dencie A. Mills

Mills, was 80 years of age. Besides her son, Harry G. Mills, she is survived by a brother, Lewis D. Witter and a sister, Mrs. Clara W. Crandall of Andover.

Mrs. Mills had been a frequent visitor at the home of her sister in this village and her death will be learned with regret by many who have met her here.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 16th, at the Methodist church at Stanards.

Rude Rural Rhymes

This nation has two old, old songs, and nought but praise to them belongs. The Yankee is a patriot and likes to show the same a lot by standing on his feet. The spangled banner long shall wave, above the free and above the brave. These words can fervent feelings bring but O I hate to rise and sing when I'm about to eat. I love my country's rocks and rills, no man loves more her templed hills. She is my own, my native land, but none the less I hate to stand while I'm inhaling soup. Sometimes we're packed like sardines canned; there really is no room to stand. So let us pick some other song with snappy words and chorus strong, one we may sit and whoop. I love my country, same as you, but don't my country love me too? Since by our toil the land has flourished, I'm sure she wants us to be nourished, that we may do our part. Don't start America when I am only half way through my pie, nor yet the while I strive to make some dents upon a stubborn steak. I pray thee have a heart—BOB ADAMS.

Farm Brothers Now Agriculture Deans

Frederick B. Mumford (left) and Herbert W. Mumford, two farm brothers who rose side by side to the head of two great agricultural colleges, one in Missouri, and the other in Illinois.

Mumford Bros. Rose From Farm to Fame

Now They Are Both Deans of Agricultural Colleges

In the hall of fame of the American Society of Animal Production now hang the pictures of the Mumford brothers, Frederick and Herbert. Frederick is dean of the University of Missouri agricultural college and Herbert is dean of the University of Illinois agricultural college.

E. C. L. Mumford, their father, taught them farm organization and management. They worked together on their father's 400-acre livestock farm near Moscow, Mich., and then went to Albion College.

Late they transferred to Michigan State College at Lansing. Frederick, three years older, graduated first and became a professor at the Lansing School. Herbert went to work on the home farm, and when in 1895 Frederick went to Missouri, Herbert took his Lansing job. Herbert became a professor at Illinois in 1901 and dean in 1922. Frederick headed the Missouri agricultural college in 1909.

Frederick operates the old home farm. Herbert raises purebred stock on a 600-acre farm near Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Society of Animal Production could not decide this year between the two brothers in choosing the outstanding agriculturist in animal production. So they have honored both these brothers whose careers have been so uniquely parallel.

Big Men from Small Towns

FRANK B. KELLOGG

Permanent peace is the ideal that has inspired nations and men for centuries. The man now in the van of all agitation for the complete cessation of settlement of disputes by warfare is Frank Billings Kellogg. The author of the Kellogg Pact, his activities are bringing us all nearer to the time when arbitration and not force will rule the world.

Frank B. Kellogg was born in a small town, Potsdam, N. Y., in 1856. He had a common school education. He was admitted to the bar in 1877. He was city attorney of Rochester, Minn., for three years and county attorney of Olmstead county for five years.

He moved to St. Paul, where he became a member of a law firm, and soon he was handling very important cases for the U. S. Government. From 1917 to 1923 he was a U. S. Senator from Minnesota. He held the post of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to Great Britain in 1924.

In the cabinet of President Coolidge, he has been the Secretary of State. In this capacity began his earnest work for the establishment of world-peace. Thruout his career he has been very active in many fields, and he is everywhere admired and respected. His career has been extraordinary and should serve as an inspiration to American youth.

$24,000,000 FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Senate Votes Huge Sum for Use of President to Make Dry Laws More Effective.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The President of the United States was voted $24,000,000 by the Senate today for use in an attempt to enforce prohibition more strictly.

The prospective appropriation still must be approved by the House and President Coolidge, and, if this is forthcoming, the expenditures of the money is expected to fall to the lot of Herbert Hoover because of the short time remaining before March 4.

Wide powers would be given the Chief Executive in the expenditures of the nearly quarter of a hundred million dollars under the amendment adopted to the first deficiency appropriation bill.' It was offered by Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, a dry, and was made available over the protest of Secretary Mellon.

The Senate also voted an additional $250,000 to enable the President to carry out a "thoro going investigation of prohibition." Funds for this investigation, which President-elect Hoover had given callers to understand he intends to make, also must be approved by the House and Mr. Coolidge.

The only restrictions placed upon the executive in the use of the $24,000,000 would be that he must allocate the money to departments and bureaus of the government which have a part in the enforcement of the dry laws. He would be able to use all or part of the money as he might see fit.

The vote on the Harris proposal was 50 to 27. Only three Democrats were recorded against it, Bruce of Maryland, Kendrick of Wyoming, and Reed of Missouri, while 12 Republicans voted with almost the solid Democratic membership in its support.

The $250,000 fund was approved without a record vote.

Another Test Flight

Martin Jensen, who was second in the California-to-Honolulu Dole prize race a year ago, will have a two-fold object when he takes off from Roosevelt Field, Long Island, within the next few days. He will try to break the world's solo endurance flight record and he will put to gruelling test a theory of his own that airplanes can be satisfactorily flown in emergencies on regular priced automobile gasoline.

Jensen is co-operating in his project with the Tide Water Oil Company. In his plane's tanks will be 250 gallons of Hi-test Tydol, the same fuel that can be bought by motorists at gasoline pumps. This is sufficient for 50 hour or more of flight.

NOT TOO LATE TO BUY SEALS

County Health and Welfare Association Asks the Return of Seals or the Money.

"It is not too late to buy your Health Christmas Seals," according to the Rev. S. W. Hale, president of the Public Health and Welfare Association of Allegany county. "Christmas has come and gone but the work of the Association still goes on and the money is needed just as much as ever.

"Allegany county has responded very generously to our appeal," the Rev. Hale says, "and we are very grateful to those who have given so generously of their time and money. But we still lack much of the amount that is absolutely necessary to every man, woman and child living in Allegany county that the health and welfare work of the association should not suffer thru lack of funds.

There are in the county several persons who have not returned their seals or money for them. It is very easy to lay them aside and forge them. The association is required by its agreement with the State Committee to urge returns of seals or money for them.

ASSERT CREEDS CONFOUND YOUTHS

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in Dedicatory Address of Chapel, Deplores Religious Differences.

Chicago.—That gem of Gothic architecture, the chapel of the University of Chicago, was dedicated with a sonorous service of song and speech. As the representative of his father, who contributed the funds that made reality of an architect's dream, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., took a prominent part in the exercises.

He made formal offer of an endowment fund of $1,000,000, to be known as the Laura Spellman Rockefeller Memorial Fund, to promote religious idealism in the students of the university. The chapel cost $1,800,000. Mr. Rockefeller spoke on tolerant and liberal attributes in religion. He said in part:

"In spite of the progress which has been made, youth finds itself confused and irked as it stands at life's threshold and is confronted with an almost infinite variety of religions and sects. It stands aghast at the rorty and un-Christlike spectacle of good men and women hurling anathema at each other because of differences of theological belief and denominational partianship.

"It is strange, then, that the younger generation from being at first confused and irked by our multiform Christ-like attitude of so-called religious people is tempted to say to itself: 'If this is religion, to insist on sectarian differences and to quibble about non-essentials, when sin is rampant in the world and evil is omnipresent, if church members are more interested in whom they will keep out of their religious bodies because of theological differences, than they are in helping people to be strong in body, clean in mind and pure in heart, we will waste our time with nothing so hypocritical and useless; rather will we give all religion a wide berth and have none of it.'

"And to the extent that such a conclusion is reached, the intolerant sectarians of our churches are largely to blame. If Christ were on earth today I fancy there would be but one church—the Church of the Living God.

"It would pronounce ordinance, ritual, creed, all non-essential for admission into the Kingdom of God or His Church. A life, not a creed, would be its test; what a man does, not what he professes; what he is, not what he has."—N. Y. World.
