HEALTH AND THE MODE

The clothes a child wears deserve consideration quite as much as the food he eats, says Ruth Scott, of the New York State College of Home Economics. Mothers realize more and more that the style, color and fit of clothing have much to do with health, happiness and behavior. Restlessness and nervousness may be caused by suits that are too tight or by underwear which is too warm. It may be that the little child who does not play happily outdoors is weighed down and made uncomfortable by a heavy coat.

Clothes which keep children well and happy are loose enough to allow free action and keep an even temperature over the body. For underwear, knitted fabrics and open weaves are recommended rather than closely woven fabrics. The garment should be elastic, porous, absorbent, and easily washed. For well heated indoor rooms, children need no more clothing than in summer but when they go outside additional warm, light-weight garments should be worn. A light-weight coat, loose enough to permit a sweater under it is a part of the winter wardrobe.

Colors are becoming to the small child. Bright colored prints make attractive year-around dresses for little girls; plain wash suits of cotton and wool are suitable for little boys. Sombre dark colors should be avoided since the child does not enjoy wearing them.

How do you plan your home garden? All of a sudden on a nice spring day, do you plant furiously in the order in which the seed comes to your hand? Or some good winter day do you take a pencil and paper and draw a plan, preferably to scale, and, after you are sure that you have planned the best arrangement, make out your seed order? There is a world of difference between the two systems.

One vegetable besides potato should be included in the child's largest meal.

Nose Pink, Record Broken. Peaceful Fishing. Another Canal Needed. Radio and the School.

For 13 hours and 16 minutes, Elinor Smith, 17-year-old girl flier, stayed up in the freezing winds above Long Island in an open airplane. When she came down her nose was bright pink, her legs were stiff, her hands were almost frozen, but she had broken the women's endurance record by one hour.

Flying interest women, it is one of the things that they can do better than men.

The MOST important thing men can't do at all, namely producing and taking care of children. And that is what should interest women especially.

It is better to create an Abraham Lincoln than to be Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Hoover is fishing, calm and peaceful, having written his inauguration address and selected his Cabinet. The country won't know who is in the Cabinet until March 14th.

A thousand or more candidates may be sure that if they haven't heard from Mr. Hoover yet, they will not hear from him. The fact that Secretary Mellon REMAINS in the Cabinet will please everybody, something that happens rarely.

The Panama Canal set a new high record for business in January, 593 ships passing in 30 days.

The country needs another canal, and a Nicaraugua canal should be built at sea level to take care of growing ocean-to-ocean traffic.

The Nicaragua canal would provide this country with a canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific without the locks, so easily destroyed.

What radio means to the world, particularly to this country with its millions of radio sets, is not appreciated.

Public thanks are due to the Radio Corporation of American that, at great expense, engages an excellent symphony orchestra with Walter Damrosh leading and explaining to play every Friday morning at 11 o'clock for school children and all others that care to "tune in."

Lady Heath, wife of Sir James Heath, a brilliant female flier, turns American, takes the oath of loyalty to Uncle Sam, and says she doesn't care what her husband thinks.

She wishes you to know that she has eaten her first "hot dog," likes America, and doesn't care whether you call her "Lady" or "Mrs." as long as you are friendly. This lady, under any name, will make her way.

Thomas Hastings, who built the public library in New York, and got a gold medal from King George for being the best architect, has made plans to remodel the capitol.

They will "dispel gloom, let in outside light and air."

Old gentlemen for whom the building was built did not appreciate as moderns do the importance of oxygen, never head of "actinic rays."

Did they get along "about as well as we do, with our new fangled notions?" They did NOT. Their lives on the average were at least 20 years shorter than ours.

The Christian Church

Mark 4:26-32; Ephesians 1:22, 23; 4:4-6, 11, 16

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Jesus laid down very few rules. He did announce principles which would determine right action under varying circumstances. No elaborate organization was established to carry forward His program. During the three years and three months of public ministry many called disciples attended his peripatetic school. From among those learners twelve were inducted into the apostolic office.

The Kingdom of God was frequently mentioned and was explained both by direct and parabolic teachings. This Kingdom is where the will of God is done in earth, even as it is in heaven. The Church is a term which grew up in apostolic days and means in particular those who are called out. That word has various meanings today. We are not discussing any reference to a mere building, but rather to the comprehensive organization that is called by that word. Strictly speaking, the Church is invisible and is composed of all those who are in the company of believers and obeyers. The common use of the name includes all who are members of the organized, or visible Church. The various denominations are not under consideration either; there are more than 200 Protestant sects in the United States alone.

Read, with close attention, the passages which are indicated for study today. In addition to those named above, we have Matthew 16: 30-20; Romans 12:4-8; Ephesians 1:15-23; 5:22-27; I. Timothy 3:15. Then turn to the word "Church" in any encyclopaedia for many general statements. You can finds books on Church History in any public library.

In a recent lesson study we had Peter's confession, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God," which Jesus Himself declared to be the foundation on which the spiritual church would be built. Well may the beginning be called, in the parable, a grain of mustard seed. The growth has been marvellous. The World Almanac indicates that 566,201,000 are classed as Christians in the world's population of 1,619,764,000. Thus one-third of the race claims relationship to Jesus Christ, the founder of the Church.

The different members have varying ability, said Paul in writing to the Romans, but all are "one body in Christ." The trouble is that too many do not live up to their spiritual possibility. It is stated that nine-tenths of the work in the average church is done by one-tenth of its members. Failure cannot be charged against the Church, but that indictment can be charged against the majority of its constituency.

The failure is because the members of the body will not co-ordinate with the Head, as set forth in Ephsians. Christ is called also the "chief corner stone." All the bodily life, thinking of an individual, and all construction, having an edifice in mind, must be with reference to Founder and Saviour. Then glorious attainment can be had, for we again behold the goal: "Unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ."

THE GENTLE BULL

His dam was good, his sire likewise. Of proper color, shape and size, the breeder knew he had a prize. Not very big, nor very strong, not being born so very long, with good cow milk his time was full, he was a very gentle bull. They fed the calf and soon he grew big of bone and strong of thew, prepared at last for his vocation, the worthy work of procreation. Yet still withal to drive or pull he was a very gentle bull. While in the show ring or the stall, he showed his temper not at all. He never once was out of hand, but wooed his loves upon demand. Tho all the while, it well may be, he felt a longing to be free, and in his bovine brain began a hatred of his master, man. Yet outwardly still dutiful, he was a very gentle bull. He turned one day in sudden wrath and slew the nearest in his path. It's passing strange my fellow men will ever trust a bull again. But as for this especial one, his story is completely done. His race is run, his bolt is sped—that is to say the critter's dead. Bulls in that state are, to my mind, the only really gentle kind.—BOB ADAMS.

If all home-canned food is boiled 15 minutes before it is eaten, any possible danger of poisoning with botulinis toxin will be removed, as the toxin is destroyed by boiling.

DID YOU KNOW that—if the living room be without a natural fireplace—you can have a very very charming hearth built in at little cost, and without even cutting into the wall?

A chimney breast of beaverboard can be built out from the blank wall and a "tailor-made" mantel with space for an artificial grate set into the breast. The beaverboard should then be covered with canvas and painted or papered to match the old walls. Finish with a cornice or molding at the top to match that used in the balance of the room, and insert a grate for artificial, electric-lighted coals or logs in the health space. Decoratively speaking, the result will be all that one could ask.

should housewives STRIKE for shorter hours?

NO need for housewives to strike, in this modern age of electrical conveniences. Now any woman can easily do her housework in six hours or less a day.

An electric washer does the biggest wash in two hours—saves over 100 hours of scrubbing each year. An electric ironer does the ironing in an hour and a half—shirts and dresses as well as flat pieces. A small sum will install them in your home . . . a few pennies an hour will operate them.

Never in its history has your electricity been as cheap as now. In spite of generally increased living costs, Niagara Power Service is actually cheaper today than in 1914. You can afford to use it freely.

George Major Loses Hand

William Lauterborne tells us that his brother-in-law, George Major, had his right hand ground off and nearly lost his life, at Mount Airy, Md., Saturday.

Mr. Major for many years has been manager of a mammoth poultry plant for a millionaire at Mount Airy. A number of men were operating machines in which straw was being ground and cut up for litter for baby chicken brooder houses.

One machine did not seem to be feeding right, and Mr. Major was tinkering with it. The glove on his right hand caught and his hand was drawn in. The member was badly mangled. The right hand at the wrist was later amputated at the Fredericks (Md.) General hospital.

In Buffalo Hospital

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Gallagher of Black Creek went to Buffalo, Wednesday, and today (Thursday) Mrs. Gallagher underwent an operation at Millard Fillmore hospital. Mr. Gallagher will remain with his wife a few days. Mrs. Gallagher is a correspondent of this paper, and the Patriot wishes her an early recovery.—Cuba Patriot.

Mr. Gallagher is the son of Mrs. Eliza Gallagher of Andover.

We honestly desire to give our customers the utmost in value for the money you pay us. Just think this over carefully; that don't mean the lowest prices for it is rare indeed to find good value associated with a low price.

In no line of merchandise is this more evident than when applied to paint for outdoor use, because paint that will stand heat and cold, wet and dry, hot sun and cutting winds must contain certain pigment with the correct amount of oil and driers to give it just the right density, spreading capacity and still remain flexible enough so it won't crack and fall off. Cheap paint is a narcotic, you put it on, you think you have painted—but decay goes right on—sun and rain go thru it like a slave.

If you will look around and compare values you will find less temptation to go to the extreme in cheap paint for paint that has proven itself. "Second to none," Benjamin Moore's Pure Linseed Oil Paint can now be purchased at so low a price that you won't care to take any chances.
