Andover Community Club Holds Reception

had at least three distinct stages of development that it has passed thru in order to reach the high position it now holds. First was the construction, or start, by the Rochambeau Silk Co., away back in 1903, who built the first mill with painstaking care and started its operation. After a short interval of years, however, they sold the industry to the Andover Silk Company. They in turn, conducted the business very successfully for a number of years under the superintendency of the late lamented John H. Faisant, who endeared himself to all Andover people by his upright life, manly ways and untiring efforts not only for his company, but for everything that was calculated to make life a little better in our community. But it was not until the Andover Silk Company turned the business over to the present company, Albert Godde, Bedin, Inc., that it really became a fixed and established industry. Before that time, while all Andover people had great hopes for its success and future development, there was always a certain degree of uncertainty about its continued growth. But since the gentlemen who are our honored guests here tonight have taken over the control and management of the affairs of this industry, there has been no uncertainty. It has been a continual development. Always advancing, always branching out, always progressing.

While Andover people have always fully appreciated the financial benefits we have and are receiving from this institution located in our village—and I sometimes shudder to think what Andover might have been without it—there are many other benefits which I fear some of us have not always appreciated which come to us because of the presence of this substantial industry in our midst. For the past 26 years, over a quarter of a century, it has furnished employment to many of our young men and young women, who otherwise would have been obliged to leave Andover and go elsewhere to seek positions. It has been the means of developing these same young men and young women into skilled mechanics, workmen and operators, and who have gained fine positions and property here because of the instructions they received in the Andover mills. There are a number of Andover young people who today hold lucrative positions in various parts of the country, and some who own interests in the silk industry themselves, who owe their entire knowledge of the business to the instruction and training they received in Andover, at our silk mills.

In fact, there is not an avenue in our business, civic or social life that has not been benefitted and greatly assisted by the presence of our silk mills. It has made possible better homes, better schools, better churches, better places of business, better mercantile establishments and better places of recreation. In fact it has broadened the whole fabric of our lives and made possible happy and prosperous homes.

Is it any wonder, then, that we are happy tonight to meet and grasp by the hand, these men who have brought all these fine things to Andover, and extend to them our most cordial greeting?

Above all things Andover people do not want the officials of the silk mill to feel that we are or ever have been the least bit indifferent as to the success of their business here, or for what they have done for us. Neither do we want them to feel that we are too zealous in our efforts to advance Andover, selfishly subjugating the welfare of their company for the development of our village. We do, however, promise them full co-operation in every way possible in any effort they may put forth to make the business they are so successfully conducting here, grow and prosper until it shall pay them dividends commensurate with the money they have invested and the time and energy they have devoted to this enterprise. If there is anything which we can do to help them in their efforts to further build up and strengthen their industry in Andover, we promise them it will be cheerfully performed. In our future relations with Albert Godde, Bedin, Inc., we want them to know that our loyalty to our largest and best industry is so pronounced that it will call for neither words, ink or paper to give it expression.

Gen. Supt. H. T. Roudet

The toastmaster then called upon General Superintendent H. T. Roudet, who in a most pleasing manner expressed his appreciation for the fine co-operation extended by Andover people to his company, and shown by the gathering present. He also conveyed to Andover people the spirit of good will his company, Albert Godde, Bedin, Inc., holds toward Andover and her people.

Mr. Roudet spoke extemporaneously and his remarks gladdened the hearts of all present by the fine feeling expressed and the optomistic outlook for the continued success of the silk mill in Andover.

Supt. Roudet paid a most high tribute of respect to the retiring superintendent, J. H. Faisant, for his efficient work in Andover. He also highly recommended and commended the new manager of the Andover silk mills, John Staffer, and asked Andover people to give him the same fine co-operation that they have always given the retiring manager.

While Mr. Roudet has been the most efficient general superintendent for Albert Godde, Bedin, Inc., for the past five years, living at Depew, this was the first occasion which most Andover men have had to meet this gracious gentleman, but sincerely hope they will again have the opportunity of greeting him at a future gathering of the Community Service Club.

Secretary R. M. Wood

The last speaker of the evening the toastmaster introduced was R. M. Wood, assistant secretary of Albert Godde, Bedin, Inc., and representing President H. Barbet, at this meeting. Mr. Wood said:

We are gathered together tonight to honor a man who has for years played an important part in moulding the future of our business. For upon the quality of our merchandise depends the success of our business.

I met Mr. Faisant for the first time today. But I have known him for several years "by his works."

From time to time I stood before the examining frame watching the countless yards of the Andover product pass under inspection. The story of Mr. Faisant's creative genius, his years of experience, and the infinite care and patience applied to his work, has been clearly readable.

The excellence of his work made known to me the fine upright character of the man.

It was with sincere regret that Mr. Barbet, president of Albert Godde, Bedin, Inc., found it impossible to attend this dinner tonight, and it was only the most important of previous engagements which kept him away. It is my good fortune, however, to be permitted to share in this splendid wholesome expression of community spirit. The firm of Albert Godde, Bedin, Inc., is happy to be so closely allied to your community welfare.

Mr. Faisant, I bring you a message from the entire organization at New York. We are happy that it is of your own desire to be released from active service, so as to enjoy life in your own way. We are happy that as a director of the company, you will still be one of us. It will be comforting to know that we may still call on you for expert advice, should an occasion arise. We wish you many years of peace, contentment, good health and happiness. You take with you our love and esteem, and will always be remembered as long as our organization exists.

(Mr. Wood here illustrated what a sudden change from an active life to one of ease sometimes brings by telling a humorous story that brough the audience to vociferous applause.—Ed.)

It is most kind of you to receive Mr. Staffer in this cordial way. We know him to be a good man, and feel sure that you will find both he and his good wife welcome members of your community.

Baptist Association Will Meet Here

The Allegany Baptist Association meets with the Andover church in recognition of the 100th anniversary of this church. The first known minister to visit Andover was Rev. Ephriam Sanford of Wayne. Rev. Sanford settled at Wayne 1793 and was the first minister of any denomination to settle in that vast tract south of Central New York lakes and west to the Genesee Valley. Elder Sanford explored all the region to the Genesee and established churches at Portage and Belfast and Oramal as early as 1808. Elder Sheardown, a successor of Elder Sanford helped to organize the Andover Baptist church in 1829. Congregational church had been organized in 1824. There was a M. E. church established in 1839 or 1840.

Should girls keep their jobs when they "MARRY?"

WHY not? Two incomes are always better than one, especially during the first years of marriage.

Housework is not the burden it used to be. An electric range cooks dinner while you're at the office. Simply put it in the oven after breakfast—set the time and temperature controls—find dinner ready to serve at six that evening! With an electric vacuum cleaner, you need to clean up but two or three times a week. With an electric refrigerator you can buy several days food supply at one time—keep it sweet and fresh indefinitely.

No wonder a girl can hold two jobs at once! Yet with all this help, your electricity costs you less now than 15 years ago. Niagara Power Service is so cheap, you can feel free to use all you need.
