Wingless Hens. Eat Meat. Harrassing Hoover. We Are Candy Eaters.

This is real news. Dr. Renwald, poultry expert in Nebraska, says he has produced a breed of wingless hens that also lack toenails.

They lay, but can't fly, can't scratch, can't be a dently interested in mo herhood, having no wings to shelter a brood.

Such hens, being saved the trouble of moulting the difficult wing feathers, should go on laying all year round, producing 300 eggs a year.

To separate female usefulness from psychological disturbances like moulting would be marvelous, in poultry, and among the primates.

The Arctic explorer, Stefanson, and a companion, Anderson, have lived for a year on nothing but meat, eating enormous quantities.

Physicians say their health is better, their resistance to disease strengthened.

Let vegetarians muse on that.

The rock in 1,000 million years produces soil, with the aid of earth worms.

The soil, after more centuries, produces grass. The cow eats grass for three years, digesting it slowly. Man eats the beefsteak in 15 minutes.

Great labor-saving device. Give your children meat.

President Hoover, great engineer, has been kept busy since his inauguration by prohibition problems.

Now he is asked to develop and enforce new blue laws. The blue law gentlemen want Washington made into a "Blue-Law-Paradise," that the city may be an example to the nation.

Poor President Hoover, listening to six speeches in favor of Sunday blue laws, all in one day, must wonder when the country will allow him to do some engineering.

After all, preventing Sunday golf in the District of Columbia is NOT as important as the Boulder Dam or flood control.

In the last six months Americans have eaten more than six and a half billion pounds of sugar. Prohibition helps that. More candy is sold.

The country this year will use 13 billion pounds of sugar. If the tariff increase costs but two cents a pound, that will cost the public $260,000,000.

The city of Colby, Kansas, again votes not to tax anybody or property, real or personal, in the city.

Colby owns its power, light and water plant. Profits, which go to the city, make taxes unnecessary.

In fact, because of surplus profits, the water rate is reduced 25 cents this year.

FARM SHIPPERS ARE ORGANIZED

Traffic Advisory Council Will Represent Shippers of the Various Branches of Agriculture.

Steps have been taken in Western New York for the establishment of a Traffic Advisory Council representative of the various agricultural and allied interests in that section, having as its purpose co-operation with Commissioner Berne A. Pyrke and the Traffic Bureau of the Department of Agriculture and Markets in the matter of freight rates on fruit and vegetables.

At a meeting of a group of shippers in Rochester there was discussion of the freight rates on commodities from Western New York and the status of such under the eastern class rates investigation and other proceedings now pending before federal and state regulatory commissions.

Cogswell Bentley, of Fairport, was made chairman of the temporary committee for the organization of a traffic advisory council. Assistant Commissioner C. P. Norgord and V. M. Parshall, director of the Traffic Bureau of the department, met with the organization committee in Rochester.

The committee advised the officials of the department of the plans for organization and the department was requested to make a survey of the fruit and vegetable rate situation as it develops following the decision in the eastern class rate case. After the survey a report will be submitted to the committee. Assurance was given the shippers of co-operation from the department, and Mr. Parshall outlined the procedure in the eastern class rate investigation and discussed other questions of interest to the shippers.

It is the plan that the Traffic Advisory Council as organized by the shippers shall be representative of the various branches of agriculture and agricultural organizations as well as cold storage warehouses and allied interests. It is proposed to provide a medium of contact between the shippers and receivers with the Department of Agriculture, to provide for the ready dissemination of information with regard to traffic and transportation questions. It is also stated that the Council will be of assistance in representing the agriculture of the state in its dealings with carriers. The impetus for this movement came entirely from the interested shippers, it is stated by officials in the department which had no part in the matter of the organization of the advisory council but it gave its co-operation at the request of the shippers.

Belshazzar's Feast

Daniel 5:17-28

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

Serious elements of weakness were operating among the Chaldeans, and the Medes from the north were campaigning against the capital. At this very time they were encamped about the city. But Belshazzar was intent on his self-gratification. In this he was in accord with the courtiers, all of whom should have been alert to drive back the invading army.

As an expression of their indifference a royal banquet was arranged, and it was participated in by 1,000 lars, with their wives and concubines. When the brain of the kind ceased to function normally as its action was distorted by alcohol, always a poison, he tried to think of some excess in ribaldry that would surpass the last occasion. Then he ordered that the gold and silver vessels be brought, which had been taken as booty when the Temple at Jerusalem had been destroyed about 49 years before. These were filled with wine and the already intoxicated crowd was invited to drink therefrom as they followed the king's example. It would be hard to think up a grosser act of flagrant impiety. Revelry broke loose in wilder manner than ever.

Sobering came suddenly, however, as in consternation they saw what appeared like just a man's hand writing on the wall. When none could interpret the meaning, the wise men and magicians were called in. They, too, were helpless, the king promised great wealth for the meaning of those three words. In this plight the queen, possibly the widow of Nebuchadnezzar, reminds that Daniel had been able to give the meaning of dreams, and once when the king could not even recall the dream itself.

Daniel is summoned. It is interesting to note that he was not participating in the licentiously wild banquet. Not for the sake of reward but as the spokesman of God he will announce the interpretion, tho it will not be pleasing to the great audience assembled. It is of value to know various languages but it is of decidedly greater importance to understand the language of God in whatever tongue the utterance may be given. Our Great Teacher is always seeking to speak to his children thru the very routine of life as well as by special approaches.

Three words stood out on the plaster. They referred to time, weights and measures. The interpretations indicated utter failure of Belshazzar's rule.

INCREASE MILK FLOW BY SUMMER FEEDING

New York Dairymen Must Augment Supply If They Want to Hold Their Market.

The production of milk in the area which supplies New York City, or what is known as the New York milk shed, is no greater now than it was last year at this time. This means that if market demands for milk are to be met this fall by eastern dairymen, a decided increase over last year's production must soon be made. This must come largely from the maintenance of a better milk flow thru this summer than was maintained last summer.

A lowered milk flow in springfreshening cows results largely from too little feed on short and dry pastures, and results also from annoyance from heat and flies. Losses from heat and flies may be lessened by furnishing cows, during the heat of the day, with shade and plenty of water. Losses from under-feeding on poor pasture may be overcome by supplementing pasture feed with grain, hay, and green forage.

Professor Crandall adds that dairymen must watch for the first indication of a lowered production in the herd and must increase grain feeding at milking time. Under most pasture conditions one pound of grain to four pounds of milk for Holsteins and Ayrshires, or to three pounds for Guerneys and Jerseys, will be needed. An 18 to 20 per cent total protein grain mixture should be fed.

As pasture becomes poorer, hay and green forage should be fed. The cows may be kept in the barn after the morning milking and fed all the new hay they will clean up readily. Green forage may be fed later in the day or in the pasture after the night milking. The poorer the pasture, the more green forage needed. The extra labor required in keeping cows in the barn or under a cool shelter during the heat of the day, and the feeding of hay and green forage will bring good returns in the increased milk production next fall. An increased production may make unnecessary the enlarging of the present producing territory.

Larkin's Moved

A quick change was that achieved this week by the Larkin Store in Andover. They moved their entire stock from the corner block on Main and West Greenwood streets in one day, Sunday, to the old Trainor store, next door, and were ready for business as usual Monday morning in the new location. Ten men from the Larkin organization made the transfer.

The Trainor store has been entirely re-arranged with new plate-glass front, and newly fitted. It makes a most spacious and convenient store.

One Minute Washer sales have increased 500 per cent. in New York State in the past six months.

People everywhere are quick to recognize its unusual value. There is nothing on the market to compare with the One Minute.

If you intend to own an electric washer at any time during the next three or four years, look this machine over and see the latest model and lowest priced washer offered anywhere.

The tub has full size open top. The washing unit is removable, making it so easy to load and unload the clothes.

The motor is a Westinghouse and runs as smooth and silent as your watch.

Cash price $84.50. Payment plan if you wish, slightly higher price.

Just cover your linoleum with a coat of utilac and it will clean with half the labor and stay clean twice as long.

Utilac is as clear as a window glass, dries in four hours and will wear for years.

A pint can sells for 75c and will do the job in an ordinary kitchen. One coat is all that is required.

Good Luck can rubbers are the standard for cold or hot pack canning. If you loose one can of fruit or vegetables you have lost more than two years' rubber expense. Why take chances.

Don't sizzle in a hot kitchen simply because you are outside the gas belt.

New Process stoves make their own gas, as clean, as cheaply and with no more trouble than if you were using natural gas.

Three-burner extension top enameled stove with oven $25.00.

Don't waste time with your old knapsack sprayer. Brown's victory with extension auto pop nozzle—$4.75.

It's too bad that canning time doesn't come in the winter when the weather is cool—but that is one of the ways in which Nature won't co-operate.

Canning has to be done—so we suggest you do it the convenient, cool way.

Use a Conservo Cooker—holds 14 quart cans at one time, no watching no tending—the whistle blows if any attention is needed.

Dry weather is bad for crops but just the best time in the whole season for a good paint job.

The best paint made won't stay on if the surface to which it is applied is water soaked, so a dry surface, Moore's Pure Linseed Oil Paint plus plenty of know how, elbow grease and you have as good a job as' money can buy.

The expense of your paint job will be less also if you use Moore's paint, two coats of it will cover in many places that would require three coats of cheaper paint, and the extra labor for the additional painting will cost you more than the entire difference between Moore's and the soap suds paint.

Wise home owners buy good paint always.

Paper Plates save a lot of dishwashing and a dime will buy 22.
