Monstrous mereinaw hadren.

Monstrous depravity! Shameful!

Now is not that a eight to discourage any Christian, particularly one that has labored so hard at I have in the temperance causes? said the worthy Siles Flut; and pointing with his came, he directed his friends attention to the opposite side of the atreet, there to see a boy of about fourteen years, miscrobly clad, proceeding with years, miscrobly clad, proceeding with there to see a boy of about fourteen years, miserably clad, proceeding with very irregular steps, sometimes near-ing the curbstone, and hen again ge-ing quite up to the store windows, stop-ping quite still, and learning against the buildings, as if for support.

'Is he intoxicated?' inquired Mr. Filter's friend.

"Is he intoxicated? inquired Mr. Flint's friend.
"Why certainly! Do 'you not see be has a bottle naw, peaping from under his jacket? The young vagebond! The werkshoure is the place for him?"
He does not look as if he had been drinking run, He is every jade, and indeed looks quite sick. Permas now, he is, and we are judging him wronely. Let us go speak to him, Flint. We en then find out. We may possibly be able to reform him."
"No, we are not judging him wrong."
