Andover High School TIDBITS

SENIOR TID BITS

Why are the members of the Senior class so deeply interested in reading in the study hall? Oh! It's the play books. The Seniors are trying to select a play. Don't worry, they are not studying.

The Senior class received an invitation to a Hallowe'en party from the Whitesville Senior class. It will be held at the home of our former classmate, Marjory Leach, at Whitesville, Friday evening, Nov. 1st. We'll be there!

A candy sale was held last Friday under the auspices of the Senior class. We wish to thank the two who donated and the many that contributed. Another five dollars toward our trip to Washington was realized.

A Senior class meeting was held in the library, Tuesday night, after school. Julia Joyce and Kathryn O'Donnell were appointed on the committee for amusements at the Halowe'en party. We decided to have "And Mary Did," for our Senior play. Stop, look and listen for the date.

OVER-AND-OVER

Alfred 24, Rochester 6. Yes, the Alfred team captained by Grayden Seely defeated the Rochester team captained by Bruce McGill. The place was the silk mill athletic field. The time was Tuesday, October 14, after school.

Some of the boys showed up very promisingly. Andover High School will have a real football team some day.

These and other grade football teams will play games during the remaining weeks of this gridiron season.

The Hornell high football team defeated the Alfred University Freshman team last Friday afternoon at Alfred. The final score was 13-0. The Hornell team is very strong but then the Frosh team showed lack of practice. They have only practiced together for two weeks.

Claire Greene, Andover High School, '28, played over a quarter of the game. Looks as tho Claire is going to fill his father's shoes. Rev. Greene was a captain, coach and star on Alfred teams of 25 years ago.

Station AHS broadcasted the following program last Friday morning during the assembly period.

Station announcer—Roger Tuttle.

Soprano solo—Madam Loudinsky —Ruth Farwell, accompanied by Madame Loudinsky—Ruth Farwell.

Station news flashes—The wreck of the new plane Geometry by Durell and Arnold on isosceles triangle.

Bedtime story—Billy Jinkins —Francis Cable.

Station news flashes—The loss of a small, little boy, by the name of Basil Perry.

Violin solo—Professor G. String—Oliver Kemp. Accompanied by Madame Off Key—Winona Earley.

One act play by Cancis Fable—Francis Cable.

Molly Broomhandle, heroine Winona Earley

Harry Stupentakit, hero, Francis Cable

Ezra Corntassle, villain, Oliver Kemp

Pete Sleet, villain's second, Robert Joyce

Jack Wagontrack—Dan Farwell.

Weather report and time signals.

Station announcer Roger Tuttle signed off at 11:68 Eastern Daylight Mountain Standard Time.

Miss Holmes had charge of this very interesting and funny assembly program. She and her radio performers are worthy of our praise.

The post office will not be as full of school children now that the marks are in the mails.

Sure looks as tho we all have some effort ahead of us. And not a little either. Let's get to work and get those marks where they belong.

With demerits flocking to the boys in such rapid order, it looks as tho Andover High will not have any basketball team this season.

Come on, boys—get in there and WORK. Your marks sure show sign that you should.

The Biography of Comrade Wm. McDonough

cent victories, the Union boys were taken by surprise. A fair portion of the army finally threw itself into battle formation but was being driven slowly back. Certain divisions had been demobilized by this surprise attack and had fled.

Now Gener l Sheridan, or "Little Phil" as his men called him had completed his business at Washington and was spending the night on his return at Winchester. In the early hours of the morning he was awakened by the roar of cannon fire off to the south. Guessing what might be happening he arose, mounted his handsome coal black horse, Rienzi, and made, thru the flush of the morning light, that famous ride.

Up from the South at the break of day,
Bringing to Winchester fresh dismay,
The affrighted air with a shudder bore,
Like a herald in haste, to the chieftain's door,
Telling the battle was on once more;
And Sheridan twenty miles away.

But there is a road from Winchester town,
A good, broad highway, leading down;
And there, thru the flush of the morning light,
A steed as black as the steeds of night,
Was seen to pass, as with eagle flight;
As if he knew the terrible need,
He stretched away with his utmost speed;
Hills rose and fell, but his heart was gay,
With Sheridan fifteen miles away.

The first that the general saw were the groups
Of stragglers, and then the retreating troops:
What was done? What to do? A glance told him both,
Then striking his spurs, with a terrible oath,
He dashed down the line, 'mid a storm of huzzas,
And the wave of retreat checked its course there, because
The sight of the master compelled it to pause.
With foam and dust the black charger was grey;
By the flash of his eye, and the red nostril's play,
He seemed to the whole great army to say:
"I have brought you Sheridan all the way
From Winchester down to save the day."

Some of the Economic Aspects of Prohibition

ed and under-paid occupations have more to gain than any other single class from the general increase in sobriety. Those individuals, who might be promoted, that are prevented from promotion and held down by their addiction to drink are not the only ones who could be benefitted. The others, who, whether there is prohibition or not, have to work in the unskilled occupations, would also be benefitted by the reduction in the number of their competitors. Promotion of everyone who is promotable would leave fewer competitors in the under paid and over crowded occupations. This would either decrease the unemployment or increase the rate of wages in such occupations. If the rigid enforcement of prohibition will increase sobriety, the wage workers should be the most zealous advocates of its rigid enforcement.

"It must be evident that all the economic evils which are alleged to exist under prohibition are due to its lax enforcement. They would disappear if it were enforced. This is a poor argument, therefore, for nullification or deliberate violation of the law. Insofar as enforcement is improved, as it is likely to be under President Hoover, those evils will disappear and its benefits will accumulate.

"Since President Hoover's election and inauguration, wet propaganda has reached a high pitch of stridency. The old slogan 'It can't be enforced' has been repeated with higher and higher frequency. To an unbiased observer it looks as tho the wets were awfully scared lest it should be enforced. They realize that if President Hoover should succeed in enforcing it reasonably well, or should gain a considerable advance in the direction of enforcement, their chief argument will be destroyed. Their chief argument has always been 'It can't be enforced.' If the country is given a demonstration that it can be, that particular argument is destroyed. It seems to look as tho that argument was already getting pretty weak. The frantic efforts of the wets to prevent enforcement is, they must realize, their last stand. If they succeed from this position, the drys will have been turned and can point to the economic benefits of real prohibition, really enforced, will begin to accumulate."

ARE YOU ORTHODOX? QUEEN VICTORIA. OLD THINGS AND NEW.

As impressive reading as I have ever found in the writing of a first-class man is from George Santayana:

"I have great respect for orthodoxy; not for those orthodoxies which prevail in particular schools or nations, and which vary from age to age, but for a certain shrewd orthodoxy which the sentiment and practice of laymen maintain everywhere. I think that common sense, in a rough, dogged way, is technically sounder than the special schools of philosophy, each of which squints and overlooks half the facts and half the difficulties in its eagerness to find some detail the key to the whole. I am animated by distrust of all high guesses, and by sympathy with the old prejudices and workaday opinions of mankind: they are ill expressed, but they are well grounded."

I also like Santayana because he said: "My system is not mine, nor is it new." I am prejudiced against those persons who show enthusiasm only in presence of something they consider new. Here is a leader in philosophy who has most respect for the old common sense as discovered by laymen in the school of practical experience, where all of us are students, and may become useful teachers:

Harvard college is just a building; outside is the world:

I am orthodox; I accept what the best of my neighbors say; I accept that shrewd orthodoxy which the sentiment and practice of laymen maintain everywhere.

When one encounters a good thing in reading, a pleasurable thrill follows—I never greatly admired Queen Victoria. Possibly it was because her virtues were exploited so much: one soon gets too much of that. But years ago I read that, as a girl, Victoria was compelled to learn housekeeping, and it gave me a pleasurable thrill, for I believe, in training of that sort. Occasionally I have heard a woman say, boastingly, that she never had her hands in dishwater, and thereafter I think of her as I do of a professional actress, athlete, suffragette, or follower of the "Occult."
