The Biography of Comrade William McDonough

Written for the News by W. G. POPE

When the news of the assassination of President Lincoln flashed over the country, Comrade McDonough and his regiment were stationed at Ft. Delaware, guarding Rebel prisoners. Coming at the close of hostilities, removing the one man who might have made the reconstruction period one of growth in good will and unity, this dastardly deed seemed terrible. A cry arose that every Southern prisoner should be taken out and shot. The wisdom of cooler heads prevailed, however, and no such retaliatory measures were taken.

Upon the exchange of prisoners that they were guarding, the Zouaves were sent to Savannah, Ga., to do police duty. It was here that the regiment came into contact with negro troops. Indeed, they were supposed to drill and do guard duty with these colored soldiers. The Union troops refused to do this. They had risked their lives in battle, they had faced death in raining battery fire and charged the enemy ramparts to free these slaves, but now they refused to soldier with them. Called out for inspection the white troops would not keep rank with the colored men, but insisted on advancing or retreating four paces. Army discipline must be maintained so these troops were placed in old Fort Pulaski, under guard. Comrade McDonough recalls that the sentries however were in sympathy with these striking soldiers so that it was easy to get out of the fort and stroll about the city.

As much to save their faces as to meet any urgent need, those in command now ordered the Zouaves sent to Charleston, S. C., to do police duty there. But they fell into more serious trouble here. Within this city was stationed a negro regiment also. Word was soon brought to the Northern troops that on a certain night the freed negroes from all the countryside about Charleston were coming in a mob to the city and joining forces with the colored regiment, they planned to murder all of the Southern people. Investigation proved that such a plot had been organized.

Measures were immediately taken to prevent any such massacre. So when the mob of negroes from the neighboring pintations reached the city's fortifications they were suddenly surrounded by well armed white soldiers who stripped them of their weapons, took away their loads of watermelons and other food and throwing the fear of instant death into them, made them run for their lives.

Somewhat later in the evening the colored regiment, learning of the dispersal of their brethren, went on the war path. The Pavilion hotel was the headquarters for the Northern soldiers. The negro regiment turned their guns on this hotel and a lively time ensued. But the Northern boys had seen too much service to be greatly surprised by this turn of affairs. Fighting had been their business for several years now. So what was more natural than to return this attack and do as good a job as possible. The negro regiment was soon running full as fast as had their plantation brothers earlier in the evening.

But under investigation it was determined that the Zouaves had returned the negro fire and entered joyfully into the fight without the sanction or command of superior officers. Indeed they had been firing upon another Union regiment. Something had to be done. A council of superior officers was held and the decision reached that the Zouaves should be marched to city wharves, their colors taken from them and the whole regiment imprisoned in the demolished Fort Sumpter. Somehow the details of their punishment reached the Zouaves and they did some planning themselves. Certain it is that as they marched forth the next day and were called upon to hand over their colors, their standard-bearers stepped forth and presented bare staffs, minus flags.

"What does this mean? Where are your colors," roared the commanding officer.

Now, every regiment carries two flags, its state flag and the national flag. So in answer to this mandatory question one of the standard bearers stepped forward and saluting the officer said:

"Sir, the Zouaves know that they acted hastily in returning the colored regiment's fire. They bow in submission before a just punishment. But, sir, do you know that those colors have led us for the past three years. They went before us in the desperate charge at Port Hudson. They carried us to victory in the bloody fighting at Pleasant Hill. Those flags never wavered in the deadly assaults upon Richmond. They chased Earley up the Shenandoah Valley. Those banners led us to victory when 'Little Phil' shouted: 'Turn boys, we're going back.' And, sir, do you know that six brave men, who carried those emblems, made the supreme sacrifice? Sir, do you think that the Zouaves would surrender to foe or friend our flags, emblems of our regiment's supreme courage, patriotism and sacrifice?"

The color bearer saluted again and stepped back into line. There were tears in many men's eyes. With a bow and a sweep of his hand the commanding officer motioned the regiment toward the waiting boats. The men embarked and were carried out into Charleston Harbor and placed upon the little rocky island where stood the pounded heap that was once Fort Sumpter.

But what of the regiment's colors? Well, the visitor to our state capitol will find the flags of Duryee's Zouaves carefully preserved under glass and resting in a place of honor with other victorious and battle-scarred flags of our state.

The war is over. The prisoners are exchanged. The soldiers are mustered out of service. One of these soldiers carries a special parchment discharge for meritorious conduct, and the name it bears is William McDonough.

Out of the 975 brave men and officers who joined this Zouave regiment only 375 were mustered out that September morning in 1865. At a grand reunion in the spring of 1920 this number had dwindled to 57. The living members of that fighting regiment must today be small, indeed; likely a mere handful. Andover, then, is unique and proud of the fact.

So, at the age of 26, William McDonough, the Irish immigrant, the bound boy, the toe-path driver, the whaler, sailor, and man of adventure, the Civil War veteran, became again a railroad man. Not in South American this time but for the Lake Shore in Pennsylvania, U. S. A.

While working for this railroad William McDonough became acquainted with Miss Anna Kane, of Kane, Pa. These two young people were married in 1872. Fifty-seven years of happy wedded life on the third day of last April, another unusual incident in the life of a remarkable man and his good wife.

To this home were born eight children, five boys and three girls, seven of whom are alive today. John and Jim, like their father, answered the call of the soldiers' life. John is a veteran of the Spanish American war while Jim was for nearly three years with the Marines.

For 35 years William McDonough and his family lived on a farm in Roxville. A good soldier makes a good citizen. For three terms this man served his town as road commissioner and one term as assessor.

At the age of 75 it came to William McDonough that perhaps he had earned the right to take life a little quieter and easier. So, 16 years ago the sixth of this November, he and his wife moved into their present home on Dyke street.

TWO BOYS KILLED AS CAR HITS TRAIN

Edwin Scott and Howard Carrier of Cuba Both Dead as Result of Terrible Accident.

Deaths of two followed in the wake of the second automobile accident in two weeks at the Hinsdale crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad. Their clothing saturated with gasoline from a bursted gasoline tank on their car, caused when the machine struck a freight train at the crossing, Edwin Scott, 17, of Cuba, and Howard Carrier of the same place literally burned to death.

The accident occurred early Saturday morning when the two boys were returning from a dance in Olean.

Frost, which coated the windshield of the light touring car, is believed to have impaired the vision of Carrier who was driving, and the machine plowed into the side of the freight.

The car burst in flames, which enveloped the two young men, who lay stunned in the roadway. The train was brought to a stop and members of the crew beat out the flames. An ambulance hurried them to the Olean General hospital, where at 8:03 o'clock Saturday morning Scott succumbed to terrible body burns, burns about the head and multiple fractures of the right leg.

Carrier, who would have been blind had he lived, his eyesight having been destroyed by deep burns about the head, died at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Scott of Cuba, formerly of Andover. His father is proprietor of the St. James Hotel there. Carrier is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Carrier of Cuba.

The accident is being investigated by Pennsylvania railroad police and Olean police.

A similar accident only a week ago occurred at the same point, when occupants of a car escaped with cuts and bruises. The four claimed to reside in Bolivar, but later a check-up failed to reveal anyone residing in Bolivar coinciding with names given by members of the party.

The many friends in Andover of the Scott family, who for years lived here, are stricken with sadness at this terrible accident, and sympathize deeply with them in their sorrow.

ROHARBACHERS ARE FOUND GUILTY

Judge Hinman Will Pronounce Sentence Today. Nuisance Charge Holds In Allegany County.

It took but ten minutes for the jury in the Elwyn and Clara Bell Roharbacher cases to reach a verdict of guilty at the close of the trial on the charge of keeping a "nuisance," in county court, Wednesday afternoon.

Judge Guy O. Hinman announced that sentence would be pronounced on the paff this morning.

Of the witnesses put on the stand by District Attorney Walter N. Renwick, four were undercover men who made buys at the place at which the Roharbacher's reside, located on the Wellsville-Whitesville road. They testified as to when they had made the buys, from whom they had purchased the alleged intoxicants and concerning the condition of the premises at the time they visited the place.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Smith of Whitesville were also witnesses. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have been taking care of the dairy at the Roharbacher place, and have consequently had occasion to visit the farm each morning and each evening. They told of the many visitors at the place each night, and Smith testified that early one morning he found two men dead drunk in a car at the farm.

Interest, not only thruout this county, but in other counties in all parts of the state, centers in the case, which is considered a test of how much weight the "nuisance law" carries in the prosecution of alleged speakeasys and other drinkeries.

District Attorney Renwick based his fight on previous decisions that have been handed down by other courts, rather than on actual statute. He has advanced against the alleged nuisances cautiously, following out the rulings in the now-famed Van Dewater case, which held that places where liquors are sold continually and over a long period of time may be termed public nuisances, and prosecuted accordingly.

In the Roharbacher case, the district attorney has 13 separate alleged buys as evidence. The 13 bottles, purchased at a place operated by the defendants, were obtained over a period of time from June 22 to September 9. They contain alleged brandy, home brew, whiskey, alcohol, gin and other alleged liquors.

Pease — McCollum

A very pretty home wedding took place on Saturday afternoon, Oct. 19th, 1929, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray McCollum of Tompkins street, Olean when their only daughter, Margaret Leah, was united in marriage to Harry Gordon Pease, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Pease of Andover.

At 4 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlors and the marriage ceremony, with the ring service, was performed by Rev. C. C. Shedd of the Methodist Episcopal church of Olean.

The bride was attractively gowned in blue georgette and transparent velvet and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Eleanor Ward of Wellsville, was dressed in brown georgette and carried sunburst roses. The groom was attended by his brother, William Pease, Jr., as best man.

Following the marriage ceremony luncheon was served to about 20 guests. The bride's table seating 12, was beautifully decorated in yellow and white flowers, with place cards to match. Misses Margaret Ward and Marlee Yewdall of Wellsville served at the bride's table in a most charming manner.

Immediately after the luncheon, Mr. and Mrs. Pease left, by motor, for a week's visit in New York City, after which they will return to Andover to make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Pease are both well known and popular among a large circle of associates. The groom is an employee in the Andover sash mill and the bride a graduate of the Wellsville High School and a successful school teacher. The News joins in congratulations and best wishes.

Among the pre-nuptial events were a shower given by the Misses Eleanor and Margaret Ward of Wellsville, and a variety shower given by the girls' club of Wellsville at the home of Miss Marlee Yewdall.

Out-of-town guests were Richard McCollum, Misses Dorothea Walchi, Eleanor and Margaret Ward and Marlee Yewdall of Wellsville; Mr. and Mrs. William Pease and son, William Pease, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Rogers and daughter, Louise of Andover.

Moses Wilcox

Moses Wilcox, son of the late Charles S. and Margaret Wilcox, was born in Andover, N. Y., May 11th, 1854 and died after a lingering illness of heart disease, at the home of his brother, Edward Wilcox in Wellsville, October 18, 1929.

Deceased was one of a family of seven brothers and sisters and is survived by two brothers, Edward of Wellsville and Ardean Wilcox of Andover. A wife and son died some years ago. He was a life-long resident of Andover and a worker in oil and gas fields. Failing in health, he had been cared for at the home of his brother in Wellsville the last few years.

Funeral services were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilcox of Wellsville, Sunday, Oct. 20, conducted by Rev. W. L. Greene of Andover, burial made in the Bess Hill cemetery.

PAIR SENT TO PEN BY JUDGE HINMAN

Bertha Walcott and Walter Flemming Plead Guilty —Get Sentenced to Monroe County Penitentiary.

Belmont.—Bertha Wolcott of Centerville drew a four months' sentence in the Monroe county penitentiary and a fine of $300 when she appeared in County Judge Hinman's court Wednesday morning and pled guilty to maintaining a public nuisance as the result of selling liquor in her home in the northern tier burg.

Walter Flemming, the proprietor of a hotel at Birdsall, also appeared before Judge Hinman and after pleading guilty to a similar charge as that of Mrs. Wolcott, was meted a six months' sentence in the Monroe County Penitentiary and ordered to pay a fine of $100.

The Wolcott woman and Flemming have been in jail here since their indictment at the September term, mulling over the advisability of pleading guilty or standing trial for their alleged misdoings. They are the first of the group of 13 indicted on nuisance charges by the September grand jury to receive court action and taking their cases as a criterion, the privilege of dispensing wet goods in Allegany county will be at a premium if County Judge Hinman is to have his say.

Sheriff and Mrs. Brigham went to Rochester with their prisoners.—Dispatch.

Alfred Station Home Damaged by Fire

Alfred Station, Oct. 21.—A fire which broke out in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dunham about 7 o'clock Saturday night was the cause of considerable alarm before it was extinguished. The fire was caused by some clothing being placed too near an open gas fire in a bedroom on the second floor. Mrs. Dunham discovered the flames when she went upstairs to put the children to bed.

An alarm was immediately sent in and the chemical trucks from Alfred and Alfred Station responded promptly. Chemicals brought the fire under control after considerable damage from smoke had been done.

According to Mrs. Dunham, Fred Benaway was the first to arrive on the scene and lent some valuable assistance before the fire department arrived. The damage is estimated at $150.

Two Teams From Each Place, Hornell, Canisteo, Wellsville and Andover to Contend for Honors.

Much interest is being manifest in this vicinity at the present time in bowling. Two bowling teams have been organized in each of four places, Hornell, Canisteo, Wellsville and Andover and they have formed a bowling league. Having two teams in each place makes it possible to have a league game played in each place each week. Friday night of each week has been appointed for the league games. The first games of the season were played last Friday night, each place starting out by bowling the other from the same town.

In Andover team No. 1 is captained by Fay E. Boyd and team No. 2 by Ray McGill. The score last Friday night, playing three games of ten frames each between No. 1 and No. 2, was as follows:

Team No. 1.

OFFICERS SEARCH FOR ROSCOE AMES

Man Escapes From Genesee County Jail. Is Trailed to Belmont. Officers Hot on Trail.

Wellsville, Oct. 21.—Allegany and Genesee county authorities are conducting a search for Roscoe Ames, escaped from the Genesee county jail, where he was being held on a forgery charge, and believed by Sheriff Edson Brigham of this county to be the man who made off with a car Friday night belonging to George Fowell, who resides near Belmont on the Willet estate.

Ames was allowed his freedom from the Genesee jail for a few hours for the purpose of raking leaves in the yards about the county buildings, Friday. He took advantage of the opportunity and skipped. A few hours later a car was reported stolen at Leicester, nearby.

The Leicester automobile, a Ford coupe owned by Oscar Sattona, of that place, was found in Belmont Friday night, where Ames is believed to have abandoned it for a 1926 Essex coach belonging to Powell.

Four gallons of gas remained in the Ford and it was otherwise in running order. Authorities are unable to say why the man, believed to be Ames, changed automobiles. Sattona retrieved his car at Belmont.

Ames is no stranger to Sheriff Brigham and other Allegany authorities. He was captured following a series of car robberies about the county in 1927 and found guilty of the offense. At the time he was residing near Friendship.

Sheriff Brigham stated today that he has clues regarding Ames' whereabouts, and that he hopes to have him back in jail within a few days.

Odd Fellows' Degree Team Much Praised

The local three linkers are receiving much praise and notoriety for the perfect manner in which they confer this beautiful degree. They have been invited to many lodges to exemplify the work, both in New York State and Pennsylvania. At Painted Post guests were present from Corning and many other places to witness the degree.
