ANDOVER GIRL'S PEN GETS NEW HONORS

My work isn't finished yet by any means, however. Mr. Couch said that he very much wanted to put my book in the Fall list of publications but he wasn't sure that he could. It might have to go over another year. He assured me that I could know that they would take it whether I worked any more on it or not but that if I really wanted to get it out this autumn if I could guarantee an advance sale of 500 first edition copies I could be sure it would come out then. It is very important to me that it should come out soon while the interest is still keen for it here. I have been promising it now for three years and I want to come across with it while the old people who helped me get the material are still alive to take some pleasure in it. Rosanne Gouge is gone already and Uncle Tom Sparks and Mr. Boston.

It isn't going to be any fly-by-night book, but a standard work that I hope will take its place as the authentic story of our mountain country of the Carolinas. It will be handsomely bound and profusely illustrated with photographic studies of the country and of the people. The title is "The Story of Maryland," and it is about Little Switzerland. How Isaac English saved Col. Gere's life and started the mica business with him in the log inn by the Toe River Ford. The mineral wealth of the mountains and the opening of the emerald, beryl, feldspar and mica mines; the rise of the kaolin industry; prehistoric mines of the Toe River Valley; Heap and Clapp at Sink Hole; the fight for the Cebe Miller mine; the snake charmer hunts a silver mine (verse). Deer Park and the first game preserve in North Carolina. The boom days of the hill country before the Civil War. Conflicting loyalties; war between neighbors. The chaos of reconstruction. The beginnings of Spruce Pine. Manners and customs of yesterday and today in the mountains; relations of men and women; The Coquette; The Quiltin'. The Frankie Silvers murder. The old women of the mountains; Aunt Polly Boone, - great-granddaughter of Daniel Boone. The old men of the mountains; Uncle Zack McHone; Uncle Rube Mosley; the Italian fight at Camp Six when the railroad came to Mitchell county and Uncle Rube carried the mail; building the back line up Roan Mountain. When they ran the negroes out of Mitchell county. Mountain crafts; weaving on Conley Ridge; when the first loom went down to Wing; furniture making; Arthur Woodie; the Billy Wiseman painter's foot tables; Uncle Milt Pendley; Roby Buchanan and the gem grinding-corn mill on Crane Creek. Old songs in the hills and the survival of Elizabethan balladry; the living ballad tradition. The Toe River Fair. Story telling as a fine art in the mountains; Doc Hoppas of Brushy Creek tells of the Burnt Mountain wedding. Uncie John McNeal and the march down the Blue Ridge to Salisbury. Kinsfolks in the hills.

I have told the story of the hill country as it would appeal to an outsider, but honestly so a native will look at it and say it is true. Where an outsider would see things and wonder what the history of the custom or place was I have given it. I told the daily living of today and showed how it evolved from the past and I gave the story of the fun of the mountains, the violence, the rowdy, hard-drinking, hard-playing, hard-fighting tradition that goes to make the sturdy mountain fibre. It is the story of the old mountain men and women whose fathers fought at King's Mountain and who wore coonskin caps and carried their shoes in their hands when they went to preaching; the men who fought in Kirk's Army in the Reconstruction Chaos; women who raised their flax and gathered their dyes and wove their own cloth, spun their wool, worked barefoot in the corn rows hoeing and had a much better time doing it than is commonly believed; and of the new generation with spare money to spend on cars to run on new state roads and the temperment of the old ones unchanged underneath.

Am very anxious to have it published in the next list of publications, if possible, as it will come out then in October or November, in time for the Christmas sales.

Love,
MURIEL.

Roller Skating season is here! We fit feet of every size at any price you wish to pay, but let us remind you that the wheels and axles of a good skate will wear three times as long as those used in the cheaper grade. When you have replaced one set of these parts your expense has been greater than the cost of the better Skate.

Come in before you buy and let us show you the difference. We have been repairing roller skates for a good many years and we know the parts that require strength and qualities of endurance. Roller Skates on our rough and broken cement walks get some hard grinding, and the best are none too good.

Let us show you Skates offered at a fair price that will give you the worth of your money.

A Prophecy

"The great problem is solved! The air, as well as the earth and the ocean has been subdued by science and will become a common and convenient highway for mankind."

From the pen of Edgar Allen Poe written in 1844.

The argument seems to center around the question whether liquor is something to drink, or just something to sell.

Ceramics

Is recognized by educators and the general public as an important segment of industrial art, and the objects created by its application add much to the physical and cultural daily life of all peoples.

Its artistry may be traced to a remote antiquity; much that we have learned concerning peoples of prehistoric times are the records they wrought into their clay tablets and pottery utensils.

We are showing a new line of very colorful and artistic stone ware —flower jars, vases, jardineres, cookie pots, bird baths and other articles devoted to service and decoration. The assortment is interesting and with the low prices we believe worthy your attention.

Bird baths are quite the vogue, no pretentious lawn or garden is complete without one. They dress up your place and provide both children and adults with a continuous performance by the most skillful actors nature has given us—BIRDS.

For Sale

A 1930 Hudson Sedan with luggage carrier and trunk; in perfect running order and fine mechanical condition, splendid value at the price we offer, and you may pay by the month without extra finance charge.

"Consider the Prince Chan"

He so governed his province that upon his death not a scholar remembered the ideograph for the word "Injustice," because it had neither been spoken or written for the span of a long life.

Kelland, in "The Cat's Paw."

Good Seeding

Is impossible without quality seed —read your farm papers, their advice on seeds and seeding is excellent. They stress the very point we have declared for many years, seed low in quality is not cheap at any price while highest grades are a good investment no matter what the cost.

As to the quality of seeds we offer you, they are best grown and are adapted to this climate; as to price, we are very sure if you pay less you sacrifice one or possibly both these qualities.
